THE SILKWORM.—There is at last some hope that the silkworm may be restored to its natural and healthy condition. Certain experiments instituted by Captain Hutton, of the invalid establishment, afford just grounds for the belief, not only that the decadence of which all silk growers complain may be arrested, but that the insect may be brought back to its original state, from which it had already degenerated prior to its first introduction into Europe. It is, of course, premature to indicate the results thus far obtained by Captain Hutton, or the steps that led to them, but there is little doubt of his ultimate and brilliant success.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA has called upon the Principal Inspector General of the Medical Department for a statistical report of the cantonment at Dum Dum for the last four years, probably with a view to ascertain the healthiness of that military station.

AMONGST the various rumours and speculations now rife, regarding the great changes contemplated by Government, or rather by Sir Charles Trevelyan, as likely to take place in September next, there is an on dit that the Land Revenue Branch of the Office of the Deputy Auditor and Accountant General of Bengal is to be abolished, and that the Revenue accounts are to be compiled in future by the Board of Revenue.

RIOT AT HOOGHLY.—A native correspondent informs us that a very disgraceful riot took place in the town of Hooghly, on the evening of the 13th of July. A Hindoo marriage procession, it seems, was traversing the streets with tom-toms beating, and the other noisy demonstrations of joy usual on such occasions. Suddenly, and without any previous warning, just as it was passing the gate of the Enambarrah,—permission to do so having been obtained from the Magistrate and the Superintendent of Police—it was greeted with a volley of missiles, by which several persons were struck, and more or less injured. As soon as the bridegroom's friends had recovered from the confusion into which they were momentarily thrown by this unexpected attack, they discovered the Matwali and a strong party of his co-religionists posted behind the outer walls of the building, and prepared to renew the assault. The police, however, broke open a back-door and rushed in, and arrested three of the rioters. A preliminary inquiry into the facts of the case has been held at the magistrate's office, and a summons issued for the apprehension of the Matwali. On the day after the marriage, the procession swept past the Enambarrah in triumph, "the police authorities being ordered to unsheath their swords if they deemed it necessary." Fortunately, no occasion occurred for any such desperate exhibition of valour, and the nuptial party vociferated their Io Hymenee! without let or hindrance.

THE NANA.—"So the Nana Sahib has been caught at last," was the general remark some time last year, if I remember aright. The same cry is in every European's mouth, but strange to say, the native population, who generally forestall us in the "intelligence department," are profoundly silent on the subject; and this remarkable fact, in my opinion, is very much in favour of the prisoner at Ajmere being the "real Simon Pure." The man is evidently a person of some importance, well received, and well attended, and I do not see why he should not be "Nana Rao,"—seeing that, unless Nana Rao be dead, which nobody believes, he is just as liable to be captured as any other outlaw who ventures into British territory. At any rate one thing is certain; as long as "Nana Rao" and such people are at large, so long will there be sedition and treason abroad; so the sooner the question of identity is settled the better, and then let the law take its course. It is now six years since the atrocities of Cawnpore were enacted, and the prime mover of that fearful time is still known to be alive and at large; why, then, should this not be he? and why are people in authority so reluctant to believe that it is not? Had but Lord Dalhousie lived till now, and still held sway over India, neither "Nana Rao" nor "Ferozeshah" would be able to "laugh at our beards," as they do. And, by the way, these recent rumours of disturbances at Delhi, of a disturbance at Indore, and at Ajmere,—have they nothing to do with the presence of the prisoner? Everybody in Delhi knows to what extent rumours have, within the last two months been promulgated, although only hinted at by me; and is it to be for a moment supposed that they who spread the rumours do not know whence they emanate, and why? Verily the British lion sleepeth very sound, and dreams not of danger until it ruffles the hairs of his main.—Correspondent of the Englishman.

We (Englishman) understand that the house, No. 5, Old Post office-street, formerly occupied by Sir James Colville, Knt., and latterly by Messrs. Allen Judge and Bonnerjee, attorneys-at-law, has been sold to Government for Rs. 75,000 on account of the High Court. This makes the third house surrounding the Old Supreme Court, in connection with the High Court, purchased by Government.

ELEPHANT SHOOTING.

This truly magnificent and majestic animal, who has for some years past paid his annual Monsoon visit to the hills, and (the sought of many suitors amongst our sportsmen) raised "The hopes and fears That he breathed in the ears Of those who had sought his head."

has at length fallen into the hands of Captain G. F. Blair, of the Royal Artillery, a gentleman who has studied the art of elephant-tracking to some purpose in the dense jungles of Burmah. This animal measures ten feet nine inches at the shoulder, and between eleven and twelve feet on the back. His tusks are six feet and two inches long—four feet outside the jaw and two feet and two inches within; the circumference where they issue from the jaw being eighteen inches, and considerably more within it. The habit of feeding during the day had more than once brought his pursuers upon him, and he appears to have, in consequence, taken to feeding at night, and sleeping in the day time, thus rendering himself an easier prey on the present occasion. We have been favoured with a perusal of the above-mentioned gentleman's journal, and give such extracts therefrom as we think may prove interesting to our sportsmen readers:—

"Thursday, June 11, 1863.—We went after the elephant, found rather fresh tracks not far from the bungalow; but at last got a fresh trail about seven or eight miles from the bungalow in the Bowonie direction, i. e. near 'Singmund,' and followed it up for some time, (about two miles) till we came plump upon a lordly tusker sound asleep. Ramasawmy and Moosiah were just in front of me, and the former at once cleared the road, but the latter kept on craning and peering about, and I had to give him three or four sharp digs in the ribs to get him out of the light. I first thought the beast was lying tail towards me, but on going within ten yards of him and looking closely, I made out all his body, except the head, which was thrown up to my left amongst some thick underwood; but leaning out to the right over the slope of the hill-side, I was delighted to catch sight of a tusk, though I could not even yet see his head properly for a shot. Fortunately at this point a tree grew over the hill-side to the right; I climbed into a fork of this, but still could not see his head for a shot. I then selected a fork further out, and I handed down my gun to H., who was at the foot of the tree, while I climbed out to the fork. I had just received the gun (a Westley Richards, smooth bore, No. 12) back, and was making for the fork, when the elephant began to move his legs, and then lifted up his head out of its place in the thick brushwood. I had no time to reach the fork, but had to stand upright on the branch and go at him. As soon as I saw his head clearly, I gave him the right barrel in the hollow over the eye, and he subsided as if he had gone to sleep again. I had intended to get myself well into the fork, and wait for H. to come up, when we might both fire together; but the beast's movements forced me into action at once. I had my second barrel in reserve, in case he moved again, which he did not; but, as all the shikarries, coolies, &c., began to yell, 'Moro sahib, phir-moro,' I put the left barrel into the same place. Meanwhile H. had come up and fired two or three shots into his eye, and put two steel pointed balls from M.'s rifle into the same spot, when our followers were satisfied to go up to him. The first shot I fired gave me no perceptible shock, but the second nearly sent me backwards off the branch, which was not a very satisfactory place to shoot from!

"Friday, 12th.—We found that neither vulture nor jackall had yet touched the carcass, but fresh tracks of an elephant were there, and to our utter astonishment we found that another tusker (probably a son or grandson of the old gentleman) had been down trying to rouse his departed comrade, and in so doing had gored him considerably in several places."

The above extract gives a strange example of the well known fact of the aid these animals afford their wounded comrades, and the fact, that of the five bullets fired into this animal's eye, not one had penetrated more than six inches, shows the utter uselessness of firing (as a rule) at an elephant's eye.

This sport on the Hills, this year, has been unusually good, and it is but a short time ago that Sir Victor Brooke, who is one of our best and keenest sportsmen, killed a tiger above eleven feet long, and a fine specimen of that beast, the black panther.—Madras Athenæum.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NIZAM'S TROOPS.—Besides the subsidiary force and the contingent, the Nizam has about twenty regiments in and about the city, for the most part very indiscriminately officered. Some of them are caricatures of infantry corps, as they are ill accoutred and badly disciplined. One of these regiments, or a wing of one, it seems is commanded by a Lusitanian gentleman, named Cordoza. He had occasion to dismiss a subadar for some fault. The rest of the native officers becoming alarmed at this summary proceeding on the part of their commandant, conspired to despatch him. One of the conspirators, however, thought better over the matter and betrayed the rest, who are now in custody at the Kotwalee, awaiting their trial, whether by court-martial or otherwise remains to be seen.

THE RANGOON PRINCE.—We learn from a late Rangoon paper that the missing Prince of Thongzai has again turned up, after baffling all attempts of his pursuers to discover his whereabouts. He was supposed to have gone to the Shan States, but it is now certain that he has never been away from Rangoon. The Prince was to have been sent back to the Imperial City of Mandalay, under the guardianship of Bishop Bigandet, but to this arrangement he most strongly objected, and appealed to the Commissioner to interpose on his behalf. All sorts of promises were made to the Prince, guaranteeing his personal safety if he returned, but without avail. He is said to have asked those who counselled him to do so, "Did you ever hear of a descendant of Burman Royalty escaping from the capital without paying the forfeit of his life when caught?" Finding that all endeavours to persuade the Prince to yield were unavailing, the steamer was despatched without him, and he remains under British protection at Rangoon.—Delhi Gazette.

BOMBAY.

JAMES REILY.

The public and ourselves owe our contempo-rary, the Sindian, sincere thanks for the following timely and admirable remarks on the case of James Reily. That case is now in a position which imperatively calls for public explanation:—

"WHICH REILY IS IT?—Some time ago we had occasion to refer to the case of a man named James Reily, which our Bombay and Poona contemporaries had brought prominently to public notice. It will be remembered that he was brought from the Cape, and handed over by the captain of the ship he sailed in to the military authorities at Bombay as a deserter from H.M.'s 8th Regiment. From Bombay he was passed on to the 103rd in Poona, and by an order from the Commander-in-Chief it was decided he should serve in that corps. Reily maintained stoutly he was not, and never had been, a soldier; and was tried for disobedience of orders twice, and on both occasions called upon the prosecutor to produce his attestation or record of services. The only docu-mentary evidence brought forward was the order attaching him to the 103rd; no witnesses even were forthcoming to identify him as a deserter from any regiment in her Majesty's service. The prisoner was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for a period of several months. The Poona Observer got wind of the case, and stood up manfully for the poor fellow, and soon the press all over India joined our contem-porary in demanding that his protégé should be treated with justice. The 103rd removed to Colaba, and there Reily was liberated, but he was no sooner free than he repaired to the attorney for paupers to make his case known. For this he was put in the guard-room, and we had heard no more of him, until a friend mentioned to us the other day that the same man had been tried by General Court martial, and was to be dismissed the service with ignominy. We looked over our Poona and Bombay files, but could find no record in their military columns of any court-martial of the kind, and were beginning to think that our informant was labouring under a mistake, when he kindly brought us an extract from the proceedings taken from the General Orders which it is customary to address from head-quarters to departments and regiments. The substance of the affair is as follows:—No. 3,253, Private James Reily, of H.M.'s 103rd Foot, was tried by General Court-martial at Bombay, on the 16th of May, 1863, for grossly insubordinate and mutinous conduct in having said to his commanding officer at orderly-room, 'I will not salute you as you are not my com-manding officer,' or words to that effect. He was found guilty, sentenced to receive fifty lashes, to undergo the process of degradation required by 'H.M.'s Regulations,' page 187, paragraph 26, and be afterwards marched off as a felon under charge of an escort, and handed over to the civil power by the brigadier commanding the Bombay garrison. Sir William Mansfield remitted the corporal punish-ment, and probably Reily is undergoing some im-prisonment, although we see nothing about it in the extract before us, and when his term shall have expired he will be drummed out of the barrack-square at Colaba, and turned loose upon the world as a felon; unless, indeed, he has been put unceremo-niously on board another ship, and deported to some other land, so that the authorities may effec-tually get rid of his troublesome presence.

"It is very strange that the proceedings of this court-martial were not published according to usage. It has evidently been the desire somewhere to keep them from the press, and, to say the truth, the manner in which the newspapers handled the case some months since tended to make the military authorities cautious how this last act of the judicial drama got bruited abroad. We are glad, therefore, we have defeated this object. Regimental authori-ties of the 103rd have failed to prove Reily a soldier; and it is another unheard of incident in the annals of the service to brand a man who claims his free-dom as a common felon. We would hope there are two Reily's in H.M.'s 103rd, but the circumstances of the case leave us no room to think it is so. But perhaps our contemporaries, who are on the spot, will inquire into the matter, and ascertain which Reily was tried on the 16th of May."

We are in a position to assure our contemporary that the man drummed out of the regiment is the same man who claimed to be a civilian, not a soldier when tried by court-martial. He is sen-tenced to two years' penal servitude, and after-wards to be dismissed the service. We imagine a good many soldiers would be very glad to change places with him.

This case calls imperatively for public explana-tion, and we will just recapitulate its main features:—"The commanding officer of the 103rd and other military authorities are accused of nothing less than having kidnapped a civilian, apparently to serve the private interests of some person who wanted him away, and kept him by force under military restraint, for a period of time, and at last sent him into penal servitude for two years, to get rid of him; for at the end of that time he is to be restored to civil life. This charge was brought against them in the most public manner, in the proceedings of two separate courts martial, published in the columns of a newspaper. The man persists in his story, which derives support from the suspicious manner in which a pretended explanation published by Go-vernment was drawn up apparently with a design to unsteady the public by mixing up the case with that of another man named Page, who had nothing to do with it. It is further stated that the commanding officer sent for Reily on one occasion, and intimated to him that if he would only keep quiet and do his duty as a soldier, for a time, he might shortly get his discharge. This does not look as if he was really believed to be a deserter. It looks rather as if the object for which he was apprehended, whatever it was, was one which a short detention would secure, after which he might go about his business. He is tried, not for desertion, but for insubordinate con-duct. Lastly, it is reported now that this man's papers have been received, and that they show him to be a man of bad character—which, if true, is nothing to the purpose. But whether or not they prove him to be a soldier, which is the ques-tion at issue, the public are kept profoundly ignorant. It may be that the Government pos-sesses the power to explain these things; but we can only say, if they do they are very wrong not to make the explanation public. It will be an in-justice to an officer who has otherwise borne a high character to allow Major Trower to leave the country under the very serious charge which we have been compelled to bring against him.—Poona Observer, July 7.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MOHURRUM.—POONA, June 28.—To-day is the last day of the Mohurram. Last night the entire population of the city and bazaars of Poona turned out to witness the procession of the "taboots," or representation of the tomb of Hassan, which are carried round the streets. Returned to their places they wait until to-day, and are then carried in the same manner to the river and thrown into the water—thus represent-ing the burial of Hassan and Husain. Before 1857 there used to be frequent fights between the people of the city and those of the bazaar on these occasions, the two processions, I suppose, interfering with one another; but since that date, when peace was very desirable, they have been kept separate, the lines of route being laid down by the police, and the respective taboots of the two communities are drowned at different points on the river—those of the camp at the Sir Jam-setjee Bund, and those of the city at the Sungum, two miles further up. But although actual colli-sion is prevented, the grudge between the two nations, which reminds one of the wars between the peoples of Athens and Corinth, or the Romans and Sabines of ancient European history, still continues. Our camp bazaars are now almost old. The spot was first turned into a canton-ment, I believe, after our occupation of the country, in 1818, and was then named "Garpeer," after a Mussulman tomb of a supposed holy man. The Sudder bazaar must have been built shortly after; the houses are getting old, and the banian trees which shade them are of respectable size. It was here I witnessed the procession of the taboots last night, and a very pretty sight it was. The red glare of the torches falling on the crowd con-trasted with the brilliant blue lights, and the squibs lighted up the huge erections of paper and tinsel in a most effective manner. One of these is said to have cost Rs. 300, which came out of the pockets of the Sirkar! It was about twenty-five feet high, as gorgeous as colour and gold leaf could make it; and I know not what tradition may exist about the form of it, but it imitated a pretty and not incorrect specimen of Moorish or Byzantine building. There was another nearly as large, contributed by the butchers, and some smaller ones. Those carried in the city are said to be finer still, and were carried rather later in the night, in order that people might have the satisfaction of both; but as the general style of both was probably pretty much the same, I had not enthusiasm enough to prolong my walk so far. People of all castes take part in this festival, with a charming absence of any religious bigotry. Al-though this place was long a stronghold of Brahminism, and indeed is still, the Mohurram is the principal festival here, as the Dewalee is in Bombay; but crowds of Hindoos flock every Thursday evening, when the bund is passable, to pay their devotions at the tomb of a Mahometan saint the other side of the river. This holy man is reported to have been insane during his life; on which account probably his place of sepulchre is held in still greater respect.—Delhi Gazette.

THE MAHARAJAH SCINDIA.—Either the Gwalior Maharajah, who has had such an abun-dance of benefits heaped upon him by the British Government since the mutinies, in token of gratitude for his somewhat equivocal adhesion to their interests is greatly and persistently belied by writers in the North West, or else he needs to be closely looked after, as a wolf in sheep's cloth-ing. Ugly rumours regarding him are constantly becoming current. Here is one of the latest, supplied to the Times of India, by a Cawnpore correspondent:—"It is remarked by everyone that Scindia, during his late visit here, took great pains to feed the Brahmins of Bithoor, and impress them with his sympathy for the misfor-tunes of the Bithoor family, the Nana and the rest. He spent 80,000 rupees in alms, and visited and did homage in all the Hindoo temples at Bithoor, where he remained for several days. The Natives, more than ourselves, look upon all this as very ominous, and no doubt admire, at the same time, our simplicity and toleration."

KHODADAD KHAN.—Our Paper, a Kurrachee journal, reports that Khodadad Khan, the ex-Khan of Khelut, in attempting to take that city by storm, had been repulsed with the loss of the whole of his guns. The principal chiefs have offered to pay him a pension of one thousand rupees per month, provided he will at once leave the country. If, adds our contemporary, "Kho-dadad Khan be wise, he will accept this offer—one made, most likely, out of respect for the memory of his father, who appears to have been a very able and gallant man. For it is difficult to imagine that there could be any loyalty or affection for Khodadad Khan, personally, when we call to recollection the occasion on which, having invited the chiefs to a friendly personal conference, he opened all his masked guns upon them, and besides wounding, killed 14 on the spot."

THE CAPTURE OF THE NANA.—We (Bombay Saturday Review) have to express our regret for an error into which we fell last week in ascribing the merit of the capture of Nana Sahib to Captain Nuttall. According to some papers which have been shown us, it appears that, although the men who gave information and tracked the Nana to Ajmere where formerly Captain Nuttall's men, it was Mr. Forjett who set them on the chase, and to him belongs the honour of the exploit. Mr. Forjett, with much delicacy of feeling, waited for three months after he first heard the men's story, before himself taking action in the matter, because, the informers being then in the service of Capt. Nuttall, that officer might have a right to complain if he had not been allowed the opportunity (which when presented to him he neglected) of effecting the capture. Mr. Forjett is, we understand, firmly convinced that the man taken at Ajmere is the veritable Nana.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, July 11.—Nankin has been attacked by a considerable Imperialist force, and some important outworks taken; a few Englishmen, who were trafficking in the creeks in lorehas, illegally, of course, were killed or wounded by the Imperialist troops. Some of them found refuge in Chinkiang, a place fifty miles eastward of the Taeping capital. An English vessel was fired on from Nankin, and the gunboat Hardy has gone to see into the matter. Major Gordon's last operation was not so sanguinary as that previous, and it is likely his next will be still less so; while the wholesale desertions from the rebel army seem to offer an easy mode of eventually dissipating the entire body. Desertions took place at Nankin, and Gordon states that both he and the Tartar general are accustomed to recruit from the ranks of the enemy. At Ningpo much dissatisfaction has been caused by an Englishman having been shot by the French authorities. He was charged with selling firearms to the rebels, and tried by a court-martial, consisting of four English officers and a French colonel. Smith, as the man was named, was forwarded to Shao-shing, which is held by the Franco-Chinese contingent, if we mistake not, and there he was taken out at night and shot.—Overland China Mail.

JAPAN.

The Overland China Mail supplies intelligence from Japan to the 27th June.

From Japan the news of the fortnight has been exciting. We stated in our last issue that the indemnity demanded from the Japanese officers by Colonel Neale, in the name of the British Government, and amounting to £110,000, was ready to be paid. It had been agreed to take the money at short specified intervals, the first instalment to be paid on May 18. That day passed without any reference being made to the matter, but on a day afterwards the Japanese Ministers attempted to re-open negotiations without the payment of any money. Her Majesty's charge d'affaires very properly considered this as a breach of faith, which prevented him from having any further dealings with the native envoys, and he accordingly placed the business in Admiral Kuper's hands, after having duly notified the circumstances to the foreign communities at Yokohama and Nagasaki. The admiral also notified his intention to commence hostilities in eight days, and advised those among the foreign residents who had wives and families to have them removed, if they intended themselves to abide the issue of events. Admiral Jauze proffered his co-operation, and undertook to defend the foreign settlement. Preparations began in earnest, and continued until the night of the 23-24th ult., when about midnight the Japanese officers, not having access to Colonel Neale, went to the French Minister's quarters and sought an interview; this being granted, they informed him that they were ready to pay the money as agreed upon. He accordingly communicated the information to her Majesty's charge d'affaires, who replied that as the Japanese had suffered matters to go so far the whole sum must now be paid at once, in 440,000 Mexican dollars, to be delivered at seven in the morning. By last advice the money was being paid into her Majesty's Legation. At the same time the Japanese Ministers informed the different representatives of foreign Powers that the Tycoon, then at Miako, had instructed them to obey the Mikado's orders to expel foreigners and close the ports. The Tycoon's officers expressed themselves willing to enter into negotiations upon that subject. The various foreign Ministers declined to discuss any such matter, but promised to convey the communications then made to their respective Governments. The Japanese also requested that foreigners would hold their settlements by their own military forces—a proposal evidently intended to shut them up effectually within certain limits, and contract to the narrowest point their intercourse with Japan. There still remains an important portion of the reparation unsatisfied, and one which the Tycoon's Government have stated to be impossible for them to fulfil, viz., the trial and capital punishment of Mr. Richardson's murderers, who are closely connected with Prince Satsuma, and the payment of £25,000 to the relatives of the murdered man and to those who suffered by the outrage. The British Minister has accepted the Tycoon's plea of inability to coerce Satsuma, and has intimated his intention of taking that duty upon himself; the Tycoon's Government have therefore been advised to warn the prince against the consequences of a failure to yield up the murderers and pay the damages demanded. In the event of this not being done, the admiral will proceed to some part of Satsuma's dominions, and commence such measures of hostility as to him shall seem best. Prince Satsuma has a castle at Kagosima, near Cape Chikakoff, and this the admiral may determine to attack, or he may mean to proceed to the Loo Choo Islands and attach the revenues there which belong to the prince. It appears, therefore, that while the Government officials have purchased immunity for themselves, a powerful foe yet remains in the field, whom it will be urgently necessary to bring to terms.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for 30,00,000 rupees (£300,000) in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 19th inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were:—To Calcutta, 16,80,000 rupees; to Bombay, 12,00,000 rupees; to Madras, 2,00,000 rupees. The declared minimum price was as before, 1s. 11½d. per rupee on Calcutta, and 1s. 11½d. on Bombay and Madras. The applications within the limits amounted to 254 lakhs. Tenders on Calcutta above the minimum will receive in full (to those at the minimum there will be no allotment); on Bombay, at minimum about 16 per cent., and on Madras about 80 per cent., will be allotted.

THE LATE LORD CLYDE.

The following general order has been issued from the Horse Guards:—

"Horse Guards, S.W., 22nd August, 1863.

"His Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has received Her Majesty's commands to express to the army her grief at the lamented death of Field-Marshal Lord Clyde.

"The great military services performed by Lord Clyde in different parts of the world, the success with which, in most trying circumstances, he restored peace to Her Majesty's Indian Empire, and the personal regard which Her Majesty and her beloved Consort entertained for his high and honourable character, make Her Majesty deeply deplore the loss which the Queen, in common with Her Majesty's subjects, has sustained.

"By command of His Royal Highness, the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief,

"A. H. HORSFORD,
"Deputy Adjutant-general."

LEAVE TO UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS.

Financial Dept., July 16.—No. 3,200.—Read a letter from the officg. civil paymaster, Fort William, No. 14, dated July 6, inquiring, with reference to the new rules for leave of absence to uncovenanted servants, whether a dep. mag. who has been absent twice on sick leave for short periods, amounting in the aggregate to 6 mos. and 8 days, is to be denied further leave, or to be allowed leave without pay on the third occasion of his applying for med. leave for 3 mos. on the ground that, by the new rules, sick leave for 3 years has to be taken in neither more nor less than two periods.

Resolution.—The Hon. the President in Council observes that, under the strict letter of the rules for leave of absence to uncovenanted officers recently promulgated, an uncovenanted officer may be allowed leave of absence, on m. c., for a third period, but without any allowances. But his Honour in Council, having no doubt that the limitation of sick leave to two periods without allowances was intended by the Secretary of State to apply only to cases of leave of absence to England, or to places beyond Indian limits, is pleased accordingly to rule that leave of absence, on medical certificate, taken for short periods by uncovenanted officers within Indian limits shall not bar a further leave of absence either in India or elsewhere, provided that the whole of the periods of absence shall not exceed three years during their entire service under Government. The allowances to be given during such medical leaves shall be regulated by the existing rules for sick leave—that is to say, half salary not exceeding £600 a-year shall be given during the first fifteen months taken from time to time, and after the completion of fifteen months one fourth of salary not exceeding £300 per annum for all other periods up to the limit of three years.

Military Dept., Simla, July 8.—No. 97a.—Appointments:—

Punjab Irreg. Force, Corps of Guides.—Lieut. W. J. Forlong, do. du. officer and offic. adjt., to be adjt., v. Lieut. Bond.

The payment of this prize will be carried out in all respects under the rules applied in the distribution of the Delhi prize, vide G. O. No. 1,154, dated Dec. 17, 1861.

Home Dept., July 21.—No. 4,517.—Notification.—Mr. J. Vans Agnew, of the C.S., who obtained 3 years' furl. to Europe, under date March 17, availed himself of it on 23rd idem.

STAFF QUALIFICATIONS.

Foreign Dept., Simla, July 14.—No. 468.—Read papers relative to the framing of a code of rules to test the qualification for employment under the foreign department of officers admitted to the staff corps on probation.

Read the G.O. in the military department, No. 332, dated April 10, 1861, respecting the formation of a staff corps.

H. E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. observes that the appointments under the foreign office, to which officers admitted into the staff corps are eligible, fall under two departments,—the civil and the political. Each department possesses its own special tests for regulating promotion and advancement within it which it is not necessary to supersede. The object of the rules now framed is to determine whether the qualification of the officer for employment in the department to which he is posted, as ascertained by the examinations to be held, afford a sufficient guarantee of successful employment therein, and so to settle his claims for permanent appointment to the staff corps.

As, under this view, the examinations will be necessarily preliminary, it is obvious that on some points the requirements of each department of staff employ will form a common ground to which one rule will apply. These points would be the period of probation, the time during probation when the candidates may be expected to come up for examination, the mode of conducting examinations, the constitution of the examination committees, and generally the standard of examination: while the differences would almost wholly be in the nature of the subjects of examination with which each department may be concerned.

Resolution.—In accordance with the above considerations, and after a careful comparison of the opinions of the several officers to whom reference was made on the subject, H. E. the Viceroy and Governor-general is pleased to issue the following rules for the employment of officers under the foreign department:—

GENERAL RULES.

I. The period of two years is fixed as the limit within which officers admitted to the staff corps on probation, and entertained in either the civil or political department under this office, are required to qualify themselves to undergo the examinations hereinafter mentioned, in passing which examinations officers will have a claim to have their services retained, and, under the orders of the military department, to be permanently appointed to the corps.

II. Candidates will be admitted to examination at the end of their first year of civil or political employ, and thereafter at intervals of six months. Considering the long period allowed for qualifying in the civil and political departments, a high standard of attainment will be required.

III. As in the case of the local civil examinations, the questions will be issued by a central committee in each local government, administration, or agency. The examinations will be held at such stations as may be considered most convenient, and will be conducted by local committees consisting of three or more officers of standing and experience, who will transmit the answers with their opinion to the central committee, whose decision will be final.

IV. The qualification tests in the examinations of both departments will have reference to two branches (A) languages, (B) general and special subjects hereinafter specified.

RULES FOR CIVIL DEPARTMENT.

(A.) Languages.

V. As under paragraph 80 of the G.O. in the military department, No. 332, dated April 10, 1861, officers must have passed the P. H. examination before admission to the staff corps on probation, candidates will be required before being confirmed in the staff corps to pass the high proficiency test in the vernacular language, used in the courts of the province to which they may respectively be attached. If the language of record in the courts of the province be the Hindoostanee, then, besides passing the high proficiency test in Hindoostanee, candidates will be required to pass an ordinary examination in one of the dialects spoken in the province which may not be the language of the courts, e.g., in the Punjab, Punjabi or Pushtoo; in the Central Provinces, Maharratta, and so on.

(B.) General and Special Subjects.

VI. Candidates will be required to show a general knowledge of Indian History; Political Economy and Jurisprudence. It will be optional with them to choose any works on these subjects in which they may prefer to be examined, but the titles of such works must be communicated to the central committee three months previous to the date of examination.

VII. Candidates will be required to show a special knowledge of the Penal Code, the Criminal Procedure Code, and the Civil Procedure Code, as well as a familiar acquaintance with revenue details, as contained in the directions to revenue and settlement officers, and the special revenue rules in force in the province in which they may be employed.

RULES FOR POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

(A.) Languages.

VIII. Officers having already passed the P. H. examination before admission to the staff corps, on probation, will be required before being confirmed to pass the high proficiency test in Persian or Arabic and also in Maharratta or Hindoostanee.

(B.) General and Special Subjects.

IX. Candidates will be examined in the general history of India, the treaties and engagements of the British Government with Native States, as set forth in the volumes ("A Collection of Treaties, Engagements, and Sanads relating to India and neighbouring Countries.") now in course of publication by this office. A special knowledge of the history of the part of the country in which the candidates may respectively be employed will also be required.

X. Candidates will further be required to show a thorough acquaintance with the Penal Code, the Criminal Procedure Code, and the Civil Procedure Code; and also a fair knowledge of international law and the conflict of laws. They may choose for themselves the works on the general history of India, international law, and the conflict of laws in which they may wish to be examined; but as contained in any standard works which in each case may be selected, the titles of such works must be communicated to the Central Committee three months previous to the date of examination.

Official Papers.

NATIVE ADDRESS TO SIR CHARLES WOOD. No. 4,452.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Sir,—I am directed by the Hon. the President in Council to transmit to you the accompanying letter which has been addressed to you by the Secretary of State for India in acknowledgment of the Address forwarded to him by the British Indian Association in April last.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant, J. W. S. WYLLIE, Under-Secretary to the Government of India.

India Office, June 10, 1863.

TO RAJAH RADHAKANT BAHADOR.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the Address from the native inhabitants of Bengal assembled in public meeting at Calcutta at which you presided, and which has been transmitted to me by the Government of India.

It is with no ordinary feelings of pride and satisfaction that I have received this proof of the manner in which the conduct of her Majesty's Government in the administration of India is appreciated by so large and intelligent a body of the inhabitants of Bengal.

They may be assured that it is the anxious desire of her Majesty's Government, in obedience to the declared and well-known wishes of her Most Gracious Majesty, that the affairs of her Indian empires should be so administered as may be most conducive to the welfare and best interests of all classes of the people of that country.

I entertain also the strongest conviction that whatever tends to improve the condition of the people of India must also be productive of essential advantage to their fellow-subjects in the United Kingdom, and that the bond of union between both parts of the Empire will be drawn closer by the sense of mutual benefit.

No exertion shall be spared on the part of her Majesty's Government, or on that of the Secretary of State and Council of India, to promote this most desirable object, and to foster that general improvement which is happily now so visible in all parts of that great country; and I fervently hope that by the blessing of Divine Providence the contentment and happiness of its population may be permanently ensured.

I must request you to be good enough to communicate the expression of my grateful thanks to the gentlemen who have signed the address.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient, faithful servant (Signed) CHARLES WOOD.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE LATE LORD CLYDE.

WE said in our last that Lord Clyde was "to be buried in the Kensal-green Cemetery, though if the wishes of the nation had been consulted he would have been laid in Westminster Abbey, by the side of a true soldier, like himself brave, modest, and gentle-natured—Sir James Outram." The grave had, indeed, been prepared in Kensal-green for the hero who had so materially helped to save India to the British Crown; but on second and better thoughts it was resolved to do a gentle violence to the last wishes of the modest old soldier, and let his remains mingle with the glorious dust of some of the noblest and most memorable of British worthies, in the grand old Abbey at Westminster, which is not merely a burial-place, but a sort of Temple of Fame. The most self-deprecating men who have done a service to their country or mankind have often while living had honours thrust upon them in direct opposition to their own desires. It was the case with Lord Clyde himself. He did not desire a noble title, and if he had not feared to offend his Queen he would have declined a peerage. His origin was humble, he felt himself to be but one of the people, and was quite unconscious of having done more for his country than hundreds of other men who must live and die as "Commoners." The Government estimated his deserts very differently, and while he thought so humbly of his own merit, and blushed to find it fame, deemed themselves justified in pouring honours upon him while living, and according him a resting-place amongst the most illustrious of the land when he was no longer able to enter a modest protest against further honours or to accord a reluctant consent to the wishes of his admirers. He now lies by the side of his old friend and companion, Sir James Outram, and on the very spot where he stood a few months ago to see the Bayard of India placed so reverently and mournfully in his glorious grave.

The remains of Lord Clyde were removed from his late residence in Berkeley-square on Saturday last, and though in compliance with his wishes the funeral was not a pompous one, it was singularly solemn, and reverential, and demonstrative; for the procession included not only a long line of men of rank and station and celebrity, but crowds of his humbler brethren in arms, and of undistinguished civilians, who felt a melancholy satisfaction in paying a last tribute of personal respect to the hero to whom England owes—

"A debt immense of endless gratitude."

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

A SOMEWHAT disparaging article on Indian Railways has lately appeared in the columns of the Economist (August 15), whose remarks on all commercial and economical questions are entitled to such respect as to make it worth while to inquire whether there are good grounds for the opinions which he has expressed in this instance. The object of the Economist appears to be to warn the public against attaching an undue value to these undertakings. He raises doubts, especially on the possibility of working and maintaining them at a reasonable cost, and seems to consider that the tendency of Mr. Danvers's reports has been to raise the expectation of shareholders and the public too high. While taking a different view from that of our contemporary on the subject, we do not wish it to be supposed that we go to the other extreme. While we are sanguine as to the ultimate success of Indian Railways as commercial undertakings, we are not blind to the difficulties they have to contend against. It must necessarily be a work of time to develop them fully, but, if they receive fair play, we believe that, with the majority of them, a satisfactory issue is not very far distant. By success, we mean a rate of profit at least equal to the guaranteed interest; by fair play, we mean all those facilities and helps for creating and carrying on the traffic, and that free action in conducting their affairs which European Railways possess. Looking to the vast population, the unlimited, and hitherto undeveloped, resources of the country and to its large and extending trade, we cannot but think that the traffic on the lines will be immense, and that good management will only be required to produce a considerable revenue. We do not, however, believe that the merits of the respective undertakings have had much to do with the present value of their stock in the market. It is the 5 per cent. Government guarantee which has raised the shares to their present premium, and not any expectation as to what this or that line will earn. Else, why does the stock of the Scinde Railway, which the Economist states to be working at a loss (but which is shown to be really earning a dividend), bear the same value as the East Indian, which is admitted by the same authority to be capable of producing "considerable profits?" A secured interest of 5 per cent. per annum is all that ninety shareholders out of a hundred look for. If doubts are intended to be thrown upon the realisation of this expectation, there is not the slightest ground for such forebodings. Let the working expenses of a line be but just covered by the receipts, so that no profits worth speaking of are earned, and the guaranteed interest is safe. In no case yet have the expenses exceeded the receipts. It is clear from Mr. Danvers's reports that every line which has been opened has at once yielded some profit, even when opened prematurely, and several of the lines are producing already 3 and 4 per cent. This being the case, and everybody (including the Economist) admitting that the receipts of all are increasing, and will increase still more, the dividend is practically as safe as that on the Government Stock paid at the Bank.

We do not see that there is any ground for hesitating to accept Mr. Danvers's statements, or for the insinuation of our contemporary that his reports have too sanguine a tendency. These reports are chiefly composed of facts and explanatory remarks, but when the writer occasionally expresses an opinion it appears to us that he observes the utmost caution that official reserve and responsibility can dictate. The statements relating to receipts and expenses are given after they have been duly examined by the railway officers and passed by the Government, this being a necessary process under the system of supervision which has been established. And, with regard to his opinions being too hopeful, in the very last report he avows his inability, in the present condition of the lines and with existing available information, to arrive at any accurate conclusion as to their intrinsic value. One difficulty in the way of doing this is, he acknowledges, the want of sufficient experience in regard to the cost of working and maintenance; but another, and it is that which we conceive to be the most unsatisfactory feature in the accounts hitherto given, is the increased estimates for the cost of construction. The original five, six, eight, and ten thousand pounds per mile, has become eight, ten, fifteen, and twenty. But it cannot be said that this increase is peculiar to Indian railways. What house, bridge, railway, or canal has been completed for the sum originally estimated to be sufficient? At any rate, Mr. Danvers cannot be held answerable for this. It is no part of his duty to make estimates, but to report what has been estimated, and in doing so he has frequently expressed fears lest another year should show that a larger sum would be required. The rapid increase in the price of labour and of materials has in some measure been the cause of increased expense in Indian lines, and in certain districts the mutiny had added materially to the cost.

Our contemporary concludes his remarks by saying, "up to the present time there cannot be a doubt that the profits earned upon the fifty millions expended have been nearly nil per cent." We will conclude ours by reminding him that fifty millions have not been expended on the lines which are open, and which alone can earn profits, and that it is not likely that the Government would have credited the companies with a sum of two millions sterling, in liquidation of their debt for the guaranteed interest, if that amount had not fairly been earned as net revenue.

THE NANA SAHIB—DIFFICULTY OF IDENTIFICATION—A CASE IN ILLUSTRATION.

THE last mail was expected to bring intelligence from India that would decide the question of the identity of the supposed Nana Sahib, now in our safe keeping. But the second budget of news on the subject, though more ample, was even less satisfactory than the first. Some members of the local press speak doubtfully of the matter. One of them says: "We are fairly puzzled in our endeavours to decide amid conflicting statements whether the man under guard at Ajmere be the Nana or not. Opinions of equal worth for and against the identity are almost balanced." We, too, are perplexed. Let us refer to the leading points of the narrative that has reached us. The two natives, Dwarka Tewarree (a jemmadar of the 18th N.I.) and Gya Persaud, on first presenting themselves to Mr. Forjett, Police Superintendent at Bombay, told him that the man in custody at Hyderabad as Rao Sahib, was not the true man, and that they were ready to apprehend the veritable Rao Sahib with his encouragement and assistance. Mr. Forjett acted on their suggestion. The man they spoke of was arrested, and turned out to be a quiet and harmless citizen of Poona, where he had been well known for some years. After this gross mistake or wilful error, the men offered to assist the Government to capture the Nana. He was alive, and they knew where he was. They were again trusted; though it was natural to suppose that as they had deceived and disappointed the police in the first case, they were very likely to do the same in the second. Mr. Forjett, however, seems to have thought that he ought not to neglect the slightest possible chance of obtaining possession of such a prize as the Nana. He accordingly accommodated the two informers with the company of three police detectives, and directed them all to proceed to Jeypoor, where the Nana, it was said, had been residing in a temple for about six months, having come there from Nepaul. On the 11th of July a man, disguised as a Fakcer, presented himself before Colonel Davidson, Commissioner at Ajmere, and told him that he had brought the cajoled and betrayed Nana Sahib to a Hindu temple, only 300 yards from the Commissioner's court. The informer was Dwarka Tewarree, the jemmadar. On this Colonel Davidson, Lieut. Repton, Captain Brodigan, and Mr. Bowyer, Inspector of Police, very quietly and with great facility apprehended the supposed Nana and his companion, Gopaljee, a blind Brahmin. This blind Brahmin turned Queen's evidence, and swore that his fellow prisoner really was the Nana Sahib. Both the supposed Nana and the blind Brahmin had passed themselves off as religious mendicants. According to the statement of the blind Brahmin, Tania Topee was not hung, but another man called Tania, and that the true Tania Topee is still alive. Though the Nana went about as a Fakcer, "all Rajpootana knew him," says the blind Brahmin, "wherever he went." The supposed Nana has marks on his ear and foot corresponding with those which were on the real Nana.

As yet only one European has recognised in the prisoner the monster of Bithoor. This witness is Sergeant-Major Charles Wilkins, of the Royal Artillery, at Nusserabad, and formerly of the 14th Light Dragoons, at Meerut. The sergeant-major states that he had constantly seen the Nana Sahib at Meerut, and he is convinced that the prisoner is the same man, though he is "very much changed in appearance; but the form and style of his features are exactly those of the Nana."

Unless we obtain very much stronger evidence than we have yet received, we shall not believe that the real Nana Sahib is now a British prisoner. It would take up too much space if we were to enter fully into our reasons for coming to this conclusion; but to show how necessary it is to demand the strongest possible proof in all cases of questionable identity where natives of India are concerned, whose faces are, generally speaking, so little marked or individualized, we shall relate the very curious history of the personator of the Rajah of Burdwan.

Maharajah Pertaub Chund Bahadoor, zemindar of zillah Burdwan, died in the year 1820. His corpse was burnt at Culna, on the banks of the Hooghly, in the presence of about three thousand of his countrymen. When dying he was taken, according to custom, to the edge of the river. His bed was placed partly in the water, which reached to his knees. When he had breathed his last his bed was pulled out of the stream, his body was undressed and washed, an unbleached shroud was thrown over it, and it was then placed on the funeral pile. A priest* with a burning brand walked three times round it, and then "set fire to the mouth" of the dead. On this the crowd threw ghee, spice, and tow on the pile. The bones and ashes were carefully collected and put into an earthen pot. About seventeen or eighteen years after this public funeral, in the presence of a great multitude, a man, whose real name was said to be Kis-tololl Bramacharee Panda, went about the country with a drawn sword in his hand, attended by some hundreds of followers, and swore that he was the veritable Pertaub Chund, the Rajah of Burdwan, and was determined to take possession of the gudhee. He was prosecuted by the Government in the Hooghly Court for a breach of the peace, and for false personation. Sixty-seven witnesses were subpoenaed for the prosecution and three hundred and forty-seven for the defence. Radakissen Bysack, the Dewan of the Government Treasury, recognised him as Pertaub Chund, and lent him 16,000 rupees to help him to advance his claim to the Burdwan estate, worth thirty lacs a year. Very many other natives swore that he was the real Rajah of Burdwan, and also lent him large sums of money. Dr. Robert Scott, of the 37th Madras Native Infantry, who had attended Pertaub Chund Singh professionally and for some time, on looking at the soi disant Rajah, was convinced that he was the true man. He came to this conclusion not only from his personal appearance but from his answers to certain questions he had put to him. He had, moreover, carefully examined his body and found marks on it that he perfectly well remembered. John Ridley, a writer in the collectorate of Burdwan, who had been twenty-eight years in Government employ, was well acquainted with the true Rajah, and swore that the prisoner was the same man. Mr. Daniel Antoneo Overbech, Governor of Chinsurah, who at first rejected the claims of the pseudo Rajah, on subsequent inquiry and a closer examination of his person was satisfied of his identity. He recognised, on the body of the prisoner, all the marks that were on the body of Pertaub

* The custom of the family of Burdwan is, that unless a person dies in possession of the rajce, a relative puts fire to his mouth; but, if he dies after he has ascended the gudhee, a priest performs the office.

Chund; amongst the marks were those of a cut on the right ear from the glazed string of a kite, and a bite from a horse on his back. A Mrs. Harriett Keating, who had known Pertaub Chund well, also recognised the Rajah in the prisoner. Brevet Major John Marshall at first thought him an impostor, but was afterwards satisfied that he was the real Rajah of Burdwan. A Mr. William Fraser also stated on oath that he "was quite certain that the prisoner was Pertaub Chund." "If the prisoner," said he, "is not Pertaub Chund I will willingly be hanged." If we recollect rightly, the famous David Hare, so familiar with the natives generally, and with the Rajah of Burdwan in particular, was also satisfied that the prisoner was no impostor. Many other respectable European witnesses testified very strongly their conviction that the prisoner was Pertaub Chund. There was a large body of native witnesses in his favour, and the native community generally believed in his pretensions, and were so disgusted with Rajah Buddenath Roy because he was one of the witnesses for the prosecution of the claimant to the Burdwan Raj, that a vast crowd outside hissed and hooted and pelted him as he left the court. Every day during the trial there was a mob of many thousand natives collected in the neighbourhood of the court, who exhibited a strong tendency to riot. The natives who had witnessed against the pretender were all marked men, and none of them could procure a pice worth of grain in the bazaar, and some of them were even personally maltreated. And yet, after all this astounding evidence in favour of the pretender, and after a most careful and troublesome trial of six months' duration, before an English judge, and with able English counsel on both sides, it was decided beyond all doubt by the English part of the Court that this man was an impostor. But it seems that the decision of the Moulvie or Mussulman law officer differed from that of the Hooghly sessions judge (Mr. Curtis). The former, after six months' enquiry, could not make up his mind who the prisoner really was, and therefore, as it was not, in his judgment, quite impossible that he might turn out to be the rightful claimant of the Burdwan guddee, he was for giving him the benefit of a doubt. On account of this difference of opinion, the case was referred to the higher court, the Nizamud Adawlut. Mr. Curtis thought the impostor ought to be sentenced to not less than three years' imprisonment, or not more than five. The decision of the Nizamud Adawlut was that the prisoner should be set at liberty on giving bail for 10,000 rupees.

When we thus see how difficult it is in India to prove the identity of an individual native, even in the case of a public character, personally known to thousands, we may well pause before we accept the testimony we yet have of the capture of the real Nana, whose death was reported to the British Government so long ago by our ally Jung Bahadoor, on the authority of spies in his own employ.

We are far from positively contradicting the report that the Nana is alive and captured, and we are just as little inclined to assert the contrary. We suspend our judgment. Perhaps before this article is in type we shall have received more decisive and satisfactory intelligence on the subject.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INVALID OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR.—Unless the Royal Commission, to inquire into the complaints of Indian officers, may have suggested something on the subject, (which, however, is not very likely,) the officers of the invalid establishment appear destined to remain as they are for the rest of their days, as far as Sir Charles Wood is concerned. No doubt it is imagined that they can have sustained no loss from the amalgamation, but the contrary is the fact—at least I know such to be the case in Madras, with which I am best acquainted. Before the change of rulers took place there were fully five-and-twenty Madras invalid officers benefited by command of veteran battalions, adjutancies, command of detachments, payment of pensioners, &c., whereas now there are only nine employed. The men of the veteran battalions were pensioned off, which, perhaps, was not an unwise measure; but the officers were cast adrift, and the payment of pensioners in some cases handed over to officers of the staff corps as a means of providing for some of that redundant body. Such was the effect of the amalgamation on the Madras Invalid Establishment, and no doubt the invalid officers of the other presidencies also have fared much the same.

It is charitably calculated by the home authorities that mortality is greater in India than in Great Britain; besides, what matters the welfare of a hundred or so of old Company's officers? Leave them alone, and let them die out. Now, it appears to me a mistaken calculation that they will die out a bit faster from being detained in India now a-days. On the contrary, it is highly probable they will live longer, in many instances, than if exposed to the cold and damp of England. They have no duty to perform, and may live where they choose. They have the whole range of the country, and can select the climate best suited to their constitutions from an average temperature of eighty deg., to almost perpetual snow. What greater chance of mortality in India under these circumstances than in Great Britain? Why, then, keep them in exile from their relations and friends for no good purpose? Give those who wish it the option of returning home. But it may be said, "any who wish it may retire on their pensions if they have served their time out." Very true; but it should be remembered that there is little or nothing to be saved out of the invalid pay of a Major or Captain—what little is laid by would be barely sufficient to carry them home. To enable those, therefore, who desire to retire, grant to each the pension of his immediately superior grade. But there are a few who have not completed their period of service. To such grant merely the pension of their rank, and passage money, not a free passage. Say, for a single person 1,200 or 1,500 Rs., and for a family 2,000 or 2,500 Rs.; the larger amount would not be too much, as there is outfit to be provided. A bonus would certainly in many cases be preferred to the increased pension; but as that would involve an immediate outlay, and the other an immediate saving, it is not difficult to conjecture which plan would be adopted, if either. The smallness of the body of officers to be disposed of might be urged as a reason for allowing them to die out; but is that either a liberal, charitable, or Christian argument for keeping men in exile? Are a hundred officers not worth consideration? The Indian navy was a small body of officers. They were pensioned off. Other small bodies at different times have been pensioned also; why not the invalid officers of the Indian army, at least those who desire it? No existing rules or regulations need be interfered with. All that is necessary is to make an offer to as many as choose to accept it within a limited period. The saving might not be very important, perhaps, yet still it would be a saving. If only half took the increased pension there would be a saving of £5,000 per annum, which would pay for the increased pension of several effectives. The difference of pay would be as follows:—

	Indian Pay.	Increased Pension.	Saving.
Major ...	£590	£365	£225 per ann.
Captain ...	360	292	68 "
Lieutenant ...	210	191	19 "

In the case of those who had not served their time the saving would be greater. Major, £208; captain, £169 per annum. The saving on lieutenants would be very little; but there are only sixteen of that grade. Unattached officers are not included in the above number, though borne on the veteran establishment.

Having thus endeavoured to state the case of the invalid officers of the Indian army, I must leave their cause to be taken up by some charitably disposed person in England; for otherwise their case appears hopeless indeed.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
E. I.

Madras, July, 1863.

COLIN CAMPBELL, LORD CLYDE.

DIED FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, BURIED SATURDAY, AUGUST 22, 1863.

[From Punch.]

Another great, gray-headed chieftain gone

To join his brethren on the silent shore

Another link with a proud past undone!

Another stress of life-long warfare o'er.

Few months have passed since that gray head we saw

Bending above the vault where Outram slept;

Lingering as if reluctant to withdraw

From that grave-side, where sun-bronzed soldiers wept.

The thought filled many minds, is he the next

To take his place within the Abbey walls?

A gnarled trunk, by many tempests vexed,

That bears its honours high, even as it falls.

He is the next! the name that was a fear

To England's swarthy foes, all India through,

Is now a memory! No more fields will hear

His voice of stern command, that rang so true.

The tartaned ranks he led and loved no more

Will spring, like hounds unleashed, at his behest;

No more that eye will watch his soldiers o'er,

As mothers o'er their babes, awake, at rest.

A life of roughest duty, from the day

When with the boy's down soft upon his chin,

He marched to fight, as others run to play,

Like a young squire his knightly spurs to win.

And well he won them; in the fever swamp,

In foughten field, by trench and leagured wall,

In the blank rounds of dull routine, that damp

Spirits of common temper more than all.

He trod slow steps but sure; poor, without friends,

Winning no way, save by his sweat and blood;

Heart-sick too often, when from earned amends

He saw himself swept back by the cold flood,

Against which all must strive, who strive like him

By merit's patient strength to win the goal,

Till many a swimmer's eye grows glazed and dim,

And closes, ere the tide doth shoreward roll.

Stout heart, strong arm, and constant soul to aid,

He sickened not nor slackened, but swam on;

Though o'er his head thick spread the chilling shade,

And oft, 'twixt seas, both shore and stars seemed gone.

Till the tide turned, and on the top of flood

The high-spent swimmer bore triumphant in;

And honours rained upon him, bought with blood,

And long deferred, but sweeter so to win.

And fame and name and wealth and rank were heaped

On the gray head that once had held them high;

But weak the arm which that late harvest reaped,

And all a knight's work left him was to die.

Dead! with his honours still in newest gloss,

Their gold in sorry contrast with his gray;

But by his life, not them, we rate his loss,

And for sweet peace to his brave spirit pray.

No nobler soldier's heart was ever laid

Into the silence of a trophied tomb;

There let him sleep—true gold and thrice assayed

By sword and fire and suffering—till the doom!

OUR RELATIONS WITH JAPAN.

The members of the Peace Society have addressed the following memorial to the Right Hon. Earl Russell, her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs:—

"My Lord,—We ask permission, as the committee of the Peace Society, respectfully to express to your lordship the deep regret and apprehension with which we have learnt the present menacing state of the relations existing between this country and the kingdom of Japan. We cannot but regard it as a most painful and deplorable fact, that the first appearance of our countrymen among remote and heathen nations, instead of being the harbinger of peace and a higher civilisation, is so frequently the prelude to a course of aggression, violence and blood. It seems clear, on the testimony of those most conversant with the fact, that the Treaty of intercourse and commerce, on which we ground our right of intervention in Japan, was in the first instance obtained from the authorities of that country under the coercion of fear, in opposition to the traditional policy of the Government and the strong prejudices of the people. It is too evident, also, that we have failed in observing honourably on our part the stipulations of that treaty. From the first, our countrymen who, for purposes of commerce, entered into Japan in the wake of our diplomatists, have availed themselves of the advantages they thus acquired, in a spirit which could not fail to prove both offensive and injurious to the Government and people; thereby confirming the prejudices against foreigners already existing, and most seriously aggravating the difficulties of the Japanese authorities in their attempts to enforce on their own countrymen a fair observance of the conditions of the treaty. It is obvious, moreover, that our official representatives in that country are quite powerless to restrain the irregularities of such lawless and unscrupulous characters as, unhappily, too often pioneer and represent British commerce and civilisation in the Eastern seas. If the facts be as above stated, it can hardly be a matter of surprise that an intercourse thrust upon the Japanese against their will, and commenced under such circumstances as we have described, should have led to early and serious collision. Nor can we hope that a persistent attempt to force our acquaintance upon them at the mouth of the cannon can conduce to their advantage, or to our honour as a professedly Christian and civilised nation. On the contrary, all the facts and appearances of the case, as well as our former experience in the East, but too clearly indicate that any further progress on the path of coercion cannot fail to lead to grave and dangerous complications, ending in all probability in a succession of ignoble and costly wars, and the introduction of an era of revolution and anarchy among a people who, previous to our intrusion among them, had enjoyed, according to the testimony of competent witnesses, a large measure of internal order, peace, and prosperity. We earnestly hope, therefore, that your lordship will send such instructions to our representatives in that country as shall save England and Japan from the calamity of such a course. And if intercourse between us and them cannot be conducted in a friendly spirit, we venture respectfully to submit whether it would not be better for us to withdraw altogether from their country. It is not likely that commerce can be successfully prosecuted with a reluctant and angry people, and, even if it could, it would be more honourable for a Christian nation to make some sacrifice of commercial advantage rather than inaugurate among another people what may prove to be a long course of disorder and blood.

"JOSEPH PEASE, President.

"HENRY RICHARD, Secretary."

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Delta, which left yesterday (Thursday), took out £203,110; of which £150,350 was silver and £52,760 gold, for Bombay, and £60 gold for Suez.

THE MEDITERRANEAN TELEGRAPH CABLE.—The Malta and Alexandria Telegraph Cable is now finally repaired, and messages can now be taken direct from London to Suez to catch the India and China mails.

INDIAN BRANCH RAILWAY.—A telegram has been received by the Indian Branch Railway Company, from their agent at Calcutta, dated 27th July, stating that the Indian Government have conceded to that company the whole of the system of railways for Oude and Rohilcund.

THE LATE LORD CLYDE.—The sad illness which has robbed the country of one of its noblest heroes undoubtedly arose from the toils and hardships of his soldier life. It was no mere "atrophy" of the frame, such as enervating old age brings to the idle as to the bold in arms; and it is just that we should say it, for it seems only to add another though a mournful claim to our tender reverence and high regard for this simple-hearted and devoted soldier, to know that in his death he paid the debt of injuries self-inflicted on his health by hard service to his country. Lord Clyde was naturally of a very vigorous constitution, and immense chest development in proportion to his height. During the Indian mutiny campaign in Oude he was thrown violently from his horse, dislocated his right humerus into the axilla, fractured a rib, and suffered afterwards some inflammation, both pleuritic and pneumonic. He never felt thoroughly well since that accident. After his return to England he had two or three attacks of congestion of the lungs, associated with bronchitis and enfeebled action of the heart. One of these attacks preceded his late fatal illness. During his last sickness he was attended by the medical officers of the Chatham garrison, Surgeon-Major Summers (Royal Engineers) being, we believe, in immediate medical charge, assisted by a daily consultation with the principal medical officer and others. Professor Longmore, Mr. Cutler, and Dr. Watson paid some visits during the course of the illness. Their opinion pointed but too clearly to the fatal result. The chief symptoms indicated fatty degeneration and dilatation of the heart, but without any apparent valvular disease; imperfectly aerated blood, and consequent disturbance of the brain and mental functions, œdema, with orthopnea, and restlessness: these were the sure forerunners of the end. And, in fact, the disease consisted of general enlargement as to weight and bulk of the heart, fatty degeneration, and dilatation of the auricles. It was obvious that the duration of the disease was upwards of two years. Lord Clyde died, not from the wasting atrophy of age, but as directly in the service of his country, and from the weight of the heavy toils and great blows which he bore in that service, as though he had fallen on the very field of one of those battles in which he so often led to victory.—The Lancet.

PRESENTATION TO CAPTAIN GRANT, THE AFRICAN EXPLORER.—A public meeting was held in Anderson's Hall, Nairn, on Tuesday, the 18th inst., for the purpose of receiving and honouring Captain Grant on his return from discovering the source of the Nile. Two testimonials were presented to the Captain: (1) The freedom of the burgh, contained in a casket of exquisite workmanship, subscribed for by the ladies of the town and county; (2) a valuable massive silver vase, subscribed for by the gentlemen of the town and county. The hall was completely crowded by an assemblage which embraced the élite of the town and county. The town band occupied the small gallery in the hall, and played at intervals during the proceedings. Captain Grant entered the hall shortly after two o'clock, amid loud cheering, and was received on the platform by the Provost. The Provost presided at the presentation of the freedom of the burgh, and Mr. Brodie, of Brodie, the lord lieutenant of the county, during the remainder of the time.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND INDIA.—The Assaye and Kirkham, sailing vessels, are now shipping from the works of Messrs. Henley, North Woolwich, 560 miles of the Indian submarine electric telegraph cable manufactured by that firm. Sir Charles Bright and Mr. Latimer Clark, the engineers superintending the manufacture of the cable, have a competent staff of electricians at Woolwich to test every portion of the work as it progresses. The cable is coiled in large iron water tight tanks—three on board each ship—and which will be kept full of water throughout the voyage to Bombay. Both vessels are expected to leave in a fortnight, fully equipped with all appliances for paying out the cable. The Tweed and Cospatrick are now being fitted out at the premises of Messrs. Wigram, of Poplar, under the superintendence of Captain Dixey, for the reception of 550 miles of the cable, and the Charente, a screw steamer of 600 tons, is being prepared by the same firm for permanent employment on the line, and she will take out all requisites for repairing it hereafter, should any accident arise from ships' anchors, &c. This vessel will be commanded by Lieut. Stiff, of the Indian navy, who has recently surveyed the Persian Gulf, especially with reference to laying down this important line. The total length of the cable taken out will amount to 1,250 miles, weighing upwards of 5,000 tons. The operations of laying down the entire line will be under the chief superintendence of Lieut.-Colonel P. Stewart, Royal Engineers, and it is confidently hoped that the work will be completed in February next, and that by March, 1864, London and Calcutta will be in direct telegraphic communication. The Gammel-horne, a Danish store-ship, is also lying off Messrs. Henley's premises to ship a telegraph cable for the Danish Government, weighing fifteen tons per mile. Twenty-five miles of cable has just been forwarded by the same firm to Christiania, for the Norwegian Government.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders will be received at the Bank of England on the 2nd of September for Government Bills on India to the amount of 40,00,000 rupees, of which not more than 16,00,000 rupees will be drawn on Bombay, and 2,00,000 rupees on Madras.

BY DAVID THOMAS ANSTED, M.A., F.R.S., &c.

AND

ROBERT GORDON LATHAM, M.A., M.D., F.R.S., &c.

The Illustrations drawn on Wood expressly for the Work, by PAUL J. NAPPAL, Member of the London Society of Painters in Water Colours.

"The 'Channel Islands' is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many hands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark—about their history, Geography, and natural history—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and interesting as a well-sustained drama; and to this drama no more graceful and picturesque scenery could have been furnished than we find in the illustrations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Nappal and M. Peters Le Lièvre. The result is not a merely handsome volume of the old 'Keepsake' style, made to sell and be looked at, but a book of rare merit and value, made for instruction and delight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit."—Athenaeum, Nov. 16, 1862.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVED

MENT in the CONSTRUCTION OF ARTIFICIAL

TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER

BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.

For which a Prize Medal was awarded to the Producer at the International Exhibition, 1862.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in furs, and every other species of insect.

SPORTSMEN will find this an invaluable remedy for destroying Fleas in their Dogs, as also Ladies for their Pet Dogs.

Being the Original Importer of this now available article, which has found so great a sale that it has tempted others to vend a so-called article, the Public are therefore cautioned to observe that the Packets of the Genuine Powder bear the autograph of THOMAS KEATING.

Sold in packets 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, or post free for 14 or 36 postage stamps, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C.

STEAM COMMUNICATION between LONDON and INDIA by the MAGNIFICENT FLEET of STEAMERS belonging to the EAST INDIA and LONDON SHIPPING COMPANY (Limited).

The well-known Clipper Auxiliary Steam-ship QUEEN OF THE SOUTH, 2,221 tons, 300-horse power, W. STEWART, Commander, now loading in the Victoria (London) Docks, will leave on the 19th of SEPTEMBER, embarking passengers at and leaving Gravesend on the 21st of SEPT. MBER, for CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS. This vessel will also call at the Island of MAURITIUS. No Cargo will be taken for Madras or Mauritius. This magnificent ship, built expressly for the India trade, has been thoroughly refitted, has first-rate accommodation for passengers, and will carry an experienced Surgeon, also a Stewardess.

The average passage of these steamers has been seventy days to Madras; some of them making the shortest passages on record.

The line will be continued on the 20th of each succeeding month, with the strictest punctuality, by one of this Company's fleet of auxiliary screw steamships.

For freight or passage apply to GRINDLAY and Co., 55, Parliament-street, S.W.; the Brokers, ALFRED BREIT and Co., 150, Leadenhall-street, E.C.; or at the Offices of the Company, 9, Minster-lane, London, E.C., where also applications for appointments as Midshipmen in this service should be made.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!

C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chubb, and Rhoads, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or, indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times, C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Milner, Price, Mordan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Sedlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Sedlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Fleet-street, London, W.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—The greatest

and most useful invention of the day, AQUA AMARELLA.—Messrs. JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King-court, Lombard-street, Perfumers to her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age. The Aqua Amarella has none of the properties of dyes; it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea per bottle.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-

SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. When combined with the Aromatic Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

It is prepared in a state of perfect purity and of uniform strength by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

SAFE and SURE.—Day by day are cases of ulcers, wounds, sores, contractions, and deformities cured by these well-esteemed remedies after all other known means have been tried in vain. Varicose veins, and all descriptions of sore, ulcerated, and bad legs, which seem to defy the best surgical skill, succumb in a short time to the soothing, healing, and purifying properties of Holloway's Ointment and Pills. They operate both locally and constitutionally; they strengthen both capillaries and nerves, and regulate the circulation of the blood. The most valued testimonials are constantly received from persons whom chance directed to Holloway's safe and certain remedies, and which effected a complete cure, even after the constitution seemed thoroughly broken down.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening. Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE reputed Nana Sahib is still at Ajmere but is about to be removed to Agra. No additional intelligence at all confirmatory of his identity has yet been obtained, and the press of India is still divided in opinion upon the subject. It may perhaps turn out that the prisoner is not the Nana Sahib, but yet some traitor to the British Government, who will well deserve a traitor's punishment, and whom we shall have good reason to be glad that we have got rid of.

The Governor-General has recovered his health, and, accompanied by his lady, is making a short stay at Chinee, in Thibet. On returning to Simla, his Excellency proceeds to Lahore and thence to Peshawur, where he is to meet the Ameer of Cabul or his Envoy.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal was at Berhampore on the 25th of July.

The Commander-in-Chief of Madras, during his recent visit to the Maharajah of Mysore, met with an accident. His horse pitched him over his head, and the fall broke two of his ribs: he is, however, recovering.

Sir Bartle Frere and Sir William Mansfield were at Poona, and were cheering the station with their hospitalities.

Sir William Denison has been laid up with an attack of fever at Oosoor.

Sir Mordaunt Wells is about to leave India, amidst a perfect hubbub of praise and censure, being as odious to some parties as he is popular with others. The missionaries and their friends speak of him with unqualified scorn and reprobation on account of his decision in the case of Dr. Duff and the Hindoo convert; but others, both European and native, express the warmest admiration of his boldness, integrity, and independence as a judge—"Their generous ardour no cold medium knows."

It is said that Sir Matthew Sausse is to be transferred from Bombay to Calcutta, in succession to Sir Mordaunt Wells.

Affairs in Afghanistan wear a threatening aspect, and the Indian Government is watching matters in that direction with an anxious eye. It is said that a civil war is imminent, and that the great chiefs are all on the alert, and ready to take part in the tumult and confusion. The roads are no longer available for the safe transit of merchandize, and peaceful travellers are exposed, without protection or help, to vast bodies of dacoits. It is said that there are now three political parties in Afghanistan. The first is headed by Shere Ali Khan, the new Ameer, and his brother, Mahomed Shereef Khan. The second is headed by the two sons of the famous Akbar Khan, Futteh Mahomed Khan, and Jullalood-deen Khan. The third is led by Mahomed Azim Khan, Mahomed Aslan Khan, and Mahomed Osman Khan. The Persians will also be an element in the coming struggle. The Shah has an army of 45,000 men in the vicinity of Meshed. He had made no attempt, at latest dates, to regain Herat. A camp of exercise will assemble at Lahore early in the ensuing cold weather, and an army of observation at Peshawur. It seems probable they will have something to do.

The Punjab Exhibition has not so much local support of a pecuniary kind as the Government anticipated, and the committee are obliged to appeal to the public very earnestly for contributions to the Prize Fund, which amounts to only Rs. 2,000, to be divided into a thousand shares, of which 340 are assigned to raw produce, 480 to manufactures, 110 to machinery, and 70 to the fine arts.

There has been a rather serious disturbance in the district of Huzara. A large body of men, hostile to our Government, on the borders of our territory, who have amongst them a considerable number of the Sepoy mutineers, and are all well-trained soldiers, with plenty of money and ammunition, have menaced our frontier across the Indus. Colonel Taylor was despatched with a strong force to meet them, and he soon compelled them to retreat to their mountain fortresses. But they may soon again, perhaps, give us a little trouble, and put us to some expense.

We understand that the long-talked-of medical amalgamation arrangement will not take place after all. The authorities at the Horse Guards seem to have set their face against it. In its stead it is proposed to have a Staff Corps, which is to be regulated on much the same principles as the general line as regards promotion; that is to say, promotion to go by length of service. The length of service from the rank of assistant-surgeon to that of surgeon is fixed at twelve years. The higher appointments are to be filled by selection. Pensions on retirement on account of ill-health, it is said, will be considerably improved, but pensions on full pay will be much the same as before. Officers in the present service will be eligible for the Staff Corps. Salaries are to be consolidated. We just jot down these memoranda as the heads of the gossip that has reached us. If these arrangements are carried into effect many assistant-surgeons—perhaps an average of twenty—at the several Presidencies will obtain promotion.

It is a curious circumstance, and speaks well for the spread of British notions of morality in the East, that some of the Hindoos of Bengal have memorialised the Governor-General and Legislative Council of India against the custom of polygamy, and have prayed that it may be put down by law. The Hon. Rajah Deo Narian Singh intends to introduce a Bill for its suppression at the next meeting of the Legislative Council.

The result of the half-year's operations of the Delhi Bank, according to the report issued on the 20th July, shows a surplus of Rs. 1,13,401, equal to Rs. 11.5.6 per cent. per annum on the paid-up capital. The manager had therefore proposed the usual dividend of Rs. 22.8.0 per share, at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum, the transfer of Rs. 10,000 to the reserve fund, and the appropriation of the remaining Rs. 13,401 towards the discharge of bad and doubtful assets on the books at Allahabad, caused by the mismanagement of an agent (Mr. C. F. Vaughan), who has been removed. Colonel G. C. Barlow has been elected trustee in the room of Mr. J. C. Murphy, resigned.

A fireman named Frederick Fitzpatrick was lately tried at Alipore on a charge of culpable homicide. An old native had his foot upon the Mutlah line of railway. Fitzpatrick, knowing that a train was approaching, and finding that his shouts were unheeded, in his hurry and anxiety, threw a lump of coal at him, which struck the poor man with such force that it smashed two of his ribs, the broken ends of which pierced the right lung, and caused his death. This was a rough mode of "killing with kindness." The man's motive, however, was undoubtedly a good one, and he was accordingly acquitted; but it will help, with too many other similar lessons, to warn our comparatively gigantic countrymen to deal more tenderly with the small, slim and delicate natives of Bengal.

About seven hundred medals have been distributed by Major-General Smith to the officers and men of the 10th Regiment N.I. at Poona. The corps distinguished itself greatly during the Indian campaigns of 1857, 1858, and 1859.

The Times of India made such severe attacks upon an engineer officer (Captain Southey) for leaving the new entrances into the Fort for a long time in a wretchedly unfinished state, that it was expected from Captain Southey's threats the paper would be prosecuted for libel. However, the case went up to Government, and the engineer's explanations were pronounced unsatisfactory.

Sir Hope Grant has recommended the introduction of the Zouave uniform for the Madras Native Infantry, and the proposition is now under the consideration of the Government of India.

In spite of the outcry against Sir Charles Wood's regulations on the subject of the sale of waste lands, we find that the Calcutta Government Gazette, of the 18th of July, announces the sale of 8,000 acres.

The Englishman says:—"Sir Charles Wood's additional annuities of £200 a year to the colonels of artillery and engineers, appear to be taking pretty well. Colonel S. Pott, of the Engineers, has accepted one of these annuities and retired to England; and we hear that Colonel Ommancey, of the same corps, also takes one and resigns the service in September. We also hear from England that Colonel Scott of the Artillery, Inspector-General of Ordnance in Bengal, has accepted one of these annuities, and will not return to India from England, where he is now on sick leave.

The interest taken in the rifle practice of the troops in India is shown by a recent general order, whereby the Commander-in-Chief in India directs that half-yearly examinations of colour-sergeants shall be held, where practicable, for the purpose of passing candidates for the appointment of regimental sergeant instructor of musketry.

An unpleasant fracas has taken place near Simla between Capt. Hill, H.M.'s 71st regiment, and Ensign Lawrence, a son of the Deputy commissioner of Simla. As the matter was reported to the Commander-in-Chief by the latter, a court of inquiry has been convened.

Cholera is said to be raging widely and fiercely in Oude and Allahabad.

Lieut.-Colonel J. D. Carmichael, C.B., junior Lieut.-Colonel of H.M.'s 94th Regiment, has been appointed to the command of H.M.'s 103rd Foot, or Royal Bombay Fusiliers, in the western Presidency, for which he left Calcutta by the P. and O. Company's steamer Bengal, on the 22nd.

The vacant Lieut.-Colonelcy and command of H.M.'s 19th Regiment, caused by the death of Colonel Mundy, will not be filled up from, and give promotion in, the corps. The command of the 19th was offered to Lieut.-Colonel Bright, who rose in the regiment, and is now commanding H.M.'s 51st L. I., but was declined by that officer, he preferring his present command.

Major F. O. Salusbury now, and for some time past, commanding H.M.'s 101st Foot, late 1st Bengal Fusiliers, at Rawul Pindee, has been promoted to a lieutenant-colonelcy by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, with a view to his holding the permanent command of the regiment in which he rose, and with which he served in the Sutlej, Burnah, and mutiny campaigns.

The Municipal Corporations of Bombay are more economical than the justices of the peace in Calcutta, who propose to give Rs. 1,500 a month to a health officer. Bombay gives its health officer, Dr. Hewlett, only Rs. 350 a month.

The Shah of Persia has an army of 4,500 men in the vicinity of Meshed, but has yet made no attempt to regain Herat.

Poona, it is stated, is to be one of the residences of the Governor-General of India. The erection of a Government House, it is said, is already ordered.

The British India Steam Navigation Company commences their new contract, monthly mail service between Bombay and Calcutta, on the 15th of September next.

Political affairs in China are generally quiet. A civil war has commenced in Japan.

CAPTURE OF THE NANA.

AJMERE, July 18.

As you have fallen into some inaccuracies in your accounts of the capture of the prisoner now in Ajmere Fort under suspicion of being the Nana of Bithoor, I beg to give you a correct statement of the facts of the case. On Monday, the 22nd of June, as Major Davidson, Deputy-Commissioner of Ajmere, was sitting in the cutcherry a man in the dress of a fakcer came in and asked for a private interview. On being taken into another room he stated that he was a jemadar of a Bombay regiment, and that he had, along with a native of Cawnpore and two detectives of the Bombay police, been engaged for some time in tracking the Nana; that they had succeeded in joining him and his party some time before at Saloomba, and had been travelling with them since on pretence of being sufferers in the same cause. There were along with the Nana, a blind man and another, called Naroo Punt, one of the leaders in the mutiny. They had arrived in Ajmere only an hour or two previously, and were now in a mundir near the cutcherry. As he produced, in confirmation of his statement, letters from Mr. Forjett and the Secretary to the Bombay Government, Major Davidson proposed to seize the party at once; but the jemadar begged him not to do so till it was dark, as his life would not be safe for a single day if it were known that he had betrayed the Nana. To this Major Davidson agreed, and after dismissing the man resumed the court. As the mundir in which the Nana had taken refuge was a large building, and as these men might attempt to escape, Major Davidson sent Lieutenant Repton, the assistant commissioner, to ask Lieutenant Brodigan, commanding the detachment in the fort, for the assistance of some of the men of H.M.'s 28th, that they might surround the mundir; and it was arranged that they were to meet at a certain spot at eight o'clock. Just as Major Davidson was about to leave for the place of meeting, the jemadar came in again in a great hurry to say that the Nana had heard some persons wondering why the sahib had stopped cutcherry earlier than usual; this had made him uneasy and suspicious, and so he had moved off to another place. From the description given of this place Major Davidson did not think that the force originally intended would be necessary, and he, therefore, walked to the fort, and stopped the Europeans who were just starting. Then, taking with him only Lieutenant Repton, Assistant-Commissioner; Lieut. Brodigan, of H.M.'s 28th; Inspector Baner, of the Ajmere Police; and Sergeant Dalton, H.M.'s 28th, he went to the place described by the jemadar. Here, however, they were at fault; the man, not knowing the localities well, had indicated a place on the Pokar road, and when they arrived there they found no signs of the party they were in search of. Lieutenant Repton and Mr. Baner went to search the mundir in which they had just been, while the three others went to search a bouree near the Delhi Gate. Here the first person they saw was the jemadar, who made a sign that they were all right. Major Davidson, followed by the others, went down two or three steps, and entered a long building over the water. First they saw a man close to the entrance whom Major Davidson seized hold of, saying, "Why are you making such a noise? Who are you all?" The jemadar, who was just behind, said, "We are fakeers, and this," pointing to the man held by Major Davidson, "is the pundit." This was the sign that had been agreed on to indicate the Nana, as Major Davidson was afraid that he might not be able to take them all, and wished to secure the principal at all events. He was standing there as quietly as possible; but Major D. persisted in his charge of unruly conduct, and told the sergeant to handcuff him, and take him outside, which was accordingly done. The next he took hold of was a blind man, whom he made over to Lieutenant Brodigan. The third was the man supposed to be Naroo Punt, whom he himself led out, and thus they walked off quietly with their three prisoners. It was by this time quite dark, and they reached the fort, about half a mile distant, without attracting any particular attention on their arrival. In case of the prisoners having poison secreted about them, the whole of their own clothes were taken away, and fresh ones supplied. They were then ironed and left under a European guard.

The capture was effected with such celerity and secrecy that, at first, the natives were at a loss to know what had happened. The "gup" of the bazaar on the following day was that a fakeer had come to speak with the sahib in court, and been taken into a private room, and now the guards at the fort were doubled. The whole truth did not transpire for two or three days, and by that time the gateway leading into the city had been built up. Nothing was found upon the prisoners when they were taken, but next day their luggage was examined, and five or six kinds of deadly poison found in it. Since then they have been kept separate, under European sentries. Inspector Baner is night and day in the room with the Nana, and no one is allowed to see him without a special pass from the Deputy Commissioner. At first they all obstinately declared that they were three brothers who had been travelling as fakeers over the country for twenty-eight years. The Nana was in ignorance of the real charge against him till the four detectives were confronted with him in irons as his accomplices, who had been taken and had, to save themselves, denounced him as the Nana Sahib. His whole demeanour then changed. He was no longer a mild fakeer, but a man evidently accustomed to command. He pretends not to know English at all, but it is evident that he understands every word. In fact, he lately complained that he had overheard the soldiers discussing whether he would be hanged or blown away from a gun, which he said was very disagreeable, but he could not explain how he knew that without knowing English. Naroo Punt and the blind man both confess now that they are not brothers; and the latter, having turned Queen's evidence, declares that his companion is really the Nana. The principal informer is a man called Gya Persaud, a native of Cawnpore, who has known the Nana all his life; and the Bombay jemadar and detectives were sent up with him from Bombay.

You express some surprise that he should have ventured so near Nusseerabad; but it is a fact that he was in that camp a few months ago, and was in communication with several persons, one of whom has been arrested. I believe the detectives also state that it is not long since he was in Poona. He was not caught then, and he would not have been caught now had not the detectives in the meantime joined him as pretended friends.

NUSSEERABAD, July 19.

The supposed Nana is still the chief topic of conversation here; and the latest intelligence received is, that he is to be moved at once to Agra. A wing of the 28th, with a proportion of artillery (3 guns) and cavalry from Nusseerabad and Neemuch, will form the escort. It would have been as well to have first settled the question unmistakably as to whether the real Nana is in custody or not, before sending 800 Europeans on what may prove an unprofitable journey.

RAJPOOTANA, July 20.

Reports are circulated that the gathering of "bulmashes" and "pandies" who were at Saloomba a short time ago have nearly all dispersed, or hidden themselves in the surrounding hills and jungles. This appears to have arisen from the news of the probability of a force moving out from Neemuch having been conveyed to their locality. The Nana still remains in durance vile, at Ajmere, and the Government have as yet made no sign with regard to his future destination. It is said in Nusseerabad that Capt. Carnell is to proceed in charge of the prisoner to Cawnpore, or at least that this officer has been named for the duty by the Governor-general's agent for Rajpootana. The Nana is now much thinner than he was when first captured, and his skin, particularly of the face, has become much lighter in colour. It is most extraordinary nothing should be known as to what is to be done with him, as, putting the telegraph aside, time has elapsed for a reference to Simla or Calcutta almost over again. It is rumoured the Saloomba Thakoor has sent vakeels into Neemuch denying all complicity in the Nana's affairs, and stating that he did not know it was the Nana, and that he is innocent of pandies. There could surely be little difficulty in ascertaining the facts of the case with our military stations of Khairwarrah, not more than thirty miles distant from Saloomba.

RAJPOOTANA, July 23.

The latest news regarding the individual supposed to be the Nana is, that a squadron of the Inniskilling Dragoons from Mhow and two companies of the 28th Europeans from Nusseerabad are to escort the prisoner to Cawnpore via Agra; Captain Carnell, of the Ajmeer police, going in political charge. It is, however, believed that a representation has been made from Bombay to the effect that it would be desirable for the evil-disposed in the Deccan to have an opportunity of seeing the Nana, if, indeed, it can be proved on this side of India that it is really the right man. Therefore it is not at all improbable that he will be conveyed via Bombay and Poona.

RAJPOOTANA, July 30.

There can be no doubt of the fact, that numerous scoundrels are at large roaming over these districts. Robberies are of very frequent occurrence, but chiefly confined to attacks on the different Raj daks. It would appear as if the durbars were concerned in this work, and that the robberies are effected with the view of obtaining information. All native States are constantly being plotted against by their neighbours, and all have their spies at each other's courts. When any important document passes between the European authorities in which any State is interested, the latter does not hesitate to reward for what it can get, and asks no questions. Europeans, however, travelling through the country are as safe as possible. Of course, in a thinly inhabited country carriage is not abundant; but that is not to be ascribed either to the European surveillance or temper of the people.

The Nana remains a prisoner at Ajmere, and has been rather sick, which, considering all things, is not to be wondered at. A few days ago several arrests were made in Nusseerabad, chiefly of Brahmins who were supposed to be in camp for no good purpose; some said evidence would be adduced that they had tampered with the native troops. At Neemuch the authorities are looking out pretty strictly, and submit suspicious characters to a searching investigation. It is stated that offers have been received from two of the Rajpootana States to march their troops against Saloomba and Bikaner. They wish to pay off old grudges, and think the present a good opportunity of doing so, as they suppose they will, of course, be aided by the Supreme Government.

RAJPOOTANA, July 31.

News has been received that the photographs of the supposed Nana sent to Cawnpore were pronounced by Captain Court, of the police, and by Dr. Check, the civil surgeon, as not at all resembling what they recollected as the Nana. Both these gentlemen were well acquainted with him previous to the mutinies. It must, however, be remembered that the photographs were amateur productions, and that the man must have altered considerably during six years of wandering. If not the Nana, why does he not indicate the Deccan village from which he came? But this he is unable to do.

Orders have been issued for his removal to Cawnpore under the charge of Captain Carnell. He will proceed via Agra.

The Englishman says:—"The first count against the Nana ought to be for rebellion, and rebellion alone; and if found guilty he should be hanged for rebellion, and be thankful for the clemency which does not blow him away from a gun, or flay him alive, or impale him, which would have been his certain lot under a Mogul conqueror. It should only be under the very unexpected contingency of the Nana being acquitted of rebellion, or acquitted of consorting with rebels, that he should be tried for those horrible crimes on which the memory of the public is too apt to run."

We do not agree with the writer. If we try the Nana simply for rebellion we shall fail to carry the sympathies of the people with us, for it is known all over India that he had a grievance against our rule. If we try him for the horrid massacre of women and children at Cawnpore, we shall approve ourselves to the conscience of every native of the country when we hang him. Had the Nana met us fairly in the field, and been vanquished, no man would have thought of hanging him for the offence. It is the cruel murder of the women and children at Cawnpore that makes the gallows his righteous doom.

BENGAL.

HINDU MEMORIAL AGAINST POLYGAMY.

The following memorial, which we find in the Hurkaru, is the most pleasing testimony we have seen for a long time, to the real progress of the people, under the influence of European thought:—

To His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, and the Honourable Members of the LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF INDIA.

The Memorial of the undersigned Hindoo Inhabitants of Bengal,

Most Respectfully Sheweth,—That your memorialists having deeply considered and carefully weighed the sentiments and feelings of the entire Hindoo community of the provinces to which they belong, on the subject of polygamy as sanctioned by the custom of the country, are encouraged to claim legislative interference for its suppression.

Your memorialists are convinced that the general spread of education amongst the leading classes of Hindoo society—those classes, in fact, which direct the movements and endow authority to the decisions of the national mind—and the healthier tone than before of public morality, induced by a constant and beneficial observance of British institutions, have sensibly cleared the way for the overthrow of social habits which only a pernicious artificial influence hitherto rendered popular.

Your memorialists have ample grounds for believing that the almost unanimous feeling of the native community is against a usage which has destroyed the domestic happiness of Hindoo women to a far greater extent than the doom of perpetual widowhood.

The supporters of the usage, belonging as they do to the least educated class, and guided by a manifest motive of self-interest, are in a most contemptible and scarcely noteworthy minority. Many of these even bitterly complain of their fate after they have proceeded too far to retreat, and when it is impossible for them to cancel their luckless marriages. If passion or avarice did not blind him to the perception of reason, the polygamist would himself be the foremost opponent of a right which enabled him to sow the most violent contention and deadly hate in his family.

Your memorialists further beg to submit, that it is against the principle of civilisation to consider the institution of marriage any otherwise than as a solemn compact between one man and one woman, to preserve, inviolate, the constant affection which is pledged before the altar of God; and your memorialists do not hesitate to characterise as perjury an act which enables the stronger and more rational party to the contract to break it at will, whilst the weaker and less intelligent party, who is governed by a rigid conventional law besides, is compelled to maintain it at every disadvantage, loss of position, sacrifice of peace, and outrage to the most sensitive feelings.

Your memorialists therefore are of opinion, that morality and enlightened policy, of which the British Government is the representative in the East, equally demand an abrogation by law of the rite of polygamy, and for this your memorialists most earnestly pray.

THE NAPOLEON OF ASIA.

"Is Dost Mahomed dead that there is no justice?" The fact that this has been for nearly forty years a proverb in Afghanistan is a far more remarkable tribute to the late Ameer of Cabul than the title applied by a constitutional people to Aristides. For forty years Dost Mahomed Khan has been the foremost man in all Asia. When Lord Wellesley was Governor-General he first became famous as a boy of fourteen. Since that time he has seen Viceroy after Viceroy pass away from both power and life. He was the ruin of the reputation and health of Lord Auckland, the Governor-General who did so much to injure him. Of all who have ruled Southern Asia from Calcutta while he influenced Central Asia from Cabul, Lord Ellenborough alone survives. Lord Dalhousie, who drove him from Peshawur and extended the British frontier to the Khyber, and Lord Canning, who subsidised him to fight Persia, have disappeared from the theatre in which he has continued, with increasing reputation, to be the chief actor. Born some time between 1788 and 1793 he became master of Cabul and the Douranee empire in 1826. After ruling for thirteen years our nefarious policy drove him from the throne on which he was supported by the mass of his subjects, till a just Nemesis forced us to restore him in 1843. There he reigned, feared by his turbulent sons and nephews and beloved by his people, for twenty years, till at the good old age of seventy or seventy-five, and in the arms of victory, he died on the 20th of May last. Since Asia is never again likely to see such a character, it is well to linger a little over the three distinct periods in his history.

I.—DOST MAHOMED'S YOUTH—1788 to 1826.

Among the mixed Persian and Tartar hordes at whose head Nadir Shah invaded India were the Douranees, so called from their custom of wearing a pearl in the right ear. From the chaos which ensued on the death of Nadir Shah there emerged Ahmed Shah, the head of the Suddozyes, the chief clan of the tribe. Claiming descent, and with some justice, from the great Timour, he established an empire which extended from Herat to Cashmere and Balkh to Sind, embracing Mooltan, Bhawalpore and Peshawur. Next to the Suddozyes in power were the Barukzyes, so that while the sovereignty remained in the hands of the former, the latter supplied the Wuzer or Mayor of the Palace. Thus Ahmed Shah had as his Wuzer, Hadji Jamul Khan; the second King, Timour Shah, had that Wuzer's second son, Poyndah Khan, and the third King, Shah Zemaun, had Poyndah Khan's eldest son, Futtah Khan. The key to the whole history of the Douranee empire, and the kingdom of Cabul which succeeded it, is the hatred which springs of ambition between the Suddozye and Barukzye clans, intensified by a blood feud. If readers ignorant of oriental history will think of the Celtic clans in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries they will appreciate the history of Cabul. Now Poyndah Khan, the second Wuzer, had twenty-one sons, of whom his successor, Futtah Khan, was the eldest, and Dost Mahomed the youngest but one. Among the many sons left by Timour Shah, the second Douranee King, there were incessant contests for the sovereignty. Timour Shah died in 1793, when Dost Mahomed was an infant; and Poyndah Khan, his father, as Wuzer, assisted Shah Zemaun to the throne. But "put not your trust in princes." The King sacrificed Poyndah Khan at the instigation of a man who supplanted him, and this was the first blood feud his sons had to avenge. The murdered man's family lived in great misery, almost as beggars, waiting the hour for vengeance. When it came Futtah Khan, the lawful Wuzer, raised a rebellion, and placed on the throne Shah Mahmoud, who put out the eyes of Shah Zemaun his brother and predecessor. The early years of this century were spent in incessant contests between Shah Mahmoud and his third brother Shah Sujah, with whom the English were in time to become so unfortunately allied. As usual, the hour came for Futtah Khan to fall a victim to the man he had made king, and thus the remaining sons of Poyndah Khan had to avenge at once their father's and their brother's death. The work was done by young Dost Mahomed.

Dost Mahomed's mother was the favourite wife of Poyndah Khan. She was a Kuzzilbash, a fact of great importance to the future of her boy. The Kuzzilbashes are Persian settlers in Afghanistan, and are looked on as low-born mercenaries. But in the days of his struggle for Cabul Dost Mahomed found a ready support from these powerful horsemen, who considered him as one of themselves. Dr. Harlan, the American adventurer who first betrayed him and then became a general in his service, tells us that his mother, like Samuel's, devoted him in infancy to the service of the cenotaph of Lamech, whom Easterns believe to be the father of Noah. His first task was to sweep for a day the sacred enclosure. Like the knights of old, he then became the attendant of his great brother, Futtah Khan, watching his chamber while he slept, and ministering to all his wants. It would be well if we could disbelieve the statement that another brother polluted his boyhood. Dost Mahomed showed his chivalrous devotion to his elder brother when he was only fourteen years of age, first by shooting down one of his enemies in the bazaar of Peshawur, and afterwards by taking Herat in the manner we lately described. His violation of the Douranee harem resulted in his brother's massacre, and the young man, the child of poverty, servitude and debauchery, became an avenging fury with the blood of a father and a brother crying to him for victims. Nothing stopped his career. His predecessors had been content with the subordinate position of Wuzer; his brothers were wrapped in sensuality and sloth; it was his to extirpate the royal Suddozyes and plant himself on the throne, making the Barukzyes the rulers of Afghanistan. Raising an army of retribution, he marched on Cabul, took it, as he did Herat the other day, by a combination of force and stratagem, and installed himself in the Bala Hissar. But the pear was not yet ripe; the Suddozyes were marching against him from Herat; and so, putting one of their family as a puppet on the throne, by treachery he made the hostile army melt away under the very walls of the capital. Partitioning the country among his brothers, he was content with Ghuzni for himself. After an expedition against the Sikhs, which his brothers' treachery made unsuccessful, he again took Cabul, but this time from his brothers, who had obtained possession of the puppet king. In 1826 he ruled from Cabul, his brothers acknowledging his supremacy. A proud moment this for the despised son of the Kuzzilbash woman.

II.—DOST MAHOMED'S MANHOOD—1826 to 1843.

Dost Mahomed was upwards of thirty years of age when he, a Barukzye, became master of all that was left of the Douranee empire. He had risen from poverty, he had lived in pollution, and he had avenged his family's fate by means from which, though only too common in Asia, the man who would maintain any self-respect must shrink. Yet we fail to see that he had done much more than Louis Napoleon on the 3rd of December. Tried by their different standards, he cannot be pronounced the more guilty. Both shed blood after a series of revolutions, with the laudable object, among others, of giving peace and a firm Government to a distracted country which was unfit for anything but a despotism. But Louis Napoleon massacred peaceful citizens by the hands of his despicable agents; Dost Mahomed only drove out the murderers of his nearest relations, and assumed the supreme power when he found his brothers unfit to wield it. Both were lured on by the glory of their predecessors; but Louis Napoleon effected only a bad imitation of his uncle's coup d'état, while Dost Mahomed had to avenge a father's blood among a people at the same stage of civilisation as those in whose case the legislation of Moses sanctioned, while it modified, such vengeance. Both tried to blot out the villainy of the past by entering on a new career, for while Louis Napoleon declared the age of conquest to be past, and has certainly given great material prosperity to France in ten years, Dost Mahomed took a vow of moral reformation, and that vow he has always, for nigh forty years, faithfully observed. He led the life of a virtuous Mahomedan, in one respect excelling the Prophet himself. Illiterate from the misfortunes of his birth, the son of the great Wuzer of the Douranee empire taught himself letters that he might check his agents, might administer justice to his people, and might add to his dignity as a ruler and reputation as a warrior the respect which all Musulmans pay to learning. His chiefs were fain to follow his example, and a new era dawned on Cabul. As he had a powerful faction yet to humble and many conquests before him, his first duty was to attend to his finances. The favoured

Douranees, like the Mahratta inamdars in Western India, had been almost entirely freed from taxation, and by a series of wise exactions he prepared them for bearing their proper share of the burdens of the State, while he stripped them of political importance.

In 1834 Shah Sujah emerged from his obscurity as our pensioner in Loodianah, and with a Eurasian named Campbell at the head of his troops advanced to recover his father's throne. The battle took place at Candahar, and Akbar Khan, Dost Mahomed's famous son, gained the victory. Thus inspirited, Dost Mahomed determined to recover Peshawur, which his brothers had lost to Runjeet Singh, and he proclaimed a holy war against the Sikhs. Refusing the name of king, because he was too poor to support the dignity of even Sirdar, with a mixture of political wisdom and real fanaticism he adopted that title which he rendered so famous—Ameer-al-Mominin, Commander of the Faithful. At the same time he exercised that right of sovereignty, the issue of coinage, stamping on his coin a verse which proclaimed his father's glory and his own humility—"Silver and gold give the happy tidings to the sun and moon that the time has come for the currency of Poyndah Khan's coin." But even as he had taken Cabul the first time by sowing treachery in his enemy's camp, so his great expedition to recover Peshawur and punish the infidel Sikhs was similarly dispersed in one night. Dr. Harlan, acting as an emissary from Runjeet, betrayed him. He found consolation in his favourite Quran, but anew sent forth his forces under his eldest and still surviving son, Afzul Khan, who, with Akbar Khan, took Jumrood and routed the Sikhs.

It was at this time, when he had been now thirteen years ruler of Cabul, that, in spite of the noble Burnes, the English wronged the Ameer and disgraced themselves by taking up the cause of Shah Sujah. The story is only too well-known. So contradictory has our policy been that then we used to subsidise Persia in order to humble Cabul. It has been well said that, if instead of taking up the cause of the hated and imbecile Douranees we had subsidised Dost Mahomed, as we did in 1856, to resist Persia, all the subsequent political and financial disasters of Indian history might have been prevented. For this Dost Mahomed was eager; nay, he would have been content if we had induced Runjeet Singh to allow him to hold Peshawur—his own province—as a Sikh feudatory. But, alas! Lord Palmerston was the victim of Russo-phobia, while he knew as little of the state of Asia as Sir Charles Wood does of India. Sir J. C. Hobhouse and Lord Auckland jumped with his views, and the saddest page of English history was written in blood. Shah Sujah and our army advanced, and Lord Keane took Ghuzni. The Ameer had never been so helpless and at the same time so noble. His brothers failed him; his chiefs forsook him; the bravest and eldest of his sons, Afzul Khan, acted like a coward. Not one would respond to his appeals. Then the Ameer sent an embassy offering to surrender if he were made Wuzer, as his father and grandfather had been, of the Douranee imbecile, Shah Sujah. But only the degraded life of a State pensioner in India was offered to him, and he preferred honour to such disgrace. Leaving his camp and artillery at Urgundah—one thinks of Fontainebleau, but there was no gratitude in the Asiatic—he fled to the Hindoo Koosh. Outram pursued, and through the treachery of a guide failed to capture him. His family became English prisoners, and were to him dead. With Afzul Khan and Akbar Khan, his sons, he took refuge in Bokhara, and only the interference of the Shah of Persia prevented its savage Khan from dooming them to the fate of Conolly and Stoddart. They escaped, the Ameer felt he had yet a wound on his honour to avenge—for he had fled without striking a blow, though to strike was folly; and at the head of deserters from Shah Sujah's force, he defeated our troops at Purwandurrah. It was a defeat that the honest Englishman must rejoice in. Thus having avenged his honour, and trusting his enemy more than his countrymen, he quietly rode into the British camp next day under the walls of Cabul, and placed his sword in Sir W. Macnaughten's hand. He was received as a noble prisoner. The sword was restored, he was told to remount his horse, and English officers who scorned to degrade themselves by visiting "King" Shah Sujah, whom at the order of Lords Palmerston and Auckland they had seated in the Bala Hissar, crowded to present themselves to the Ameer.

He was sent to Calcutta, and on his way he charmed the officers who formed his escort. At Jellalabad, anxious to see how our officers employed their leisure hours, he was invited to the mess after dinner, and there, received as the Viceroy would have been, he spent the evening in pleasant intercourse. Lord Auckland, like his envoy, was now smitten with remorse for his policy, and by his attentions and those of his sisters to the Ameer, strove to solace his captivity. At Barrackpore Dost Mahomed was a frequent visitor. At all public places he was regularly seen; and the journals of the time tell how he used to stop his carriage at sunset, and on the open course worship towards Mecca. Mr. Grant, the artist, published in his Oriental Heads what is decidedly the best portrait of him as he was then. The hot and wet seasons of 1841 disgusted him with the capital, though he never ceased to praise the kindness of its citizens, and he was removed to Mussoorie. There, when the outbreak at Cabul took place, he was strictly watched, though there is no reason to suspect him of any connexion with it. Indeed his son, Akbar Khan, bad as he was, was the best friend the English had at a time when our policy made our officers the objects of hostility. Once out of Cabul Mussulman fatalism was the key to his conduct; and his thorough knowledge of the country made his remark honest, that Shah Sujah was a necessity, for no one else could give a settled government. But Shah Sujah died, the army of retribution returned successful, and Lord Ellenborough proclaimed liberty to the Ameer and his family, though it was only after remonstrances that he spared himself the shame of causing the noble and injured captive to grace his durbar at Ferozepore. Akbar Khan prepared for his father's arrival, and the Ameer quietly stepped into the Bala Hissar. Can we wonder that the Afghans hated us for all the misery we had caused? Can we refrain from astonishment at the self-control of the Ameer who, after suffering at our hand wrongs such as "most Christian kings" would never have pardoned, simply abstained in silence from all connexion with us for many years?

III.—DOST MAHOMED'S OLD AGE—1843 TO 1863.

Dost Mahomed Khan was upwards of fifty years of age when he returned to the throne, on which it would have been for the interest of our empire and all Asia to have strengthened him. After consolidating the administration of the provinces still left to him, in 1848 he nominated Gholam Hyder Khan heir apparent. He thought the second Punjab war a favourable opportunity for recovering the Peshawur valley, and he re-occupied it for a time. But when the cause of the Khalsa was for ever lost at Gojrat, and our armies were triumphant to the Koorum, he fled, leaving the Khyber between us. This conduct, however, we overlooked, having not only quite enough on our hands, but owing a debt to the Ameer which we never could pay. In 1850 the only provinces which he had, yielding him a revenue of fifteen lakhs of rupees, were Cabul, Ghuznee, Jellalabad, and the Koh Duman. To this had our policy reduced the Lord of the Douranee empire, which used to be bounded only by the Indus and Turkistan. He had several brothers and their large families to provide for, besides fifteen sons of his own. For this his revenue did not suffice, besides Persia was ever tempting his brothers and nephews to oppose him, and intriguing with him to annoy us. This he did to a slight extent by stirring up the tribes on our frontier—for was not Peshawur his? But at a time when there was a Persian envoy in his court, he sent to us at last in 1854 a proposal for an alliance. It was the case of the Russian envoy, Vivovich, and Burnes over again, but on this occasion experience had taught us. Lord Dalhousie returned a favourable answer, and in March, 1855, Gholam Hyder Khan concluded a treaty with us at Peshawur, in which "the Wallee of Cabul and of all those countries of Afghanistan now in his possession" agreed to be "the friend of the friends and enemy of the enemies of the Hon. East India Company." Meanwhile he and his sons were carrying on the work of annexation, or rather of restoration. Afzul Khan had recovered Balkh, and when the news of the Treaty spread, its discontented nobles and the Ghilzies ceased to give trouble. While the Ameer himself took Kelat-i-Ghilzi and Candahar, his sons added Kooloom, Ackelah, Koondooz, and the four districts of Sirripool, Shihbergham, Maimunna and Audkhoo. The old Khan of Bokhara and those of Khiva and Kokan ceased to annoy Cabul, and Persia was checked for the moment. After the Treaty we waived our right to the valley of Dour which Shah Sujah had given to the Sikhs, and the Ameer occupied it.

In October, 1856, the Persians took Herat and invited the Ameer to join them. But on New Year's day of that fatal year 1857, the old Ameer had a personal interview with Sir John Lawrence, and a second Treaty was made under which the Ameer received 8,000 muskets, and a lakh of rupees every month, to assist in opposing Persia, while Colonel Lumsden's mission went to Candahar to guarantee the proper application of the subsidy. Dost Mahomed thus received 26 lakhs, and the sum was not much to pay for the quiet of Cabul in 1857 and 1858. But for that subsidy the Ameer must have appeared at Junrood against us. In July, 1858, the heir apparent died, and Shere Ali Khan, a son of the same (Douranee) mother was appointed. He is now Ameer. Colonel Lumsden's mission was withdrawn in June, 1858, and immediately Russian traders appeared on the Oxus, surveyed it, and obtained a serai in Bokhara. In 1859, Koondooz was completely subjugated and Badakshan followed. In 1864, Sultan Jan, the Ameer's nephew and son-in-law, who was made independent ruler of Herat, in 1857, prompted by Persia and anticipating the early dissolution of his uncle, who had almost yielded to an attack of cholera, invaded Afghan territory nominally in defence of a Cabul feudatory, and was at once repelled by the Ameer in person. Sultan Jan took Furrakh by treachery in March, 1862, but the Ameer shut him up in Herat, which he blockaded during the winter. Sultan Jan died, but his son, Shanawaz Khan, continued the struggle with the moral support of Persia. On the 26th of May, however, after nine months' siege, Herat was taken by assault aided by treachery. The Ameer died three days after, but not before he had fulfilled his pledge to take a city which is an integral part of the Douranee territory, and which he had captured for his brother, the Douranee Wuzeer, in his youthful days. He had invested Shere Ali Khan with sword and turban, and implored his sons to remain united.

DOST MAHOMED'S CHARACTER.

The most prominent feature in the character of Dost Mahomed is self-control, a quality seldom met with in any conqueror and perhaps never in an Asiatic Mussulman ruler. The combined seductions of power, climate and creed are irresistible. Only the presence in Asia of such solid and invulnerable powers as England in the south, and Russia in the north, prevented Dost Mahomed from, becoming one of those whom we may term first-class conquerors—Kublai Khan, Gheughis Khan, Mahomoud, Timour, Bajazet, and Nadir Shah. But there is that in his whole career which leads us to believe that, even had he been like them a universal conqueror, he would have been unlike them in throwing off all restraint, all fear of God and his own conscience. If we look at such European conquerors as Alexander and Napoleon we see the same want of self-control. Contrasting Dost Mahomed with any of the second-class conquerors we see at once his immense superiority. What are Sivajee, Hyder Tippoo and Runjeet Sing compared with him? Like Jung Bahadoor he passed to power through a slough of blood and immorality, but when we consider the training of his youth and the blood he, a Barukzye and Mussulman, had to avenge, we marvel at his restraint. And when in 1826 he became for the first time a responsible ruler, and took the vow of reformation, he entered on a career of honest endeavour to govern his people justly and restore the prestige of his country wisely. Before old age forced him to leave his provinces in the hands of his sons, Afghanistan was far better governed than any Asiatic state north of the Himalayas has been in all history. We must not compare his administration with that of British India now, but rather with that of feudal Europe or of a Roman province in Asia, and Dost Mahomed will not suffer much by the comparison. Even Colonel Lumsden, who describes its worst features at a time when old age had fettered the great Chief, describes his people as constantly praying "that the life of the Ameer may be preserved." When we say that, while possessing a mastery of self unprecedented in an Asiatic ruler, Dost Mahomed had all the physical and social attractions which make an Asiatic successful—a tall figure, which even three score and ten years had only slightly bent; a graceful carriage; a manly countenance; a frank address; chivalrous honour more than ordinary Asiatics can comprehend; that reckless dash which soldiers love; a judgment quick to decide and will resolute to do; while as a ruler his first desire was always to administer substantial justice—we have sketched a character without a parallel in Asiatic history. All authorities, from such writers as Harlan and Mohun Lal to the English officers and travellers who have associated with him, bear the same testimony as his subjects.

THE PRESENT STATE OF PARTIES.

Before the Ameer died he placed his grandson, Mahomed Ali Khan, son of the heir apparent, in charge of Herat, but summoned his eldest son, Afzul Khan, from Balkh to aid in consolidating the conquest. The most reliable information possessed by our Government shows that there are three parties in Afghanistan. The first consists of Shere Ali Khan, the new Ameer, and his brother Mahomed Sheriff Khan. The second is composed of the two sons of the famous Akbar Khan—Futteh Mahomed Khan and Jullal ooddeen Khan. The third is led by Mahomed Azim Khan, Mahomed Aslam Khan, and Mahomed Osman Khan. To these must be added the Persians as a fourth element in the coming, or perhaps raging struggle. Up to the last intelligence the Shah had made no sign of an attempt to regain Herat, but he had an army of 45,000 men in the vicinity of Moshed. The characters and policy of these three parties we shall sketch hereafter. They are well worth careful study, and events will probably soon make us only too familiar with them.—Friend of India.

"THE BURNEY FOLLY."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "FRIEND OF INDIA."

SIR,—As you have published an article from the Army and Navy Gazette, with the above words as your own selected title to the extract, and so you have, in a way, endorsed its suspicions and insinuations, you cannot, in justice, refuse the appearance in your columns of a few lines which may show the faulty information supplied to the editor of that journal. You are on the spot and can soon learn from any one who has been present at the examinations of the witnesses in the High Court, whether the admissions and contradictions now to be made with reference to the article in question, can be substantiated or not. The remaining points in the article I do not intend to notice; meanwhile, neither Colonel Willis, nor Captain Eyre, can deny that the article in question is deceiving the public on the following facts.

Granted, that Colonel Willis was ordered up the country, but it is a pure simple assertion, on the part of Colonel Willis and his friends to say that Brigadier Burney took advantage of that officer's absence to write a letter, which he would not have done had Colonel Willis been present at Dinapore; publish the offensive letter, and point out the offence in it. It has been a deliberate purpose of the conspiracy to which the editor of the Army and Navy Gazette unconsciously alludes, when he says "Colonel Willis was determined to bring Brigadier Burney to a court-martial or to make him resign his command." It was shown in court that it was a deliberate purpose for certain persons to withhold the letter complained of from Colonel Burney, in order to add to the difficulties of his position; over and over again Colonel Burney denied any intended insult, and he asked for a sight of that letter, as he had forgotten some of the terms of it; and the long missing letter (not Mrs. Willis's answer to it) was only produced in court on Captain Eyre's examination. Let that letter, word for word, be published for the general public, and it will then be more manifest what a cruel charge the Commander-in-Chief brought against its author, when his Excellency Sir Hugh Rose called it "disgraceful," without ever having read it himself.

True, Colonel Willis threatened to return to Dinapore on hearing of that letter; but it is not true that he ever went there, or that Colonel Burney then left Dinapore. But Colonel Willis knows that Colonel Burney had applied for private leave, but that, on receiving Colonel Willis's missive, he remained at Dinapore, as he looked upon that missive as something in the light of a challenge. Colonel Willis also changed his mind and remained quiet at Darjeeling, as he found it wiser to send in a complaint to some one behind Colonel Burney's back, than to carry out his threat.

True, that Colonel Gordon was mixed up in this matter; but let us wait for the publication of a copy of his cross-examination. He may not like the world to know some of the strange admissions he made, but we shall then know better the value of his testimony.

It seems but a slight inaccuracy to notice, but the truth had better be adhered to even in a little matter; Colonel Gordon is no "relative" of Col. or Mrs. Willis, but it may turn out that he is only one of those judicious friends who meddle in and make a mess of things.

It may be true, as the article now commented on says, that "Captain Eyre was an intimate friend of Colonel Willis;" but, perhaps, it may not be true now that he is Captain Eyre's "intimate friend." Colonel Willis cannot deny that truer friends of his have told him, with reference to Captain Eyre's conduct—"Save me from my friends." But to go on with the unjust article complained of. Is it really true that Captain Eyre threatened to horsewhip his superior and commanding officer? This is a question before a Court; yet Colonel Burney denies it indignantly. His oath is to be weighed against Captain Eyre's. But surely the Commander-in-Chief could not have believed it to have been true, or he would manifestly have brought Captain Eyre to trial for such a breach of discipline. General Campbell, moreover, could not have released such an offender from the arrest under which Capt. Eyre had been placed by Colonel Burney himself, if he thought the prisoner had been guilty. It was Colonel Burney's most anxious desire that the charge preferred against him, viz., that he, Captain Eyre, had threatened to horsewhip him, when Captain Eyre had not done so! should undergo a searching enquiry before a competent tribunal. The proceedings of the High Court will give us soon an account of Captain Eyre's "succinct account." We shall see, too, what the "searching enquiry" really was and the circumstances connected with the orders to resign the apologies, &c.

Colonel Burney's "folly" was to adopt the views of his friends and resign his command: that was the fatal mistake which he made. Had he stood his trial, the world would have known a portion of what now has come out in the High Court already.

Colonel Burney was forced to appeal to the High Court, because he had memorialised in vain for enquiry, and it was only when Captain Eyre was about to embark for England with the sanction of Sir Hugh Rose, that he was forced to lay his plaint against the chief offender, who had been the cause of all his anxieties.

I am told that General Campbell is the cause of the delay in the trial. His replies to certain questions put by the lawyers may help, when produced, to throw a little more light on the way on which Courts of Enquiry are conducted, and how "succinct accounts" of charges are concocted and made behind the backs of those accused. Although it may be more than a "suspicious" zeal which made General Campbell decline to appear as a witness in court, on the plea of the exigencies of the service, still I applaud his tact. I think if he had come under cross-examination of either Bell or Doyne, he would remember the occurrence but once, and that is, all his life. Colonel Willis has only himself to thank, that these points are thus noticed with regard to the information which has been supplied to the editor of the Army and Navy Gazette. It was a pity that the informants of the editor of the Army and Navy Gazette did not also furnish the fact, that Colonel Willis would have been much obliged to Colonel Burney if the plaint against Captain Eyre had not been filed, as the overture made by Colonel Willis to Colonel Burney, through a mutual friend, will tend to elucidate.—I remain, yours faithfully, — FAIR PLAY.

Our Serampore contemporary cannot be complimented for his frank and generous demeanour. He states that he has consistently declined to make any comments on Colonel Burney's suit in the Bengal High Court, so long as the case is before the judge. Had he acted in this manner, not a word could have been said against the propriety of such reticence, but was it not equivalent to a comment to head the article he extracted from the Army and Navy Gazette, "The Burney Folly?" He now says that he prefixed that heading because Brigadier Burney "declined to stand the offered court martial," and because some Indian journals have not scrupled to write upon the case while still in court, in such a manner as to prejudice the public against Colonel Willis and Captain Eyre. The explanation will not hold water for a moment. In the first place, Brigadier Burney was offered a court of inquiry, not a court-martial; and secondly, if every other journal in the country had acted in an irregular manner, that could be no excuse for a violation of decorum on the part of the Friend. Least of all, could the improprieties of Indian journalists justify the sneering comment on the brigadier's case, implied by the heading given to the extract from the London military paper. There has clearly been a want of temper and discretion in our contemporary's allusion to this affair.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 21.

PROPOSED INTRODUCTION OF ENGLISH MACHINERY INTO INDIA.

The present time is most opportune for offering to the agricultural population of India, the mechanical inventions of more civilised people. Even if we had not the recorded opinion of so "old an inhabitant" as Mr. Pycroft that the Hindu is not more bigoted and obstructive than the Somersetshire Chawbacon, any argument founded on the manner in which he has heretofore received similar offers are beside the question. The conditions are not the same; labour possesses now an extraordinary value, and when the bullocks are badly wanted at the plough, and the woman is urgently called to assist at the picking, other means than the old-fashioned ones now in use will be found to thrash the corn, and the wheel and axe will very soon be employed to expedite the buckett from the bottom of the well. We do not, of course, suppose that the wonders which have been wrought at home by mechanical inventions will be repeated in this country. Indeed, it is not from England that we are likely to get machines adapted for general use in India. France, Italy, Belgium, and Switzerland, where the small-farm system predominates, are the localities in which simple useful implements adapted to the Hindooriot are likely to be found. A Howard's plough or harrows in miniature, such as we see exhibited in the Museum, are not the sort of tools which will find favour with Indian cultivators. We cannot expect English mechanicians to invent machines or implements to fulfil conditions with which they are wholly unacquainted, nor can we be surprised if native peasants look coldly on contrivances invented in total ignorance of their real wants. We must go to countries whose system of agriculture and whose general condition bear some analogy to India in order to find those machines which the ryots are likely to adopt with advantage to themselves and to the country at large. In the countries we have named, and especially in Italy, mechanical contrivances abound, simple, indeed almost rude, in construction, but most efficient for the purposes to which they are applied. No such hideous misapplication of animal power as the well, the inclined plain, and the pair of bullocks backing up the hill to let down the bucket is visible to the traveller. A wheel fixed vertically with a chain or rope carrying buckets on its circumference is turned by a small horse or bullock, and probably draws as much water in an hour as the Indian monstrosity does in a day. We would suggest to his Excellency that an application might be made through the ambassadors to the countries we have named for models of the various machines and implements used by their agricultural inhabitants. He will probably derive from these sources much more valuable information than it is in the power of English implement-makers wrapt up in the consideration of the wants of large farmers to give him. There is one application of water power common in some districts of Southern Italy which might be easily brought into use in the hill districts of India especially. A chamber in the shape of a lime-kiln of large size is constructed, into which a stream is led sometimes for miles along the side of a valley; a pipe is fixed obliquely at the bottom of the kiln, and has a wooden plug attached to it. A wheel, a common cart-wheel, sometimes does duty, is fixed on a spindle, which is continued vertically through two mill-stones and fixed to the upper stone. When the plug is withdrawn, the water rushes out against the wide spokes of the wheel with a force due to the "head" in the chamber and the capacity of the latter is sufficiently great to keep up a good supply. The rudest carpenter, assisted by an equally rude mason, could build and fit the whole contrivance. A collection of models of simple machines and appliances of this kind, if exhibited and explained in the various schools throughout the Presidency, would well repay the cost and trouble of their introduction, and the contrivances being the growth of conditions somewhat similar to our own, might gradually, under the pressure of high wages and prices, become popular amongst the ryots, and generally adopted in their operations.—Madras Times, July 24.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NANA.—The suggestion of our Hare-street contemporary, (the Englishman) that the Nana should in the first instance be put upon his trial for high treason, rather than for murder; is, in every respect, an excellent one. After the lapse of so many years, and the utter dispersion of the witnesses, it might not be a very easy matter to obtain legal proof that it was he who gave the order for the massacre of the Cawnpore garrison, or for the still more atrocious slaughter of the women and children. We also perfectly agree with our contemporary in deprecating any revival of the old thirst for revenge. It is truly far better to forget what can never be forgiven, than to recall "the scenes connected with that horrible well at Cawnpore. Besides, a higher moral lesson will be taught by the public execution of the unloyal and treacherous vassal, than by the gibbeting of a vulgar murderer. The adopted son of the last of the Peishwas, ending by an ignominious death a life of sensuality, bloodshed, and treason, will be as a warning beacon to other ambitious and unscrupulous grandees, to count up the costs before they engage in a struggle with the paramount Power. They will learn that the gratification of vindictive feelings is an expensive luxury, and not to be indulged in too rashly. The common people, too, will see that the British Government is no respecter of persons, but as ready to visit with condign punishment the highest in the land as the lowest, and to make no distinction between a miscreant who claims to represent a princely line and the humblest of its subjects, if equally guilty. As a traitor, then, let the Nana Dhundoo Punt be arraigned, and, if his guilt be proved, let him be hanged as a traitor on a gallows tree as lofty as that which Haman erected for Mordecai. We assume, of course, that Captain Nuttall's prisoner is really the Nana, but his identity has certainly not yet been sufficiently made out to justify such a conclusion. The balance of evidence, however, is in favour of the genuineness of the prize, and in a very few days all doubt on the subject will probably be removed.—Hurkaru.

TOPOGRAPHICAL SURVEY.—The Gazette of July 22 contained an official correspondence relative to the topographical survey of "the spur of hill country lying between the Valley of Assam on the north, and Mymensing, Sylhet, and Cachar on the south, and extending from the western extremity of the Garro Hills to the eastern boundary of North Cachar." This laborious task is to be commenced in October next, under the direction of Captain Godwin Austen, "an accomplished officer of several years' experience in the Kashmir survey." The annual charges are estimated at Rs. 61,414, but as six months of the current financial year will have expired before active operations are begun, only the moiety of that sum will need to be included in the budget for 1863-64. In sanctioning this outlay, the President in Council remarks, through the medium of the Home Secretary to the Government of India, that he "is not sure how far the tract of country which it is proposed to survey is likely to attract the attention of European settlers, or to what extent the land is available for disposal to such persons; but if the Lieutenant-Governor should consider that the settlement of Europeans in the tract in question can be advantageously encouraged, he will doubtless cause the survey to be so conducted that it may be practically available in furtherance of that object."—Hurkaru, July 23.

THE COMMITTEE OF THE PUNJAB EXHIBITION are compelled to appeal to the public for contributions to the prize fund. At present they have only two thousand rupees at their disposal, and this insignificant sum they divide into a thousand shares, or parts, of which 340 are assigned to raw produce, 450 to manufactures, 110 to machinery, and 70 to the fine arts. That is to say, they have only 140 rupees to lay out on prizes for the last-mentioned department, and thus they find themselves constrained to ask for pecuniary assistance from well-wishers to the Exhibition. This is certainly an ignominious position to be placed in, and says very little for the management of this novel undertaking. Is the glory departing from the Punjab? Are its giants shrinking to the proportions of their neighbours? Or is it simply that a delusive glamour has hitherto enveloped the model province? Private individuals, we observe, are coming forward with small prizes for particular articles, but not at all on the scale of the forthcoming Exhibition at Belvedere.

DR. DUFF.—The Rev. Dr. Duff, having recovered from his serious illness sufficiently to be removed, has left for Singapore and Java. After inspecting the various Free Church Missions in India, he will return to Bengal at the close of the year, and then finally bid farewell to India, where he has spent a third of a century in a work of self-denying usefulness, more important and more fruitful of results than any other public or private man can boast of.—Friend of India. The Phoenix, in noticing Dr. Duff's state of health, says:—"Dr. Duff has done more for the educational advancement of the people of this country than any man of the time. With the schools immediately connected with the mission of which the reverend Doctor is the head, Christian teaching is necessarily inseparably associated. A result has, therefore, been that the efforts of Dr. Duff are regarded by many natives as tending to the triumph of Christianity, and not to their own political elevation. They must be shallow thinkers who think thus, for than Christianity there is no more potent elevator of communities.

Whatever may be said of Christianity, few will deny its enfranchising tendency, or the impossibility of keeping a Christian people in unresisting slavery. Men not afraid to inquire 'Is this the true Deity?' are not likely to shrink from closely canvassing the merits of their governors. Were the mass of the natives of India Christian, all possibility of political distinctions between them and the British-born subjects of Her Majesty would have ceased. Even the Southern planter understands this tendency of missionary effort, and prohibits the Christianizing of his slaves, making it a crime to teach them to read the Christian book. And, remembering that missionaries have braved danger even unto death, rather than cease to bore for the emancipation and elevation of the negro, the people of this country should not require to be told that, though of another faith, there never came amongst them a true missionary who was not also their political friend."

THE BENGAL PRINTING COMPANY.—In the dearth of more exciting topics, all Calcutta, from Chowringhee to Clitpore, is discussing the much-vexed subject of joint-stock companies. An action brought by the directors of the Bengal Printing Company "Limited," against their late secretary Mr. Roussac, has revealed a state of things so exceedingly disgraceful, that a Judge of the High Court felt it his duty to stigmatise the management of that company in terms of unmitigated severity. The manner in which this company was got up is a fair illustration of the joint-stock mania as it is exhibited in Calcutta. An individual of the mixed race having proved "unfortunate" in business in Bombay, removes the scene of his further operations to Calcutta, and there looks about him for coadjutors and victims. Being a person of considerable "smartness," he conceived and realised the idea of starting a printing company to maintain himself in a certain degree of affluence. Reserving for himself the post of secretary and general-manager with a fixed salary of Rs. 500 a month and a commission of five per cent. on all work done, and that of accountant for his son-in-law, Mr. Roussac gathered around him a board of directors consisting of respectable tradesmen, and presided over by a Mr. Jennings, Messrs. Osler and Co.'s head shopman, and who has since been appointed a member of the Legislative Council of Bengal. Although a fair amount of business seems to have been done, it was not enough to satisfy the requirements of the secretary, and accordingly we find that individual supplementing his income by means of loans on the security of property belonging to the company. There is abundant evidence to show that the directors were aware of his irregular proceedings, though not to their full extent. They were also aware that, although shares were quoted at 70 premium, there would be no dividend payable at the close of the year. Being "smart" men of business, they sold out at a favourable opportunity, and Mr. Jennings repudiates the idea of being answerable for the laches of the direction, because he disqualified in the month of October and the balance-sheet was not made out till the end of December. Undoubtedly, he is not guilty of the shameful deception that was practised upon the shareholders in distributing a printed balance-sheet from which an important item was omitted, but he and his co-directors are distinctly answerable for their general neglect of the company's interest, and for not taking steps to remove a secretary who assumed the airs of a master. Mr. Justice Morgan, at least, appears to have held this opinion, for he denounced their conduct in no measured terms. Under the present direction there may, perhaps, be a better chance for the future success of the Bengal Printing Company, and its shares are still quoted at a premium, notwithstanding this exposure of its affairs, and the fact that no dividend has been declared for the past half-year.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 29.

COST OF PUBLIC EDUCATION IN INDIA.—Making a rough comparison between the State expenditure on education in India and at home, we find that the British Government expends about one shilling per inhabitant on education and the Indian Government one half-penny. Even this is stating the case far too favourably towards India as the British public supplement the Government grant by several millions sterling while the contribution of the Indian public except for the principle involved in it, is scarcely worth notice. In Bengal there are 816 schools, under Government support and inspection, attended by 50,000 pupils. Thus there is about one school to every 50,000 of the population and twelve in every 10,000 of the population go to school. The cost to Government of educating a scholar is 16 rupees per annum. In Bombay there are 680 schools attended by 36,750 pupils. In Madras there are 579 Government or aided schools attended by 23,965 pupils; the population is 23,000,000. In the North Western Provinces, education is more popular; there are 10,086 schools with 174,689 scholars. The yearly expenditure is about four and a-half lakhs, and the population 33,000,000, thus giving an expenditure of about 1½ farthing per head. In the Punjab there are 1,808 schools attended by about 35,000 scholars. The cost of the most elementary education is 4½ rupees per annum for each scholar, and to instruct the whole youthful population even up to the lowest standard would require according to Captain Fuller a yearly grant of nearly one million sterling. The population is 14,794,611 souls. Comparatively little is known of popular education in Oudh. There are a few schools for the upper classes aided by Government and attended very irregularly by 327 pupils. Taking the whole of British India then with its population of 150,000,000, we may state broadly that less than 400,000 in the country, or one in 375 of its inhabitants go to school, and that in the most advanced provinces the scholars number only one in 1,000 of the population. And as the educational grant is about £400,000, each scholar costs the state £1 per annum.—Madras Times.

THE PIONEER SIKHS.—A well-informed correspondent writes as follows in regard to the above body of men:—"I do think that the management of the Punjabees generally has been a mistake. Firmness and consideration would have gained the day. They should have been put to earth-cutting, and such other work as agriculturists generally are not ignorant of, instead of to stone-breaking—a species of labour which, popular enough with old road coolies, is never taken to at once by fresh arrivals. They have been no more enlisted under false pretences than Mootoosamy, Veeran, or any other men brought down for road or estate work. But they did expect, in addition to being employed upon the roads, to be drilled and armed as the pioneers in India all are. This might be done, and our military expenditure relieved by making these men, as a relaxation from road labour, take the Cutcherry and gaol guards at out-stations. The men are amenable enough to discipline, but they must not be trifled with, or taught to believe that we are afraid of, and cannot punish them. Their food, costing some 7d. a day, should be supplied at a fixed rate—say 4½d. or 5d. a day, as is done with rice on coffee estates; but their pay should not be raised above the rate fixed for the old pioneers. Much of the dissatisfaction at present existing, I learn, is owing to the non-settlement of their arrears of pay (Major MacMullen's accounts, it is said, not having been received) and the question of cost of food. In the Punjab they receive 14s. per mensem, food costing from 5s. to 7s. Here the pay is 20s., cost of food 18s.; so that, instead of making money more rapidly here than at home, they will not do it as rapidly. Show these men consideration, and they will do more work in the course of time than any men that have been yet imported; for, physically, they are a superior race, and at the same time a very intelligent one."—Colombo Observer, July 23.

TROOPS FOR JAPAN.—The Allahabad Gazette learns "on excellent authority," that Lord Elgin has received orders to despatch ten thousand troops—half of whom are to be Europeans—to Japan, should the Japanese decline the ultimatum that has been submitted to them.

THE HEALTH OF THE 77TH REGIMENT has much improved since they have been in camp. No fresh cases of cholera have occurred.

THE NEW MUNICIPALITY OF CALCUTTA, we observe, has commenced operations, and as a preliminary measure, has laid before the rate-payers a rough estimate of income and expenditure for the ensuing half-year, prepared by the president—or rather chairman of the body, as the Act designates him, from which we learn that the city of palaces will have to bear burthens that make our own, so much complained of, appear light in comparison. For example, the half-year's house rate collections, at 10 per cent., are set down as Rs. 3,25,000; the Licence Tax returns as Rs. 1,66,516; the Wheel and Horse Tax at Rs. 45,000; and the Lighting Rates at Rs. 66,000; to all of which, we suppose, a Water Rate will be added by-and-bye. Taking account of the aggregate of these imposts, something more than six lakhs of rupees leviable in as many months, we cannot help marvelling at the slight concern manifested by the citizens of Calcutta, when the Bill which sanctions them was passing through council. Nothing like a serious opposition was ever thought of, and indeed no attention whatever seemed to have been paid to the subject, until the Bengal Council pointedly noticed the public indifference, and accepted it as a sign of consent; which they were perfectly justified in doing. How the population will relish the pressure brought to bear on them when the screw is fully turned, remains to be seen, but we shall feel surprised if they do not begin to complain and kick under it, as our fellow-citizens assuredly will do when the time comes, as it soon must do, for a similar though less oppressive extra demand on their pockets. They, however, are not likely to let any measure of the kind pass so easily through council here, as did the Municipal Act in Bengal.—Madras Athenæum.

BHORE GHAT INCLINE.—Mr. A. A. West, C.E., has prepared a suggestive memorandum on the construction of the Bhore Ghat Incline lately opened. In November, 1860, the number of work people amounted to upwards of 30,000, of whom 10,822 were drillers, and 2,659 masons. This number was still farther increased, and in March, 1861, there were over 42,000 upon the works. During the last three years there was no scarcity of labour, and many applicants were refused. The attractions were—a provision either in money or time for building huts; a liberal supply of water at the contractors' expense; an arrangement by which the bazaar rates for grain and other necessities were equalised over the whole contract; regular payment of wages at an early date under the personal superintendence of the chief managers, into the hands of each individual employed; a strict inquiry into all complaints by the work people; no fines except dismissal, but a system of prompt rewards for extra exertion; and gratuitous medical assistance. Thirty-three different classes of men were employed; the most numerous were drillers and common labourers, then masons. The rates of wages of all classes below the foremen, varied from 1½ annas, or 2½ pence to 1½ rupees, or three shillings a-day. Accidents were rare. During the past 3½ years 6,000 shots were fired daily, and 2½ tons powder consumed in blasting operations. The quantity of patent fuse consumed, amounts to 1,177,600 yards, or 669 miles in length. Of the common country fuse prepared as required upon the works, more than three times that quantity was used. Indian engineers may well be proud of this work, which excels the Semmering.—Friend of India.

THE LATE PROPRIETOR OF THE "PHENIX."—The friends and supporters of this journal will regret to hear of the death of its proprietor, Mr. Joseph Cones (for some years back the sole member of the well-known firm of Sanders, Cones and Co.) which took place at his residence on the night of Tuesday last. The deceased carried with him to his grave the affectionate regret of his every relative, and of a very wide circle of friends. It is not the rule to give prominent notice in the columns of a public journal of the disappearance from this life of a private individual; but the late Mr. Cones, by his conduct through a course of years, as a newspaper proprietor, certainly entitles himself to such obituary honour. We knew Mr. Cones, as proprietor of the Phoenix, off and on, through nine years, and during that period we never knew him desirous the influence of the journal should be wielded to his own private advantage, or, in any respect, otherwise than for the public good. A newspaper proprietor less inclined to interfere with the conscientious discharge of editorial duty, or less likely to be influenced by others into doing so contrary to the opinions of the responsible conductors of his journal, there was not in India, or anywhere else. No matter how boldly or fearlessly disinterested might be the course the editorial staff of the journal chose to follow, its proprietor was never the one to attempt to restrain them, or to say, "By acting differently you would perhaps serve my interests better!" The death of a proprietor of this stamp calls for an expression of editorial regret, and such with all the additional respect due to the repute of the dead, we most sincerely accord.

CABOOL, 7th Mohurram (June 25).—The following letter from Shere Allee Khan, regarding the death of the Ameer, was received by Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan:—"In my last I wrote to you about the Ameer's death, and requested you to keep the news concealed until further orders. Now you can make the news public, and spread the carpet of mourning to receive the people to read the Fataha. I am happy to say that my brother, Sirdar Mohamed Auzum Khan, and other Sirdars, have acknowledged me as their superior, and are all obeying my orders. We have appointed Sirdar Mohamed Yakoo Khan, Nuzzur Mohamed Khan, the son of late Sirdar Shumshooddeen Khan, Mohamed Ruffee Khan, and Mohamed Ullum Khan, the son of late Sirdar Syud Mohamed Khan, to rule Heerat, and ordered two battalions and two thousand sowars to remain in Heerat under their command. After we have granted Khilluts to the Heerat chiefs, and have made other arrangements for the city, we shall leave this for Cabool via Huzara Dahzungee."

MORE BISHOPS.—We (Indian Empire) would propose the sub-division of this vast diocese (Calcutta) not really into two, as has long been talked of, and was frequently urged upon the late Government by the late Bishop of Calcutta, but into four; one with Bengal proper and Assam for its limits, another for the North Western Provinces with its seat at Allahabad; a third for the Punjab, with its seat at Lahore; a fourth with the Brumhapootra for its western limit and the Tenneserim provinces for its southern, and its seat at Moulmein; while the Straits Settlements might be most judiciously placed under the Bishop of Labuan. Thus should we take Christian possession of the country, and evince a zeal for the advancement of our faith not less inferior to that displayed by the Church of Rome. We have not the slightest objection to the Calcutta diocese being broken up into forty bishoprics, instead of four, if the division is thought desirable, so long as the funds for their maintenance do not come out of the Indian revenues. Let those who want more bishops pay for them.

CASH BALANCES.—The following is a statement of cash balances as reported in the Government Treasuries in India at the close of the month of May last, contrasted with that of the previous years:—

THE 101ST REGIMENT.—We (Delhi Gazette) hear that his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge has, at the urgent recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, promoted Major Salusbury to the lieutenant-colonelcy of the 101st Regiment.

MEERUT, July 12.—The table-talk here just now is the removal of General Beatson from the command of the Meerut division. Some ill-natured people attribute it to spite on the part of the Commander-in-chief, owing to General Beatson, it is said, having in a rather pointed manner contradicted his Excellency in some correspondence that passed between them some 14 months ago. I do not, of course, believe this, nor will any one who knows Sir Hugh Rose. But whatever the cause, it does seem strange that General Beatson, who is no less appreciated for his social virtues than for his soldier-like qualities, should have been so summarily displaced to make room for Brigadier Troup, who is by many years his junior, but no less a popular man and distinguished soldier. It is true that Beatson's appointment was only an officiating one, but having held it for nearly six months, and acquitted himself most creditably, it was naturally expected that he would have continued it, till at least the return of General Wheler from sick leave. But we may be sure that the Chief has good and sufficient reason for what he has done. The decision lately given in the High Court of Calcutta, in re Burney versus Eyre, being in favour of Colonel Burney, will, in a measure, affect the position of Brigadier Macpherson, now commanding at Agra. You will remember that the cause of quarrel arose at Dinapore, where at the time Burney was commanding the station, and Macpherson the 10th N.I. The two could not agree on matters of duty, and it appears that, on the representation of Colonel Hinde and some other officers of the 10th, Burney was at length compelled to hand Macpherson up to General Campbell, commanding the Benares division, on a charge of systematic ill-treatment of the sepoy, going the length of shaking his fist in their faces, and abusing them. This representation, which was intended for submission to the Commander-in-Chief, never reached head-quarters, and it was broadly asserted that it had been burked between the General and Macpherson. Ultimately, however, it did find its way through some unknown channel to Sir Hugh Rose. What notice Sir Hugh took of it did not transpire, perhaps none, since it was a clandestine communication; but ever since then Burney had reason to suspect that his character and influence as brigadier were being undermined by a clique, of which he suspected Macpherson to be the chief, and Colonel Gordon, 10th N.I., the principal member. Nothing, however, occurred to bring about an open rupture, till that memorable ball given by H.M.'s 38th at Dinapore. At this ball he was accused by Lieutenant Eyre, Adjutant of the 38th, of taking too many liberties with Mrs. Willis, wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Willis, of the same regiment, who was then away at Darjeeling. Not minding this, Burney wrote the following morning that celebrated note to Mrs. Willis in which he commented with the familiarity, or privilege, of an old man on low-neck dresses, flirtations, &c., &c. Mrs. Willis was living at the time with the said colonel and Mrs. Gordon, and the latter being alluded to in the P.S., managed to obtain a peep all through the note. Her modesty was shocked, and Eyre was deputed to demand satisfaction from Burney. Hence arose that great Dinapore scandal which ended in the deposition of Burney from his brigadiership, and the accession to the appointment of Colonel Macpherson. Burney was grossly wronged, and failing to obtain redress from the Commander-in-Chief, appealed to the High Court of Calcutta, bringing an action against Captain Eyre for defamation, and laying his damages at Rs. 50,000. Eyre, however, immediately after his examination by Sir Mordaunt Wells, went away to England on sick certificate, leaving ample securities for the money. Several overtures were made to Burney by Colonel Willis, through Major Gilbert at Barrackpore, to stay proceedings; but Burney, very properly, determinedly carried them through, and all lovers of justice and fair-play must now rejoice at the result of a complete triumph, as it is, for him. Now, the questions which naturally suggest themselves are—Will Burney be reinstated in his brigadiership of Dinapore? Will Brigadier Macpherson be called to account for the part he took against Burney, more especially after Burney was put out of his appointment, and he put into it? There can be no doubt that the Commander-in-Chief and the Government must make some amends for the loss of reputation, dignity, and emoluments which has been endured by Colonel Burney through the false representations that were made against him; and the hasty, unfair, and harsh manner in which Sir Hugh Rose so unaccountably acted on them, now that his character has been thoroughly cleared, and more especially of all those imputations on which was founded the reason for his summary dismissal.

NEW COMPANIES.—A short time since we announced that a Company had been started in Bombay, entitled the "Bombay Shipping Company," the object being to establish a line of first-class iron ships to trade between Bombay and Liverpool. The shares were eagerly bought up, and are now reported to be worth from Rs. 6,000 to Rs. 7,000 premium. Another company has now been originated, called the "Iron Ship Building Company, Limited." This company propose to build ten iron ships of one thousand tons register each, "to be employed principally in the Liverpool and Bombay trade, for the conveyance of merchants' cargo." In allotting the shares, which have all been subscribed for, care has been taken to distribute them only amongst bona fide shippers of produce from Bombay. The services of a Marine Surveyor have been secured, to superintend the building of the ships. A second company has been constituted "under strong auspices," for the purpose of establishing a line of steamers between Bombay and Calcutta, the vessels to be constructed on the American principle, to carry a large cargo and many passengers, with a light draught of water. Yet another company is reported to have been formed to run steamers between Bombay, Aden, and Suez, and Bombay and China, the former line to be worked in connection with the French company.

THE COST OF EMPIRE.—No one, we are satisfied, will expect us to reply to any one of the score of irrelevant issues raised by the local Saturday Review by way of escape from our exposure of his absurdities concerning the advantages and cost of empire in India. We notice simply the following statement of fact in the article:—"Again, what is the cause of the large annual emigration from the United Kingdom? It is not that England is too small for all her children, or that the emigrants hate their mother country. These men are driven out of their native land by the terrible pressure of the heaviest taxation which has ever been imposed upon any people. The burden of this taxation Englishmen are forced to bear for the sake of keeping together 'the empire,' of which India is not the least costly part. To this day every man in England is paying a tax on his beer, his tea, and his tobacco, as his contribution towards the expenses of acquiring and retaining the dominion of British India. And we repeat that the working millions of the English population have absolutely no return whatever for this sacrifice of a large proportion of their yearly income, unless it be considered as a compensation that they should come out here to be shot." There is not a writer in India better aware than the Reviewer that the acquisition and the maintenance of the Indian Empire has never cost the English tax-payer one shilling. The balance has always been on the other side. There is an audacity in this untruthfulness that is startling.—Times of India.

THE COTTON CROPS.—We learn from a Madras paper, that the Collector of Tanjore has reported to the Madras Board of Revenue that, in consequence of the heavy rains which prevailed throughout that district during the months of March, April, and May, the cotton crops have suffered considerable damage. In the Bellary district also much injury has been caused, and the loss is estimated at one-sixteenth of the whole produce. In the Madura district, the yield will, from the same cause, be reduced to about one-half of the average out-turn.

HOSTILE DEMONSTRATION.—The Peshawar correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states that a body of men, about 2,000 in number, and chiefly Hindoostanees who fled to the Huzara country during the mutinies, made a hostile demonstration about a fortnight ago in the neighbourhood of Swat. The Commissioner, Mr. Sandeman, however, immediately took the field at the head of the guides, and the barbarians, losing heart at the promptitude of his movements, retreated in haste to their mountain fastnesses.

CRIM. CON.—It is stated that a case of crim. con. is shortly expected to come before the High Court, the parties concerned in which belong to the North-West Provinces, and are in the military service of the government. The damages are laid at 10,000 rs.

THE PALEE RAILWAY STATION.—We learn that a great portion of the Palee Railway Station, between Hattrass and Allypurr, has fallen. The engineer says that the train running through at the usual speed, instead of slackening and going at a slow pace, has shaken the building down. It must have been a very substantial affair, if such a slight shaking could so materially affect it. The engineer throws the fault in construction off his own shoulders by stating that his design was not followed out accurately, hence he is not responsible. We understand that there is another station built on exactly the same plan, and which is, in consequence, as likely to come down if a train runs through. We cannot see the strength of the engineer's argument. However faulty the plan might be, if the work had been well put together, the construction would surely stand the reverberation consequent on a train running near it. The railway works have always been thought highly of, but judging from the fall of two railway stations in the Punjab, and the one we have alluded to, the works are now in a fair way of rivaling the far-famed Department P. W. in their tumble-down propensities.—Allahabad Gazette, July 22.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE SOCIETY.—A letter from Benares says that "a Total Abstinence Society is being formed among the native Christians of that city, amongst whom drunkenness has become very prevalent. Drinking, indeed, is to an alarming extent on the increase with all castes and classes in this city, and nothing but a very high duty on native spirits will keep it down. As the old Vedic law becomes relaxed, and will not bind the consciences of Brahmans, even to such an extent as to keep them from tipping, the law of the land ought to be made sufficiently stringent to supply the necessary restriction, for the sake of good order and the public weal." That the prejudices of Hindoos, even of those classes among whom they are most strongly developed, are not "spirit proof," we have known to have been demonstrated by a fact that occurred some years ago at Peshawur, where it was found that the Pandies of an old native corps had, with the assistance of some Brahman native officers, set up a still in their huts in the lines, with which they doubtless made many a good brew, before it was found out and put a stop to. We alluded not long ago in our own columns to the deplorable increase of intemperance among native Christians, and are glad to find that a check is attempted to be put upon it in so important a place as Benares. We hope the example will be followed by the native Christian communities in other places.

THE STAFF CORPS.—The funeral dirge of the Staff Corps appeared in Saturday's Government Gazette in the shape of an order by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to the effect that, whenever an officer of that corps shall find himself thrown out of military, civil, or miscellaneous employ, he shall make his way to the nearest military station, and there report himself to the senior officer, who will find occupation for him, or let him alone, pending his being ultimately disposed of. This process will form a hybrid class of Staff Corps officers "localised," who, whilst living in that anomalous condition, will be worse off than the pure "locals," and must pass their time in vain regret at having ever been tempted by Sir Charles Wood's delusive bait.—Englishman, July 29.

ESTATE LARPENT, SAUNDERS AND CO.—The third dividend at rupees one and a quarter per cent. is now payable on the above estate at the office of the official assignee, Calcutta.

DR. DUFF.—The Free Church Assembly have invited the Rev. Dr. Duff to return to Scotland to act as Convener of their Foreign Mission Committee. The Scotch Kirk Assembly express great satisfaction at the progress in allocating chaplains of the Church of Scotland to the larger stations in the provinces. The Committee on India Churches is to watch over any Legislative measures affecting the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland in India, more particularly to examine the bearing on these of a marriage bill now before the Legislative Council of India.

PUBLIC MORALS.

A little fact has come to our knowledge which speaks well for the first Prince of Travancore. We learn from a friend, that on the first June (His Highness' birthday) he gave an order that no women should enter his palace without dressing themselves decently, and to enable them to do so he gave pieces of cloth to his female servants. From time immemorial it has been the custom for all women in Travancore (excepting the social evils) to denude themselves of their upper cloth when entering palaces occupied by princes, and we regret to add that a late British resident at Trevandrum encouraged this demoralising practice by means which need not be alluded to. The semi-nudity of the women has thus become the rule throughout Travancore, and to a stranger fresh from Europe this barbarous custom is most repulsive. The first prince has, however, not only condemned the practice as disgusting and uncivilised, but has dared with great fortitude to introduce the desiderated reform by forbidding women to appear unclothed within the precincts of his own house. The reform thus advocated appears to have been brought to the notice of both the Rajah and Mr. Fisher, the resident, but we regret to add that neither have as yet taken any interest in so commendable a measure. Mr. Fisher probably anticipating the offence that would be caused were he to countenance it, might at any rate have reported the circumstance to Government, and requested directions as to the course he should take. We presume he is placed in the Rajah's court to promote the prosperity and civilisation of the country as much as to maintain British influence therein; and we think he ought, therefore, to advise the sovereign to give his countenance to a reform which is calculated to make the people more moral and less lascivious than they now are. The higher castes of natives in Travancore are generally handsome, and the Nair women especially are very good looking. Mr. Fisher may have an artistic eye for such elegant semi-nude and brown-tinted Venuses as are to be met with in the principality; but if he would reckon the consequences to England were the women to walk about half-naked in the public thoroughfares, he must arrive at the conclusion that the sooner upper cloths are rendered compulsory the better will it be for public morals. The first prince has taken a very praiseworthy step in protesting, as he has done, against indecency, and has thus furnished us with another proof of his being one of the most enlightened and most benevolent men in India.—Madras Daily News, July 31.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXECUTION OF A NATIVE.—TRANQUEBAR, July 13.—The wretched culprit Nanjei Nadan, who was sentenced two months ago to suffer the extreme penalty of the law, for the murder of his wife, was executed this morning, the execution being superintended by Mr. Hutchins, the acting head assistant magistrate. On the man being brought out of the gaol, where Mr. Hutchins was waiting to receive his body, he evinced no feeling of concern for the awful punishment he was about to suffer. He appeared quite hearty and in lively spirits, and displayed a remarkable stoicism. As soon as he was placed on the cart which was to convey him to the place of execution, he requested jocularly that he might be driven carefully. By his healthy appearance and cheerful looks, one could easily perceive that he had fully availed himself of the kind-hearted liberality of our excellent judge Mr. Clarke, who, immediately after his arrival at this station, visited the gaol, and being informed of the sentence he was about to undergo, ordered with the benevolence and generous feeling so natural to him, that the prisoner should be supplied with everything he might require to make him happy and comfortable in his present circumstances at his own expense, and in acknowledgment of such kindness, the wretched man begged that Mr. Clarke would accompany him to the gallows and grant a holiday to his fellow prisoners on the day of execution. On his arrival at the place of execution, where hundreds of spectators were assembled, the culprit jumped down from the cart with the greatest alacrity, and requested that his brother, who was among the crowd, might be permitted to speak to him. As he approached him weeping, the culprit said, that as he was now cheerful and willing to meet his fate, he did not wish that his brother should cry and grieve for him, and then ascended the ladder with a firm and steady step, and sat on the platform. When the executioner was about to draw the cap over his face, he held back and requested that two men should take his brother away to some distance, the cap was then quickly drawn over him, and at the given signal from Mr. Hutchins, down went the bolt with a violent crash, the culprit was suddenly poised in the air without the least indication of a struggle or motion, his immortal soul had already taken its flight to eternity.

ENFORCED WIDOWHOOD IN INDIA.—We are glad to see by the Mysore Recorder that the natives of the Madras Presidency also are beginning to see the absurdity of enforced widowhood. "A Hindu" writing to that paper says, the Native mind is beginning to see the evils of the present system of Hindu marriage and the beneficial effects a departure from it would produce. "It is not the educated and sensible Brahmins who raise objections, but the ignorant portion, as well as the no less ignorant, self-opinionated, and conceited priests, who not only live on the earnings of others, but impose immensely on the credulity of the people, to the great nuisance of the public at large. These, and the ignorant portion of the Brahmin community, are the only objectors, and their voice should be put out of the question. If the influential families only make a movement, their example will soon be followed by all the other castes, who are generally guided by the Brahmins, particularly in matters of this nature." There is the swell of a movement towards social and religious reform in India, very visible to old observers.

THE TINNEVELLY AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITION.—The Madras Daily News says that the good folks of Tinnevely have resolved on holding an agricultural exhibition, on the 21st March next year, and, taking time by the forelock, have submitted to Government, for their approval, a list of articles for which prizes will be awarded. They include live stock, grain, spices, vegetables, fruits, manufactured products, oils, brick and pottery, hides, machinery, and agricultural instruments. Altogether the prizes number 147, and are of the aggregate value of 2,850 rupees, with 150 rupees as reserve, making 3,000 in all. Amongst the prizes offered, we find one of 100 rupees for a machine for drawing water economically and in large quantities from wells 20 feet deep, other than the present picottah and its relatives now in use; another of 70 rupees for the best model wind-mill working on the ground; another of 100 rupees for one candy of best Tinnevely indigenous cotton cleaned, and 70 rupees for the second best. Indigo, sugar, jaggery, gums, and arrowroot, all come in for prizes ranging from 15 to 20 rupees, carpets, matting, handkerchiefs, cloths, cumblies, gunnies, tapes, canvass, and country umbrellas, from 30 to 7 rupees. All sorts of oil, from castor to fish, from 15 to 7 rupees, and all sorts of ropes from 10 to 12. The best pottery and the best country paper alike will carry off 20 rupees; and the best hundred bricks and the best hundred tiles, each rupees fifteen. The best fishing net ten rupees, and the best chuckler will find more than the worth of his wares in 10 rupees for three pairs of shoes of native fashion. Bullocks, buffaloes, sheep, ponies, goats, and fowls, contending for prizes, may carry off from 30 to 6 rupees. Cocoanuts, limes, plantains, and jack, are not forgotten, for a hundred of the first may enrich their owner by 20 rupees, and six of the latter by 5 rupees. The best coffee will obtain 100 rupees, the best tobacco 50 and 125 lbs. of senna—that horror of our younger days—may come in for rupees 75. Grain, onions, nutmegs, wheat, cholam, and a host of miscellaneous articles have a chance of prizes varying from 20 to 15 rupees. Nothing seems to be left out, except the best toddy. The committee have resolved that all articles brought for exhibition must be bona fide the production of culture, or breeding, or the manufacture of Tinnevely. A very lively interest is taken in the affair by a great many gentlemen in the locality, and no doubt the exhibition when it comes off will be what we heartily wish it—a great success.

BOMBAY.

COLONEL CRAWLEY.

The charges on which Colonel Crawley is to be tried are, we learn, as follows:—

1. For having caused the orders under which Sergeant-Major Lilley was placed in arrest in May 1862, to be carried into effect with unnecessary and undue severity, whereby the Sergeant-Major and his wife were subjected to great and grievous hardships and sufferings.

2. For having stated in his reply to Mr. Smales's defence before the court-martial, that it was Mr. Fitzsimons's fault if the sergeant's wife was inconvenienced by having the sentries placed near her bed; whereas he well knew that Mr. Fitzsimons had acted in the matter by his express orders and direction.

Having been made, through Mr. Smales's misrepresentations, the means of spreading in the first instance, what we now believe to have been a most untruthful description of the ill-fated Lilley's imprisonment, we deem it right to place the public at once in possession of certain facts that have reached us in connection with this subject. The impression has gone abroad everywhere that Colonel Crawley, in the language of the Saturday Review, did "precisely to Sergeant Lilley what Surajah Dowlah did to the English merchants at Calcutta—precisely what the slave-traders do to their negroes in the hold of a slave-ship. He put him into a prison so foul and close that, in the hot Indian climate, though a robust and sober man, he sickened and died."

It has come upon the Indian public with the force of a surprise, within the last few days, that the imprisonment consisted simply in confining the unfortunate man to his own hired bungalow, and that he was allowed, and took, daily two hours walking exercise in the open air, one hour in the morning and the other in the evening. It is untrue, moreover, to say that the sentries were placed inside Mrs. Lilley's room—they were inside the house; but then the house had no less than five rooms, one extending the whole length, and measuring 34 by 14, and two rooms at the back each 16½ by 14, with a partition wall in the centre, and a door of communication. At the back of all were two smaller rooms, about nine feet square, used as store and bath rooms. Lilley remained in this large house up to the 12th or 13th May, 1862, when to make room for the new barracks then about to be built, it was ordered to be pulled down, and he was removed to another quarter about twelve yards distant at the end of one of the ranges of troop rooms, up to that time occupied by the Troop Sergeant Major and his wife. In this room the space was not quite so large, being 23 feet by 14 feet, but there was a smaller room, 7 by 14. This building was doubled tiled with a canvas ceiling, and was always occupied by the Troop Sergeant Major and his wife, until they turned out to make room for Sergeant Major Lilley and his wife.

There has plainly been a frightful amount of misrepresentation in the case, and as the Times of India was made unwittingly the means in the first instance of giving it publicity, we deem it right thus publicly to state the better information we have acquired.

The Deccan Herald professes to have known from the first that the unfortunate sergeant was simply confined to his own house. We believe the fact has come upon every one else as a surprise.

(From a Meerut Correspondent of the Times of India.)

And Colonel Crawley is to be brought before a court-martial. Perhaps there are many on your side of India who fancy such a proceeding to be opposed to the wishes of Sir Hugh Rose. No such thing. I am quite in a position to assure them that it is to the avowed anxiety of both Sir Hugh Rose and Sir William Mansfield to have the mystery still hanging over the death of Sergeant Major Lilley entirely cleared up, that the Premier's allow of a court-martial is to be mainly ascribed. Both Commanders-in-Chief have gone hand in hand in their endeavour to bring about a most searching investigation, and the friends of Lilley, both in this country and in England, will find much to thank them for when all the facts of the case are laid before the public. There is much reason to believe that both Sir Hugh and Sir William were cruelly deceived in many particulars regarding the Mhow court-martial; but, then, as matters then stood, they were bound to place reliance on statements made to them by high authority, and not only to support Colonel Crawley and General Farrell, but also give all possible weight to the finding and sentence of the court martial. Perhaps much of this reliance and support would have been withheld had Paymaster Smales and his partisans been less rabid and vehement in their attacks on Colonel Crawley and his party. When the quarrel ran to violent extremes on both sides, duty and discipline alike required that the general and the colonel should be maintained in their legitimate authority and influence. A demoralized regiment is always in an incipient state of mutiny; and when insubordination had all but broken the bonds of submission in the 4th Light Dragoons, safety and salvation for the corps could only be looked for in the instant punishment of the more conspicuous of the offenders, and the maintenance, at all hazards, of the authority and influence of the commanding officer. But for the pursuance of this course promptly and firmly by the head of the army in India I do believe that the 4th Light Dragoons would have soon plunged themselves into the commission of acts which would have rendered them ever memorable in the military annals of the nation by the extinction of their number from the British Army List. This calamity they were most fortunately spared, and, at whatever cost it might be, discipline has since been stoutly upheld, and disorganisation effectually checked. The British army has escaped a terrible disgrace, and a corps of dragoons which, through the conduct of two or three desperate characters, might have been no more, still graces the service of her Majesty. It is only when the crisis is over that the full extent of the peril becomes evident.

SERGEANT LILLEY'S CASE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

Sir,—From the description given of the quarters occupied by the late Sergeant-Major Lilley, it would lead one to suppose that they were copies of the Black Hole of Calcutta; I take the liberty therefore of describing them. The barracks now occupied by the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons at Mhow were originally built for a troop of horse artillery and a battery of foot artillery. They are all bomb-proof, even to the cock-rooms and privies, and are the only barracks I have seen, or heard of, in India with stables attached to them; and even those under reference are bomb proof also. The stables are arranged in parallel lines, with sufficient interval between each range to allow of the horses being brought out of the stables in the day time, turned round, and picketed outside head to head, with a ten-foot broad path between them. Thus to every stall on each side of each range there are arched openings to enable the horses to enter their stables; but these have no side partitions. When inside, the horses stand head to head, with a five-foot path in the centre. In 1828 the troop of Bombay H.A. then occupying them was ordered out to bring some native rajah to his senses, and to the surprise of Molly-coddlers, all the best horses which had been favoured with comfortable stalls in the fine stables got colds, sunburns, &c., whilst undergoing the ordinary hardships of a campaign, whereas the inferior saddle horses for whom room could not be found in the stables were as jolly as possible, and no doubt had many a sly equine laugh at their delicate companions. This fact caused the further use of the stables to be abandoned, and one long range next the barracks were cleansed out and converted into quarters for the married soldiers and their families. Thus, these apartments would consist of two rooms, front and back, which previously had formed the two stalls, together with the centre path portion opposite to, and formerly separating, the two stalls. Thus, there was a thorough air draught through each set of apartments, and very comfortable they were thought to be, as from the immense thickness of the walls they were cool in the hot, and warm in the cold, seasons. This I know, that they were better adapted for living rooms than those at the angles of the barracks built expressly for married non-commissioned officers; and the very fact of Lilly living in the rooms converted from the stables is presumptive proof (one would imagine) that they were more commodious than the proper quarters built for the non-commissioned officers.

RE-DISTRIBUTION OF THE SAUGOR AND JUBBULPORE DISTRICTS.

We have received authentic information from Nagpore relative to a re-distribution of the districts of the Saugor and Jubbulpore Divisions, which we take an early opportunity to place before our readers. These two Divisions of the Central Provinces consist of nine civil districts, administered by as many deputy commissioners, under two superintending officers, styled divisional commissioners. The districts are Mundlah, Jubbulpore, Dumoh, and Saugor, north of the river Nerbudda; and Seonee, Chindwarah, Baitool, Hoshungabad, and Nursingpore, south of the Nerbudda. The present distribution is Jubbulpore, Mundlah, Seonee, Chindwarah, and Nursingpore under the commissioner of Jubbulpore; and Saugor, Dumoh, Hoshungabad, and Baitool, under a similar officer at Saugor—by which it will be observed, that of the four districts north of the Nerbudda two are under each commissioner, and of the five districts south of the Nerbudda three are under the superintendence of the Jubbulpore commissioner, and under that of the commissioner of Saugor. Thus, in a geographical point of view, this distribution is defective, and it is therefore in contemplation to make such an arrangement that the jurisdiction and designation of each commissioner will be in accordance with the topographical features of the country; or, in other words, that there should be one commissioner of the four districts north of the Nerbudda, with his head-quarters at Jubbulpore, and another of the districts north of the Nerbudda, with his head-quarters at some central position; and none seems to us more suitable than Chindwarah. It is almost equi-distant, at least as far as the eye can judge on the map, from the head-quarters of the four other districts south of the Nerbudda, and has the recommendation of a salubrious climate, and of being within fifty miles from Mothoor, the sanitarium of the Central Provinces. The commissioner at present located at Saugor should, we think, be required to remove his office to Chindwarah, and assume the administration of the Civil Jurisdiction south of the great river which flows through these territories; the Commissioner of Jubbulpore remaining at his post, and taking over the districts of Saugor and Dumoh, to complete his charge north of the Nerbudda. On no account should the commissionership of Jubbulpore be removed from its present position to Chindwarah, as the State would then be burthened with the additional expenditure which the removal of two offices—from Saugor to Jubbulpore, and from Jubbulpore to Chindwarah—would entail. Moreover, we learn that the Saugor commissionership, being of recent constitution, would admit of being transferred at a small cost. We have taken upon us to notice these details, as so great an administrative change as that just explained must necessarily involve some expenditure of money, which, under the existing circumstances of the country, should not be lightly incurred.

If there be one thing which would tend to make the new distribution liable to future unfavourable results, it is the fact that it would clash with the military administration of the Nerbudda Territory. The Commissioner of Jubbulpore has now at his disposal the troops stationed at his head quarters, and the Commissioner of Saugor the brigade quartered at that station; but the new distribution would entirely divest the Commissioner south of the Nerbudda of military support, unless indeed it be in contemplation, for the consideration of prestige, to locate some troops at his head quarters. The only other remedy by which this might be obviated is the construction of a new telegraphic line from Chindwarah, on the head quarters of the Commissioner south of the Nerbudda, to Jubbulpore and thence to Saugor. We believe also that there is not a doubt of the superior eligibility of Jubbulpore to Saugor as the seat of a Commissioner. The construction of a telegraphic line between these two stations would remove any objection that might at present be offered to the importance of Saugor as the head quarters of a brigadier, while the commercial future of Jubbulpore, as the mid-station on the line of railway from Bombay to Calcutta, would specially recommend it for the Commissioner's head quarters.—Hurkaru, July 27.

GAMBLING AND SPECULATION.

When any Legislature succeeds in putting down gambling, it will also be able to put down human nature. We must believe that it is right for statesmen and lawyers to devise measures for punishing gamblers, since in every country they continue to labour steadfastly towards this end, without achieving any success adequate to reward their virtuous exertions. Wagering of all kinds is, we know, unrecognised by law either in France or England, yet gambling in millions of money goes on openly every day on the Exchanges of London and Paris, and betting on the turf is the fashionable amusement of the most honourable men in both countries. It appears that the contamination of this habit of gambling, which men denounce in public, and are proud of as an accomplishment in private life, has touched even this virtuous city of Bombay; for at the first meeting of the present session of the Bombay Legislative Council, we find Mr. M. R. Westropp introducing a Bill to complete Act XXI, 1844, which declared wagers and wagering contracts to be null and void, and alleging that the said Act "has been systematically evaded by means of a combination among shroffs," and that "time bargains" as to the prices of opium and cotton are made to an enormous extent in Bombay and its provinces, and have a very injurious effect (according to the Hon. Mr. Scott) on the real markets "for opium and cotton, and especially on the latter." Without wishing to discourage Mr. Westropp in his efforts to introduce a higher tone of morality among the meddling people who will not leave dealings in cotton and opium to the great mercantile houses, we venture to prophecy that "time bargains" will be made and fulfilled in Bombay quite as freely after the new Bill has passed as at present. Such bargains, as Mr. Westropp will admit, depend mainly on the honour of those concerned, and are in general scrupulously carried out, even by men who are not very punctual in the payment of ordinary debts. Of course, the law will save a swindler here and there from paying when he loses, but it will do no more. We have only one piece of advice to give our readers, before they go in for time bargains, and that is, to get a little money—honestly if they can, but at any rate to get it—before they go in. When a poor man speculates, the world denounces him as a gambler; when a rich man speculates, the world respects him as a developer of resources, and applauds his wisdom, his energy, and his bold commercial enterprise.

Meanwhile, speculation goes on briskly enough in Bombay; and rumour tells us that from the highest to the lowest—officials, merchant adventurers, lawyers, editors, clerks, and crossing-sweepers—all are gaily jostling one another in the perilous race for the golden prizes which seem so plentiful just now, that one would suppose new diggings had been discovered in Bombay. A promoter of one of the new companies assured us the other day that his table was loaded with bales of applications for shares from all sorts of obscure people, who ought to be making a decent livelihood on from twelve to fifty rupees a month, but whom the will-o'-the-wisp of speculation has lured from the path of honest industry. Among the applicants were several hundred moonimis, a few dozen ghorawallas, and a large number of enterprising cooks and butlers. We feel a glow of virtuous indignation at the thought of the presumption of these low people in imitating their betters, and think that the law ought at once to make an example of them. Respectable persons who take shares in new companies ought to be careful to see beforehand with whom they are associated, or they may find the stock which they fondly hoped overnight to sell at a huge premium go to a discount in the morning, in consequence of the market being crammed with shares belonging to poor men, who cannot even afford to pay the first call on their allotments. This precaution taken, however, we have the highest possible authority, that of our respected contemporary, the Times of India, for saying that whatever speculation the said respectable persons may choose to indulge in is sure to be perfectly just and moral. There was a suspicion, indeed, lately, that some Parsee had taken part in a slightly shady transaction; but it is a consolation to know that this reproach has been wiped off, that the town does not contain even one bad citizen, and that the commercial morality of Bombay stands pure and unimpeachable. Mr. Pecksniff reached the sublimest point of his morality when, after his dinner at the Dragon, where he had playfully arranged with Mr. Montague Tigg that little "plant" which was to be nourished on "the weaknesses of our fellow creatures," he patted Mrs. Lupin paternally on the head as he was going home, and exhorted her to behold the wonders of the firmament. "The stars are perfectly contented (I suppose so) in their several spheres. Why are not you? Oh! do not strive and struggle to enrich yourselves, or to get the better of each other, my deluded friends, but look up there with me." When our Bombay Pecksniffs preach to us in a similar vein about the virtuous disinterestedness of Bombay speculators, we fear that the Bombay public, unlike good simple Mrs. Lupin, simply puts its tongue into its cheek, and goes on its way, rejoicing to sell some new shares in the last new shipping company, easing its conscience afterwards, perhaps, by sending a small donation to the Strangers' Home.—Madras Times, July 20.

BOMBAY NEWS LETTERS.

POONA, July 25.

Lady Mansfield received the society of the station on Monday evening last, and a very agreeable evening it was. No one can discharge the duties of a hostess better than her ladyship; and Sir William was, as usual, courteous and affable. Of course all the talk at present is the Nana Sahib, and the great revelations which the "blind Brahmin" has made, for which, by the way, we were first indebted to you. Even the magnates might be seen reading and re-reading; no doubt astonished that you should have anticipated the official despatches.

You will have heard, no doubt, before this, that Poona is henceforth to be the seat of one of the Viceroyal residencies; the western sea-breeze being too invigorating to be any longer ignored. The presidency will, of course, for a couple of months in the year be also cheered with the smiles of Viceroyalty; but it is at Poona where the permanent palace will be erected. And Poona will soon be worthy the name of a capital in every respect.

In military circles there is still some discussion going on connected with the Mhow scandals; but most people seem to think that as the question has now been taken up at home, the least said is soonest mended. Of other military matters I have but little to report; in fact, there is scarcely anything going on beyond the mere routine, and this is, as all know, too dull to dwell upon. Medals were to have been presented to the 10th Native Infantry last evening, but owing to the sudden change in the weather, the ceremony has, for the present, been postponed.

The next grand ball of the season will, I hear, be the artillery one at Kirkee, which is always a very "crack affair," and is to be followed by one given by Sir J. J. Jeebhoy in honour of Lady Mansfield.

It may interest you to know that there is a likelihood of the Nana soon being identified beyond the possibility of failure or mistake. A gentleman up here has in his possession a copy of "Chambers's History of the Indian Revolt," in which there is a portrait of the Nana. The likeness having been submitted to men in the city who were acquainted with the Nana, many years ago, when he was a young man, it was pronounced by them to be a very fair likeness. I believe the matter was communicated to Government; and I fancy "Chambers's Indian Revolt" will have a sale which the publishers never anticipated. I have a number of curious facts, connected with the Nana Sahib, in course of preparation, which will be sent to you when completed.

July 26.—On Saturday last, the 25th inst., the very interesting ceremony of presenting medals to the 10th Regiment N.I. took place on the general parade ground. The brigade was formed up at contiguous quarter distance columns, with the exception of the 10th Regiment, which was about fifty paces in front, and facing the other regiments of the brigade. The officers were then ordered to the front, and received from Major-General Smith their medals, and those for the men of their respective companies. About 700 were altogether distributed—the gallant corps having so prominently distinguished itself during the late Indian campaign of 1857, 1858, and 1859, for which the medals were given. All ranks must have felt proud of the decoration they had so bravely won. After the medals had been distributed to each man, the whole brigade passed round in review order, saluted the general, and thus ended the ceremony. A vast concourse of people assembled to witness the brilliant spectacle.

We are all sorry here at the prospect of losing Dr. Maitland; he was a general favourite, and we were under the impression that he would have been appointed successor to Dr. Larkins, who goes home on leave shortly.

After the medal had been distributed to each man the whole brigade passed round in review order, saluting their general, and thus ended the ceremony.

A vast concourse of people, including all the beauty and fashion of Poona, assembled to witness this brilliant spectacle, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather.

August 1.—The Government, since it came up to Poona, has been getting through an immense amount of work. We had an engineer conference yesterday in the Council Hall, presided over by the Governor; and a variety of works were submitted and considered. All the engineer officers in camp were present, and the plan for a sea-wall along Backbay was placed on the table and duly considered, including an inshore line. The latter is to be commenced immediately, and will, it is expected, be completed in a few months, at a cost of two lakhs of rupees.

We are very sorry at losing the Reverend M. Ross, our worthy Presbyterian pastor. He has been, I hear, appointed to the presidency to act for Mr. Colvin, who is about to proceed to Europe on medical certificate. Mr. Ross is exceedingly popular with all classes; and during the period of his ministry has, by his zeal and earnest attention to the wants and wishes of his congregation, made himself esteemed by both rich and poor. The Rev. D. Macpherson succeeds Mr. Ross, a gentleman of whom the voice of public report speaks favourably. While writing of clergymen I may mention that the Rev. F. Gell is working wonders in the gardens at Kirkee. He is one of those men that cannot be idle; and wherever he appears, vitality and energy manifest themselves in some shape or form. The Kirkee gardens, it is expected, under his occasional supervision, will soon be equal to any in India. Mr. Falke is rendering great assistance, and the progress is wonderful.

Mr. Draper's case is still exciting attention, and it is hoped, for many reasons, that Mr. Howard's order, instructing him to proceed to Hyderabad, will be changed. Mr. Draper is held in great esteem, and his loss would be much felt.

The weather is cool and agreeable, and out-door exercise at all times permissible. The winds are high, cool, and invigorating; the fields and trees are green as an English landscape. The gardens are red with the roses of summer, and the evergreens and creepers are beginning to cluster in foliage and flowers all over the porticoes of our dwellings.

The Poona season is passing away, and but little has been done in comparison to the achievements of former years, either in the shape of indoor gaieties or out-door amusements. The Governor and Commander-in-Chief are doing their best; but the hospitality of lesser lights hang fire. Our Parsee Baronet is, however, I hear, about to astonish us all with a brilliant banquet, and his example will, doubtless, be followed by others.

There is to be a conference of collectors shortly in Poona, to consider a change in contemplation relative to the division of districts. The abolition of the Inam Commissioners' establishment is also, I hear, under consideration. But as these conferences are not public assemblies, I am not at liberty to mention what takes place at them.

In conclusion, I may mention that Poona is full to overflowing—hotels full, and not a house to be had, or a spare apartment, for love or money.

HONORE, July 17.

The heavy rain, frequent sunny breaks, and dearness of provisions, seem to have increased the already very serious amount of sickness in the district. Fever seems to be much more rife than it was a month ago, and I am sorry to hear that cholera has broken out in Ankola and Tuddri within the last few days. There is little doubt that the visitation will be a seriously fatal one. The people are much debilitated by the prevalence of malarious disease, and are in no condition to resist the inroads of cholera. There is a total want in the towns and villages of every hygienic arrangement; the houses of the people in these towns are now mostly in the midst of swamps, the water often covering the floors, and the compounds are kept in the filthiest possible state, covered with decaying vegetable and animal matter. Add to this the scarcity of proper food among the lower classes, and who can wonder that the dreadful scourge has selected them for its victims?

I know it is difficult for those at a distance and all with authority to initiate such measures, or to realise the suffering and misery that is going on in North Canara. It is not easy even for those who live in the midst of such scenes to ascertain their extent, far less to appreciate the full wretchedness and evil they give rise to. It is sad that hundreds should be dying, almost daily, of preventible disease, when a little aid might save them. It is sad to see what were once fertile fields overgrown with weeds, and villages once filled with prosperous inhabitants deserted and fallen into moss-covered ruins; and this is the state of things in North Canara, and it seems to be getting worse day by day, instead of better. But I can see nothing in what gives rise to it that is irremediable, if only the subject obtain that consideration which is often given to far less important things. It will not be a pleasant thing for those who have the power to act, and do not, to reflect that the deaths of hundreds of human beings, which might have been prevented, lie at their doors. It is said of a tyrant who had condemned many of his fellow-men to death, that he was in reality by nature the most soft-hearted and compassionate. It was easy to say cut that man's head off or torture this, as long as he did not think what pain and misery he inflicted. It is said that on one occasion he by accident saw the carrying out of one of the sentences which he had thoughtlessly and recklessly, rather than of deliberate cruelty, inflicted. The sight enabled him to realise the effect of his easily uttered words, and was sufficient to effect a reformation in him. So it is easy for us to read with calm hearts, and then quickly to forget a tale of the sufferings which we have never seen. Were we to see them face to face, or could we even picture them to ourselves, or fancy ourselves, as might have been the case, the subjects of them, I question whether our hearts would beat so quietly in continued apathy.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE REBELS.—We (Times of India) understand that Captain Davies's police spies, who were employed on the frontier of the Nimar States towards the close of 1858, insisted that the Ranees of Jhansie, supposed to have been slain at Gwalior, was still living. The Berar police, it seems, have often heard that the real Tantia Topee was never hanged. We distrust these statements wholly. We have no doubt whatever that the real Tantia was hanged, and the real Ranees of Jhansie slain. We may add, moreover, that we do not like the blind Brahmin's confession, which seems to us improbable in some respects.

MR. HARRINGTON.—The Assistant Registrar of the Suddur Adawlut, Mr. Harrington, has suddenly and mysteriously disappeared from Bombay, after victimizing several individuals, and easing them of considerable sums of money.

THE STEAMER "PENANG," Captain Coombe, came into harbour on the 4th inst., and reported having signalled the ship Excellent off Point Boria on the previous day. She had lost her fore top mast, and her main and mizen masts were gone. She, however, did not require assistance. Boria Point is in lat. 17 deg. 25 min. N., and is a high, round, bluff headland, forming the entrance to a large bay on the Concan coast. This point is steep, there being 6 and 7 f. thoms very near the shore.

RAO SAHEB.—As we expected, the case against the man whom Captain Nuttall has in custody, as the Raho Sahib, or Kishen Rao, has broken down. A correspondent upon the spot writes to us as follows:—"We have failed to identify the so-called person Kishen Rao as the real person wanted. Two prisoners in the same case declared he was Kishen Rao, but not until having at first denied all knowledge of him, and had been some time in charge of Captain Nuttall's police; one of these men adheres to his recognition, the other is uncertain. All the other witnesses who had seen Kishen Rao here deny that this is the man. However, we don't know who he is, and have sent him back to Sholapore, to see if he can be traced through his own account of himself. I see you doubt the blind man's story as to the Nana; there is certainly not a word in it to convince me that we have the real man. If Jung Bahadur has assured Government that the Nana is dead, and has knowingly lied in so doing, do you think he would ever permit the villain to leave Nepal and contradict him? Very unlikely, I think."—Times of India.

A SHIPPING COMPANY.—A few weeks since we (Bombay Saturday Review) alluded to the establishment of the "Bombay Shipping Company," under the auspices of a leading house in this place, and the public have thought so highly of the adventure that the shares are now quoted at Rs. 6,000 to Rs. 7,000 premium. We have this week to notice the formation of a second company, named the "Iron Ship Company, Limited," which proposes to build ten iron ships of 1,000 tons register, to be employed principally between Liverpool and Bombay for the conveyance of merchant's cargo. The shares are all subscribed for, and the greatest care has been taken to allot them only amongst bona fide shippers of produce from this port. The company has been so fortunate as to secure the services of one of our leading surveyors, who shortly proceeds to England to superintend their construction, and under his superintendence a very superior description of vessels, in every way suited to the requirements of this trade, will no doubt be constructed, and when the vessels are built, with judicious management will, without doubt, prove a splendid investment. A company has also been formed under strong auspices, which proposes to run a line of steamers from this port to Calcutta. The steamers it is proposed shall be similar to those constructed in America, to carry a large number of passengers and cargo at a light draught of water. A third company it is reported has been formed to run a monthly line of steamers of large size, fitted up with the best accommodation for all classes of passengers, and constructed for speed, between this port and Aden and Suez, and also between Bombay and China. The Suez line will be worked in connection with the "Messageries Impariales," part of the mails and passengers proceeding via Marseilles and the heavy portion of the mails being conveyed by steamer to Liverpool. We have not heard who are the principal promoters, now will the shares be allotted to the public until the arrangements for working the line are completed, but that such a company will receive strong public support we entertain little doubt.

NEW LINE OF STEAMERS.—We (Bombay Saturday Review) alluded last week to the project of establishing a line of steamers between this port and Suez. We have since learned that the arrangements before alluded to are being pushed forward with considerable vigour. A recommendation, it is stated, signed by the Governor of Bombay, and approved of by the Governor-general, has been presented to the postal authorities recommending a postal subsidy. The company proposes that the troops hitherto sent round the Cape of Good Hope should be forwarded by rail through Egypt and thence by their steamers to Bombay; and if the Home Government sanctions these two proposals, they promise that in less than six months from the signing of the agreement they will run a monthly line of steamers of large size and power from this to Suez and back.

KHELAT AFFAIRS.—In our issue of the 3rd, we were led to state that an attempt had been made by the deposed Chieftain Khodadad Khan to take Khelat, and that he had been repulsed with the loss of the whole of his guns. We furnished this information on reliable authority; the correspondent who afforded us the particulars appears, however, to have attached credence to a tale which had no foundation in fact, for, from a communication that reached us on Tuesday from a highly authentic source, we learn that Khodadad Khan, so far from having essayed the capture of Khelat, has been residing peacefully at Kanee, in the province of Julwanee, and not a single collision has taken place since the commencement of the rebellion. We lose no time in correcting the error into which we were inadvertently led, and regret that our correspondent, always so well informed on matters transpiring in Khelat, should on this one occasion have been betrayed into a misrepresentation of the actual state of affairs in that quarter.—Our Paper.

THE "CENTRAL INDIA HORSE" hunting party have reason to be proud of their achievements. We doubt if such a bag, or succession of bags, has been equalled in any other part of India for many years. This year they have killed one lion, thirty-three tigers, eleven bears (more tigers, but fewer lions, than in 1862). The total "bag" since the force was raised, in 1860, consists of ten lions, ninety-six tigers, four panthers, and fifty bears. We are glad to hear that Captain Bradford has completely recovered his accident; the prompt and skilful amputation of his arm by Dr. Beaumont, under Providence, saved his life.—Delhi Gazette, July 21.

PET ALLIGATORS.—The other day we related that a native who had gone to Mugger Peer had been bitten in the hand by an alligator, and narrowly escaped being drawn into the water and devoured. These accidents, without being very numerous, occur pretty often, and have in various instances attracted the attention of the authorities. In 1857 an individual who was severely injured by one of the monsters first brought the frequency of these occurrences to notice, and Mr. Bell has warned the Fakere who stops there, that if any more accidents take place, he will waive all considerations or scruples on the score of respect for the alleged sanctity of the muggers, and order their destruction. In 1860 another visitor who had repaired to the tank to perform some religious rites was seized by one of the alligators, and must have fallen a victim to the animal's voracity had it not been, as was the case the other day, for the bystanders, who rescued him with difficulty. The Fakere was again notified that he must take means for protecting the people, and that a party of the police would be sent to exterminate his pets if they did any more harm. Notwithstanding these warnings, a third accident occurred last year, which necessitated the amputation of a man's arm at the shoulder; and, as already mentioned, a fourth instance presented itself the other day, the sufferer being still in hospital from the effect of the injuries he sustained. Some precautions against these accidents ought to be adopted. A low wall round the tank should suffice. But it would be a pity to kill the alligators. Mugger Peer may be said to be the only "lion" we have, and is a favourite resort for lovers of pic-nics and excursionists in general. The tank or pool, although not 150 yards wide, contains between two and three hundred monsters, the chief of which is "Moore Sahib," who committed himself the other day. This worthy desports a gold bead in his nose, and is probably the "oldest inhabitant in Sind." These animals are genuine alligators, and totally distinct from the guryal or long snouted crocodile which abounds in the Indus. They are the descendants of three specimens which are said to have been placed in the tank by a General Moore, after whom the only survivor of the trio is named. The place itself is called Mugger Peer, or "Alligator's Saint," in consequence of some holy individual's tomb being near the tank.—Sindian.

OUR INDIAN POLICY.—Sir Charles Wood, in his speech delivered at the Sheffield Cutlers' Feast at Sheffield, on Friday, thus alluded to the Government's Indian policy:—"I have now, for the second time, become connected with the administration of India, and I must say the power of the Government of this country in India seems to me to be a standing miracle. No man could have believed five short years ago, when the energy of a few English—and my friend has only done justice to the brave English men and women in India at that time—resisted and subdued the most formidable mutiny that ever desolated a country from one end to another—(cheers), undaunted by numbers, standing almost alone in many cases, no man, no woman failed, and the consequence was a triumph over the most inexcusable mutiny which ever broke out. Since that time tranquillity has been restored, prosperity has attained a point which it never reached before, and the whole institutions of the country have been revised. I do not wish to take more credit than is my due, but since I have been in the office which I now hold the Government of the country has been recast, and natives admitted to the council, the judicature has been revised, the penal code has been improved, penal proceedings and civil proceedings facilitated, the army and the navy have been recast, and also the civil service, the tenure of land has been fixed, and, indeed, I hardly know any point in the legislation of the country in which administrative improvement was required in which it has not been accomplished, whether rightly or wrongly is not for me to say. At any rate, we have done that which has met with the approval of the Parliament at home, of the country, and of the great mass of the native population. I believe we are performing our mission to that country for the benefit of the great mass of the people there, and in their welfare we shall derive not only the best pecuniary reward—for their prosperity necessarily adds to ours—but we shall have performed that great mission to which we have been called,—the improving and civilising of the greatest mass of the people that at present exists under the rule of any one sceptre."

BY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

Public Works Dept., General Establs., Simla, July 6.—No. 76.—With reference to Public Works Dept., notification No. 43, dated May 14, the privilege leave granted to Lieut. H. G. Puckle, offic. exec. engr., Sumbulpore division, is to have effect from June 1 instead of from May 1.

July 8.—No. 77.—With reference to Public Works Dept., notification No. 75, dated July 2, Lieut. col. W. A. Crommelin, C.B., entered on his duties on the forenoon of July 3.

THE PUBLIC WORKS CODE—ADDITIONAL RULES.
(See Allen's Indian Mail, Aug. 28.)

Fort William, July 17.—No. 81.—The following rules, in modification of those laid down in the Public Works Code in regard to the test prescribed for members of the upper subordinate branch of the public works dept., are notified for general information. The paragraphs will be interpolated in the new edition of the Code in the order indicated by the number:—

(After Paragraph 21, Chapter II.)

21a.—The examination in surveying prescribed in paragraph 2 for assistant overseers may be dispensed with on the candidate giving evidence that he possesses a satisfactory acquaintance with some special branch of practical engineering. In such cases a report will be furnished by the principal of the Engineering College, specifying in detail the nature of the qualification possessed by the candidate in this respect, and it will rest with the Government of India to decide whether the qualifications of the candidate as described in the report which will be submitted for perusal with the usual certificate of qualification in the other subjects of examination are sufficient to make it desirable that he should enter the department without possessing a knowledge of surveying.

(After Paragraph 30, Chapter II.)

30a.—The Govt. of India reserves to itself the right of admitting persons into any of the superior grades of the upper subordinate establishments without requiring actual service in the lower grades. In such exceptional cases the power of appointment or promotion will rest with the Govt. of India, and the proposal of the Local Govt. or Administration, under this rule, should state in specific terms the grounds on which it is desired to dispense with the regular test; it must further be accompanied by a report from the principal of a civil engineering college of the same kind as that prescribed in paragraph 21a. (case of assistant overseers.)

30b.—The examination prescribed in paragraph 29 may be dispensed with in the cases of persons of good character who may possess special and superior qualifications as practical engineers. But no one will be admitted to the upper subordinate department who has not passed the test for assistant overseer, omitting surveying; and, in like manner, no one will be admitted as a sub-engineer, or promoted to that grade, without, in addition to that test, fulfilling one or other of the alternative tests laid down for that grade in paragraphs 29 and 30a.

THE MUNICIPALITY OF CALCUTTA.

THE second meeting of the Justices of the Peace for the City of Calcutta took place on the 2nd of July. The attendance was very numerous. As the first question before the meeting was the salary of the Chairman, V. H. Schalch, Esq., that gentleman left the chair and withdrew. Mr. Maitland took the chair in his absence, when a salary was voted to Mr. Schalch of Rs. 3,000 a-month, with an allowance for house-rent of Rs. 500. Rs. 3,500, or £350, a-month is by no means a contemptible salary, even for the highest municipal authority of the City of Palaces. A Native gentleman at the first meeting of the Justices expressed his opinion that the salary was excessive. The salary of the Vice-Chairman, Mr. Dowleas, is fixed at Rs. 1,200 a-month. Then it is proposed to appoint a Health Officer, on a salary of Rs. 1,500 a-month, with a separate establishment under him of at least six Inspectors, at Rs. 150 a-month each. There was exhibited at the meeting considerable difference of opinion as to whether a Health officer was at all necessary, and if necessary, whether he ought to be so largely remunerated. One gentleman proposed that the salary should be Rs. 400, with permission to the officer to engage in private practice. Others proposed that the question of the appointment and salary of a Health Officer should be postponed for four months, and this proposition was at last carried. There are eight applicants for the office; amongst them is Dr. Tonnerre, the Homœopathic Doctor. Dr. Ewart, who has written a book on jails, seems at present the favourite candidate. Dr. Norman Chevers, Principal of the Medical College, would have been the best suited to the post, if his services had not been already secured by the Government, to the great advantage of the State, for he is justly described by Dr. Brougham as a man of singular research, learning, and ability, whose erudition is European, but whose experience is Indian.

According to the report of a Committee on the subject of the appointment of a Health Officer and the duties of the post, the City of Calcutta, with its more than half-a-million of inhabitants, is "one of the most insanitary cities in the world," and that this arises chiefly from jungle and filth and other evils that can be removed or remedied. In this report we meet with certain words that we have never seen before. An insanitary city does not mean a city of the insane, but an insalubrious city. Then we have, what appears to us, newly-coined words, as "insanitariness," "sanitizing" ("the duty of sanitizing a city")—"the sanitation of Calcutta"), a sanitarian, a sanitator, &c. These words will now, we suppose, like the word telegram, introduced by the Times, find their way into the English papers here, and become as "familiar as household words" to all Englishmen at home or abroad. We must not, we suppose, object to the use of these novel words in Calcutta, where the things themselves to which they apply are in some degree a novelty. It was observed by an opponent of the medical appointment, that "the duty of sanitizing for an Indian city is one of a perfectly novel character," and that "any one would be as able to undertake it as a sanitarian." There was a great deal of nonsense of all sorts uttered at the second meeting of the Calcutta Justices, and there was also much noise and confusion and a good deal of personal and party feeling, under the mask of public spirit.

That there is great need for "sanitation" in Calcutta is obvious enough from the fact that amongst the native inhabitants the ordinary mortality-rate is upwards of forty in the thousand per annum, the rate in London being only twenty-five in the thousand.

That much good may be effected by the new municipal arrangements we cannot doubt, but how the inhabitants are to be persuaded to meet the vast increase in the expenditure we cannot tell. The taxes are already very heavily increased, and the Natives begin to complain rather bitterly. The Englishman puts the serious question of "Can the municipality with half a lakh of rupees of possible deficit staring them in the face, enter upon other expenses which will entail Rs. 14,400 more, making an annual deficit of Rs. 1,28,800?"

THE STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY AT BOMBAY.

THE Strangers' Friend Society just originated at Bombay promises to do great credit to that Presidency, or at least to wipe off a scandal to the British name in India. For some time past European beggars in the streets of Bombay, houseless and penniless, have been a common spectacle, and the natives had become familiar with the sight of white men—the men of "the ruling caste"—"master's caste"—in a state of abject misery and destitution, pitifully begging alms, not of people of their own creed and colour only, but even of black men. It was as much an object of sound policy as of a generous humanity to rescue our countrymen, and, indeed, all European strangers, from such degradation and distress. This institution for affording pecuniary assistance to deserving Europeans in a state of destitution has the warm support of the Governor of Bombay, the Chief Justice, and the Commander-in-Chief, and the Committee appointed to administer its funds includes the names of the leading men of the island in the ranks of merchants, bankers, barristers, medical men, and traders. Not only is immediate pecuniary aid to be given to distressed Europeans, but a "Strangers' Home" is to be provided, in which all deserving applicants will be accommodated for a time with board and lodging; and those who are unable to obtain employment in India, or who suffer too much from the climate to enable them to remain in the country except at the risk of life, are to be provided with passages to their own country, or to any of the British Colonies.

No direct appeal for subscriptions has been made to the Native community of the island. This is quite right. But though the Natives are not asked to subscribe, their voluntary assistance is not to be rejected, and we find that Mr. Cowasjee Jehangheer, with the munificent liberality characteristic of the Parsee gentry, has offered Rs. 50,000 towards the funds of the "Strangers' Home." This is not his only great public benefaction. This gentleman had previously contributed to a Hospital, a College, a University, and an Eye Infirmary, sums amounting to four lakhs of rupees: four lakhs and a-half from one Parsee private gentleman! Such princely munificence, such noble public spirit, ought not to pass unacknowledged or unhonoured by the Government or the community. Cowasjee Jehangheer has even surpassed his truly liberal and highly-respected countryman, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, and is, at all events, quite as much entitled to the honour of knighthood, or some other distinction from the British Government.

It is to be hoped that Bengal and the other Presidencies of India will follow the example set them by Bombay, and not allow the opprobrium to rest upon us of suffering our fellow-countrymen in a foreign land, and in a climate so fatal to the exposed and destitute white man, to depend entirely upon casual alms. It appears that some time since a few benevolent individuals in Calcutta started a project for providing employment for Europeans in India, or for procuring passages for them to Australia or to England, but it has taken no definite form, and has, perhaps, gone to the moon—

"For all things lost on earth are treasured there."

But the more substantial charity in Bombay may shame the European community of Bengal into a sense of their duty towards their suffering fellow-countrymen in the streets of their City of Palaces.

THE SANITARY CONDITION OF THE TROOPS IN INDIA.

At the meeting of the British Association a somewhat warm discussion took place on the above subject in the Section of Economy and Statistics, a paper having been previously read on the subject by Dr. Camp and Dr. Bird. The latter gentleman stated in the discussion that Dr. Camp's paper seemed to be an abstract of the Sanitary Commissioners' Report, which he contended—by leaving out the ratio between peace and war—was not correct in its statistics. The returns were mixed returns; it was absolutely necessary, in order to obtain a correct result, that the peace and war returns should be separated. He had no fear of the climate, if the sanitary measures necessary were carried out. Dr. Edward Balfour said, in 1849, that he differed entirely from Colonel Sykes's conclusion, that intemperance and vice were the main causes of disease; and he (Dr. Bird) differed from them also. The causes of the excessive mortality were heat, moisture, and localities. The station reports show that, although vice and intemperance had their effect. The colonel seemed to think that the rate of mortality in India was 67.9. He had shown that in the last twenty-six years it had scarcely exceeded forty-four, and in the last five years it had not exceeded thirty-five. He dissented from the colonel's opinion as to the excellence of the barracks. The great mortality was increased by ill-ventilated barracks and the filthy cesspools in the midst of them. He believed the proper remedial measures applied to them would cause life to be preserved in India as well as in any other country. He held that the respiratory functions of the human body could be acclimated to the warm region; but it is impossible to acclimatise any human body to miasmata, and he fully believed that in order to lessen the mortality of the troops in India it would be necessary to lay a good foundation for the barracks, and attend to their arrangements as carefully as those of workhouses and hospitals in this country were made—(applause).

Dr. Hunt entirely disagreed with Dr. Bird on the subject of acclimatisation. There was a physiological change produced, but it was not acclimatisation, but the gradual production of disease. With regard to the fact of the mortality being put down to intemperance and immorality, he must say he could find no evidence of that. It was certain that in such hot climates as that of India it was necessary for European inhabitants to take stimulants; the defence of teetotalism in India was objectionable. He held that there should be a judicious selection of men suited to hot climates; they could not preserve anyone in health there. As for attempting to rear the children of European parents, the system was utterly false. Throughout the whole of Bengal there was not the third generation of Europeans; the mortality among children was excessive, and, in fact, it was utterly impossible to rear children. His conclusion was that the only way to create a decrement of mortality among the troops would be the selection of men suitable for the climate.

Colonel Sykes defended the commission from the statements of Dr. Bird; for their reports they had the authority of a very great number of witnesses, and there could be no impeachment of the integrity of its members. Where great heat and moisture existed disease prevailed; but he found that where great heat prevailed along with dryness it was not detrimental to the health of the men. The great evil of the whole system was the employment of European troops in such numbers without real necessity, thus causing an enormous amount of misery amongst the families of the labouring poor in England. That was what most of all he deplored. A very great deal of expense had been incurred in barrack accommodation; and he was still of opinion that vice and intemperance were fruitful sources of disease. After considering what we had lost, the question for them was, what were we likely to lose in the future. At all events, we should preserve our power in India with the very smallest possible number of English troops; and he should even be inclined for us to run some risk for the sake of humanity, and for the preservation of the youthful blood and sinew of the country.

Dr. Hancock was of opinion that vice was a great source of the disease in India, but that was created in a great measure by the restrictions on marriage. The climate was not the cause. The arbitrary restrictions on the marriage of the men deprived them alike of friends and family, and they were driven to the vices which ultimately brought them to the hospitals.

Colonel Baker thought that the conclusion drawn from the papers before them, that the average 67.0 per thousand was the true average of the mortality of troops in India, was erroneous. He maintained that the sanitary measures of the Government in India had been very effective, and had reduced the average mortality in time of peace.

LORD CLYDE AND THE ARTILLERY OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,—I have read in the Times of the 24th of August an article on the funeral of the late Field Marshal Lord Clyde. It is there stated that an accident in India, which eventually told seriously on his health, was caused by his riding to overtake a "zealous Artillery officer who had been directed to move quietly round their (the enemy's) left flank, (and who) seeing masses of them bolting to the rear could not restrain his ardour, but unlimbered and opened fire."

As the Artillery officer alluded to, I must inform you that though Lord Clyde doubtless at the moment imagined I was pursuing in a direction chosen by myself, yet he was subsequently fully acquainted with the facts of the case—viz., that I had been ordered by my superior officer to pursue in the direction in which I was proceeding, and that I had neither disobeyed nor neglected his order.

I shall be obliged by your making this public, as the story has been told throughout the army, and I am known by many to be the officer alluded to.—I remain, your most obedient servant,
DAYID FRAZER, Captain R.H.A., Brevet
Lieut.-Colonel.

Woolwich, August 27.

THE ASSAULT OF ST. SEBASTIAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,—Mr. G. Freer's letter in the Times to-day must refer to the second assault of St. Sebastian, when that town was taken. The late Lord Clyde, then Lieut. Campbell, of the 9th, led the forlorn hope on the morning of the 25th of July, 1813. —See "Wellington Despatches," vol. 10, page 589:—

"I beg to recommend to your Lordship Lieut. Campbell, of the 9th, who led the forlorn hope, and who was severely wounded on the breach.

"THOMAS GRAHAM.

"To Field-Marshal the Marquis of Wellington, K.G." Despatch dated Hernani, 27th July, 1813.

THE PAYMASTER OF THE ENNIS-KILLENS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,—The following letter, a copy of which is in my possession, has been received by Mr. Smales from the War-office, giving an unexpected interpretation to the former one, in which it was intimated that a pardon had been granted to him by Her Majesty on the ground that the proceedings of the Mhow court martial were illegal, and thereby "vitiated."

Will you do me the favour to give this a place in your columns?—I remain, Sir, yours faithfully,
WILLIAM CONINGHAM.

Kempton, August 29.

"War-office, Aug. 26, 1863.

"SIR,—In reply to your letter of the 30th ult., in which you request, with reference to Her Majesty's pardon which has been recently granted to you, that you may receive your pay as a paymaster and that your name may be noted for immediate active employment, I am directed to acquaint you that the Secretary of State for War has been advised that the pardon which Her Majesty has been pleased to grant you has left you in the position of a civilian. I am therefore to inform you that you are not entitled to receive any pay, and, further, that it is not the intention of Earl de Grey and Ripon to submit your name to the Queen for appointment as a paymaster.

"ED. LUGARD.

"To Thomas Smales, Esq."

MISCELLANEOUS.

LORD CLYDE.—A correspondent of a Scotch paper furnishes the following:—"Having been professionally occupied recently in making a search in the old register of births and baptisms for the city of Glasgow, now deposited in the Register House, Edinburgh, I accidentally came upon that of our illustrious and gallant townsman, the late Lord Clyde, and having copied it from the register, I send it to you. The entry in the register establishes not only the name of his father, but is very strong evidence of his having been a citizen of Glasgow, if any further proof of these points were wanting. The entry is as follows:—'Glasgow, October, 1792. M'Liver, John M'Liver Wright, and Agnes Campbell: a L. Son Colin, bo. 20th. Witn., Kenneth M'Callum and Duncan Munro.'"

THE SCINDE RAILWAY COMPANY paid on the 20th of August £106,000 to the credit of the Secretary of State for India in Council, making, with a payment yesterday of £34,000, a total of £140,000, on account of the inconvertible Scinde Railway debentures recently issued, bearing interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The P. and O. steamer Ripon which left on Friday, took out £113,181, of which £105,690 is silver, and £7,491 gold. The respective amounts are £2,526 for India, £106,655 for China and the Straits; and £4,000 for Alexandria. There are also medals and clasps for Calcutta to the amount of £10,800.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for 40,00,000 rupees (£400,000) in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were:—To Calcutta, 22,70,000 rupees; to Bombay, 16,00,000 rupees; to Madras, 1,30,000 rupees. The declared minimum price was as before, 1s. 11½d. per rupee on Calcutta, and 1s. 11¾d. on Bombay and Madras. The applications within the limits amounted to 295 lakhs. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 41 per cent.; on Bombay at 1s. 11¾d. about 85 per cent. All above these prices, and all tenders on Madras will receive in full.

TELEGRAPH BETWEEN MALTA AND ALEXANDRIA.

—The Malta Times announces that the telegraphic communication between that island and Alexandria has been established. The flaw was discovered at a distance of sixty-four miles from Alexandria, at a spot where a stouter cable had been spliced on to the deep sea cable when the line was laid, owing to the rocky nature of that part of the coast. The faulty part having been cut out, the final splice was made on the morning of the 18th August, and at 3.30 p.m., the communication between Benghazi and Alexandria was restored. The line throughout between Malta and Alexandria is now re-opened to the public.

FIRE IN THE WEST INDIA DOCKS.—The fine ship Tweed, upwards of 2,000 tons, formerly the Punjab, 21-gun frigate, in the Indian service, and which has recently been chartered by Government for the conveyance of the great Indian telegraph cable, to be laid down between Suez, the Red Sea, to Bombay, narrowly escaped destruction by fire on Friday morning, the 28th ult. She is lying in the junction basin, West India Docks, where her owners, Messrs. Willis and Son, of Leadenhall-street, are fitting her out for the expedition. Three large iron-plated circular tanks have been built in her hold for the reception of the cable, and which are also to be filled with water for the preservation of the composition with which the cable is coated. At six o'clock on Friday morning two shipkeepers, who have charge of the ship, gave the alarm to the dock officers of the vessel being on fire. They stated they had discovered it on taking off the hatches for the workpeople. The steam tug of the dock company, which is fitted with fire-engine pumps, was at once put alongside the basin and got to work down the forehold, where the fire appeared to rage, though on account of the dense smoke that issued forth, it was impossible to trace out its exact locality for some time. The dock masters and superintendents of police were soon on the spot, with other engines belonging to the company, and every available force. After working a lengthened period it was ascertained that it was the port side of the vessel abaft the forehold that was on fire, where, fortunately, it was subsequently stopped from extending, though not without some difficulty, owing to the tank being built close to it. Several of her timbers are reported to be burnt, and portions of her tank will have to be taken down, if it is found necessary by the surveyor to remove them. As regards the fire, there is every reason to suspect that it arose from the neglect of some of the workmen employed in the construction of the tanks, by dropping a hot rivet, or some live cinders, from a portable furnace, among some rubbish or shavings in the hold, between the tank and the side of the ship. The dock officials are of opinion that but for the early discovery the ship would have been, in all probability, destroyed. She is fully insured.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of action is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared India-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

TEETH.—PATENT 764, AUG., 1855.—As

shown at the International Exhibition, Class XVII.—Messrs. LEWIN MOSLEY and SONS direct attention to their GUM-COLOURED ENAMELLED BASE FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and their complete system of Painless Dentures. Teeth from 5s.; Sets, 5, 8, 10, and 15 Guineas.—30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.—Established 1820. For the efficacy and success of this system, vide "Lancet."

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer. They will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

TENDER AND DECAYED TEETH STOPPED

with ANODYNE CEMENT, which instantly allays the most violent pain, and fills up cavities, however large, and answers where every other kind of stopping has failed. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta and Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, 61, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from 11 till 4. No connection with any person practising in the same profession.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—The Manufacturing

Dentist, being the actual maker throughout, can with certainty insure comfort and satisfaction where others have failed, and at a much lower charge. Mr. R. BRADSHAW, for several years Manufacturing Dentist to the Profession, 20, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street (Circus).

N.B.—Mr. BRADSHAW begs to say that no charge whatever is made by him unless satisfaction is given.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.

For which a Prize Medal was awarded to the Producer at the International Exhibition, 1862.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in furs, and every other species of insect.

SPORTSMEN will find this an invaluable remedy for destroying Fleas in their Dogs, as also Ladies for their Pet Dogs.

Being the Original Importer of this now invaluable article, which has found so great a sale that it has tempted others to vend a so-called article, the Public are therefore cautioned to observe that the Packets of the Genuine Powder bear the autograph of THOMAS KEATING.

Sold in packets 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, or post free for 14 or 36 postage stamps, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!

C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or, indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times, C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Milner, Price, Mordan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGE'S) ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA is appreciated for its Purity, and marked superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alternative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incidental to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINIDINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

IMPORTANT TO OFFICERS.—Have all

your BOTTLED ALES, WINES, &c., PACKED IN SEYMOUR'S REFRIGERANT STRAW ENVELOPES, which entirely prevent Heating, Fermentation, and Breakage; will use repeatedly as Wine Coolers, prevent all litter on board ship or in quarters, and save 20 per cent. in space and freight.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer,

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—

PAINFUL DISEASES.—Many simple maladies are permitted to become virulent through persons' reluctance to expose their intimacies to another. For rightly using Holloway's esteemed remedies no counsellor is necessary; no adviser beyond that contained in the accompanying directions is required. Piles, fistulas, and many other ailments which demand secrecy, can be safely conducted by Holloway's Ointment and Pills to an easy and permanent cure. They can be confidently applied in the most painful, irritating, and dangerous diseases; they purify, soothe, cool, heal, and radically cure when any treatment short of producing these combined effects must result in unsuccessful if not disastrous consequences. The severest sufferers of every class have been restored by Holloway's Ointment and Pills.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton on the 13th and 27th of the month except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THERE seems to be some probability of the King of Burmah coming to grief, for he is as obstinate and blind as the King of Prussia. The Burmese potentate may ere long be dethroned, either by his own subjects or by the British, if he pursues his present course of tyrannous exactions and violations of treaty. He has just prohibited the distillation of spirits, and even the consumption of wine and beer, which prohibition is a serious annoyance to British residents at his capital. A Major Halsted was not allowed to take his own beer from the Custom-house, and was ordered to sign a promise to abstain from drinking or selling spirituous liquors. His Majesty will hardly be suffered to play such fantastic tricks with impunity.

It is reported that all is quiet at Cabul just now; but it is feared that it will not long continue so, but may turn out to be only the lull that precedes a storm.

Dr. Duff, who was so seriously ill of dysentery that he was urged to leave Bengal without delay, has been to Singapore for change of air. His health is said to be considerably improved. Before returning to Europe he intends paying a final visit to the three Presidencies to inspect the several missions of his Church. Under the title of Convener, he has been appointed by the General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland to the superintendence of all its foreign missions. It was Dr. Duff's earnest desire to spend all his remaining days in India that he might devote himself exclusively to the cause of Christianity in the East; but his medical advisers tell him that another hot season would put a certain stop to his further useful exertions in any part of the world, and so he is obliged to end his distinguished career in Europe, after labouring for thirty years in the cause of Christian education amongst the Hindoos. He will hardly be suffered to leave the shores of India without some great public demonstration of the gratitude and admiration of the community, both European and native.

The Hindu petition to the British Government in India to put a stop to polygamy will strengthen the hands of our local legislators, who are very desirous to get rid of an evil which is peculiarly perplexing to our missionaries, who are puzzled to decide whether they ought to baptise a Hindu polygamist who wishes to enter a Christian Church. The Hon. Mr. Maine, it is said, is framing a Bill expressly applicable to Hindoo converts. It is proposed that if a heathen wife shall absent herself for more than a year from a Christian convert, the husband may dissolve the marriage. Whether the local Legislature will dare to pronounce Kulin polygamy illegal, and all wives after the first wife, concubines, and their children illegitimate, is "a question to be asked." We suspect it was an easier task to put a stop to the rite of suttee than to interfere so seriously in matters connected with the ancient civil rights and religious practices of so large and influential a class of people as the Kulin Brahmins.

The trade returns of British Burmah for 1862-3 show a total movement of £6,162,414, and a receipt of £193,153 for Customs duty, which is about a third of a million less than last year.

After all, there is to be no expedition into Thibet at present, for Lord Elgin has directed that everything shall be sold off that had been purchased under the orders of Government for the purposes of the expedition, which he so lately seemed disposed to assist.

Baboo Jodonath Boze, the librarian of the Calcutta C. E. College, has been sentenced to seven months' imprisonment for stealing books from the library, in order to sell them.

The Calcutta Englishman states that the officers of the late Bengal Artillery offer a regimental bonus of Rs. 1,500 to the senior and several below him to induce them to accept Sir C. Wood's £200 annuities.

The question of the Nana's identity is still unsettled.

Colonel Crawley's case is now the great Indian topic again. The question of whether he ordered he ordered his adjutant, Lieutenant FitzSimon, to place a sentry within the room where Mrs. Lilley lay ill in bed will depend, it seems, not on the lieutenant's personal credit alone, for he is said to possess a letter from the colonel which will place the matter beyond all doubt.

The first prosecution of a newspaper for defamation under the Penal Code has resulted in E. Ter Arratoon, editor of the Armenian paper, Philadelphus, being sentenced to three months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 500.

The Calcutta justices have presented £500 to Mr. Clarke, an engineer, to enable him to come to England to study the system of water supply and drainage.

The Rev. Dr. Duff has been succeeded in the Syndicate of the Calcutta University by the Rev. Dr. Mullens.

On Wednesday, the 29th July, the foundation-stone of the new college, which is to be the scene of the future educational efforts of the native youth of the district of Moorshebad, was laid at Berhampore by the Lieut.-Governor. There was a large concourse of natives present, and the proceedings passed off with much spirit.

The Delta, with the heavy portion of the mail, sailed at four P.M. yesterday. She may be expected at Southampton about the 23rd inst.

The Orissa brought the mails to Suez, arriving there on the 9th inst.

The Carnatic reached Calcutta on the 20th of August—fifty-four days from Southampton.

THE WRECK OF THE "GENERAL SIMPSON."—The week before last some spars belonging to a large ship and a few bales of cotton were washed ashore along our south and west coast, from Belligam to Ballepittymodera; the bales were opened by the natives, and the coverings destroyed so that the marks could not be made out; but about the 24th of last month a sailor's chest was found near Amblangodde, the contents of which left no doubt the unfortunate vessel was the General Simpson, Captain Coghead, which sailed from Bombay for Liverpool on the 7th of June. A telegram received from Bombay by a mercantile house here says, "General Simpson was left by captain with cargo entire on Chittai, in the Laccadives, on the 16th of July. She was wrecked on the 19th of June." As Chittai is in about 11 deg. 30 min. North, and 73 deg. 30 min. East, what has drifted from the wreck to our shores has come about four hundred and fifty miles in a south-easterly direction, in the height of the south-west monsoon, in little over thirty days. We learn from the Bombay Times that the captain and crew were conveyed to that port by the steamer Coromandel, which called at the Laccadives with provisions.—Colombo Observer, August 30.

THE NANA.

A correspondent writing from Rajpootana anent the Great Fish alleged to be the Nana, asks if it is true, as is currently reported, that the superintendent of police at Ajmeer, an officer of known judgment and ability, and intimately acquainted with the native character, informed the Ajmeer authorities in the first instance, that the evidence of the informers was altogether untrustworthy, and that it was his deliberate opinion that the prisoner was not the Nana. Notwithstanding which it is stated in an official letter to Government, published in the Bombay Times, that "there is not the slightest doubt whatever, that the prisoner now in the Ajmeer magazine under European guard of 28th regiment, is the Nana Dhundoo Punt."

Our correspondent further asks, "who is the man on whose information the capture was effected, and on whose ipse dixit the whole country has been thrown into a state of excitement? What are his antecedents? If the Bombay Times of the 13th inst. is correct, he is the very man who deceived no less a person than the great Forjett himself, in the case of the Rao Sahib. It was clearly proved on that occasion that every particle of evidence tendered was fabricated by this man and his confrère."

Our correspondent adds, "it is generally reported that when the prisoner was captured at Ajmeer, the magazine was barricaded, one gateway was bricked up, application was made to provision the fort, and a demand made for another company of British infantry and a squadron of cavalry;" and asks if these reports are true.

We are unable to answer these questions, but this much is clear to us, that the sooner the identity of the man is at rest the better. The authorities there seem to be playing with their fish, in a most extraordinary way. We have ourselves pointed out three parties who could identify the Nana. Why are they not sent down at Government expense to give their evidence, and put an end to a state of local politics at Ajmeer and the neighbourhood, which will soon end in a catastrophe similar to that of the Kilkenny cats, the only survivor being the Great Unknown himself. At any rate we must protest against parading the prisoner all through India with a European escort at this season of the year, because the journey will not be to the advantage of the health of the escort, and because should it turn out not to be the right man after all, the Government will be put in an absurd position.

If the man is not the Nana, surely he need not be so aggravating—why can't he say who he is? Well this he has done. His own story is, that he is a poor Brahmin, who used to get his living by begging, and he declares he was known to a number of people within an area of thirty miles from Ajmeer. Now, this statement can surely be verified, or the contrary.

Thus far it is verified. We believe that a man named Wittoba, a clerk in the commissariat department at Nusseerabad, was arrested on the evidence of Gyaprasad, and on being confronted with the prisoner in the presence of several officers and soldiers, said he knew him, that he had seen him at Nusseerabad in the cold weather; at that time he wore a beard, and he gave him (prisoner) one rupee—that many other persons gave him alms, and that he was known to all the bunneehs at Nusseerabad. This man Wittoba is kept a close prisoner. Is his evidence true or false? One part of it, we venture to hazard the assertion, is a downright lie, and that is that he ever gave a beggar a rupee. The 'Anti-Nana' party at Ajmeer may believe it, credat Judæus non ego. As to the rest of the story there is nothing that a man of ordinary intelligence and activity could not sift to the bottom in a couple of days.

A common-place outsider is occasionally struck quite dumb with amazement at the occasional revelations we get of the almost supernatural wisdom lodged like a precious talisman in a casket of jewels, in the different departments of Government. Every political like every civilian has a highly confidential native—in the shape of a serishtadar or a moonshee—he is always a man of very high family, trustworthy, "quite different you know from any other natives, thoroughly honest and very intelligent"—hence divers strange phenomena and phases of administration, startling discoveries, indignant incredulities, astounding decisions, unheard of tyranny and very generally prevailing muddle. The best of it is the singular pertinacity with which each individual Solon persuades himself that his own particular friend is quite different from all the rest of his countrymen. Each has a unique specimen of his own, a confidant and adviser under whose guidance with lamb-like gentleness he allows himself to be led: quite ignorant at the time that he is led, and ready to fly into a burst of indignation were anyone to hint he was led. Talk about natives having no share in the Government of the country! Why, they never had a greater, no not in the time of the Mogul Emperors; the whole administration is in the hands of Moonshees and Baboos, who do not the less govern the country that they do it through the instrumentality of European officials, who imagine that they pull the strings while the dolls dance, whereas it is they who dance, while their astute monitors pull the strings.

With regard to the question more immediately before us, from which we have digressed awhile, our advice is, that one of the two officers (or both), whom we have mentioned as being able to identify the Nana, should be sent down to Ajmeer to examine and report.

Meantime let the man prove, if he be not the Nana, who he is; but to send him without further investigation with a European escort all round the country is unadvisable. We knew a week ago, that a European escort had been applied for to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and that there has been an intention to remove the prisoner.—Delhi Gazette, July 29.

THE SUPPOSED NANA.

The Bombay Times of the 20th inst. contains a detailed account of the capture of the supposed Nana, which more than confirms the suspicions we have all along entertained as to the identity of the prisoner with the arch-rebel of Bithoor. The evidence of Sergeant-major Wilkins, A battalion, 4th brigade, R.A., Nusseerabad, and formerly of the 14th Light Dragoons, is utterly worthless. He states that, when stationed at Meerut with his regiment, he was constantly in the habit of seeing the Nana, and had spoken to him. He further deposes that, when he mentioned the name of Captain Chamberlain, of the 14th Light Dragoons, who used to ride the Nana's horses, the prisoner gave a start; as he also did when allusion was made to his having been on somewhat too familiar terms with an Englishwoman attached to that regiment. Now, though we cannot take upon ourselves to assert that the Nana never was at Meerut, we are quite certain that his visits were exceedingly few and far between, and that, consequently, Sergeant-major Wilkins could not have seen him there "constantly." He himself admits that the so-called Nana has very much altered in appearance from what he used to be, though the form and style of his features remain unchanged. It would not in the least surprise us if it turned out that this witness was thinking of Lalla Jotee Pershad, whose portrait figured in the Illustrated London News as that of the Nana, and thus deceived the bold dragoon into the notion that he had once spoken to the greatest villain of the age.

Not less unsatisfactory is the evidence of the spy, Gya Persaud, who indulges in very wild flights of fancy. According to this witness, the Nana was for some time hospitably treated by the Maharajah of Cashmere—whose example was followed by the Rao of Kutch, that ruler presenting him, in addition, with the sum of Rs. 50,000. From Kutch the wanderer proceeded into the territory of the Ram Rajah, where he left his wife and children, after investing eighty lakhs of rupees for their maintenance. Tania Topee, continued the spy, is still alive in Bikaner, and goes about with an escort of the Rajah's sowars; the man who was hanged by Major

Meade being a Brahmin of the name of Tantia. Five thousand of the old Bengal sepoys are said to be still at Saloomba, while five-and-thirty thousand more are in the temporary service of the Independent States, awaiting the signal to rise and avenge themselves upon the Maharajah of Puttiala, in the first instance, and then to kindle the flames of civil war throughout Rajpootana and the Deccan. Such is the incoherent talk of the Nana's betrayer, but not on such evidence as this should any man be deprived of his liberty.

The execution of Tantia Topce was one of the greatest mistakes that could possibly have been made. As Wilkes remarked, the worst use to which you can put a man is to hang him. It proves nothing, and teaches nothing. In a country like India, it is beyond the power of any Government to convince the people that it is the real offender who is brought to justice. Cases of mistaken identity occur every day, and on no point are men more doggedly obstinate than on the accuracy of their perceptive faculty—notoriously the weakest and most deceptive of all. The history of every country under the sun is full of instances of pretenders and impostors who have successfully passed themselves off as the real personages whose death had been falsely announced and credited. It is, therefore, not at all astonishing that an ignorant and credulous population should lend a willing ear to any rumours which they would like to come true. But it is very unlikely that an officer of General Lawrence's experience and knowledge of the native character would remain in ignorance of any mustering of troops in Saloomba and the adjacent States. We cannot, indeed, affirm that the genuine Nana has not at last been captured, though we have serious doubts on the subject; but we much regret that the Government is not in a position to remove all scepticism in reference to Tantia Topce by producing him before the public. Had he been sent to England instead of to the gallows, he would have been converted into the most zealous apostle of obedience and peace, and would have done more to dispel the delusions of his countrymen as to the power of Great Britain, than would a reinforcement of 100,000 men to the European army at present in India.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 31.

A VIOLENT PHYSICIAN.

The sentence passed by Mr. Justice Wells upon Dr. Warden should serve as a terrible warning to others not to yield to the dominion of their lawless passions. Eighteen months' rigorous imprisonment in the climate of Bengal is little short of capital punishment in the case of a European possessed of some sort of education and refinement. We do not, however, regard it, under all the circumstances of the case, as at all too severe a penalty for the crime of which the prisoner was clearly proved to be guilty, aggravated as it was by the defence he set up. Had the blow he inflicted been purely accidental, his wisest course, in every respect, would have been to have confessed his fault, and thrown himself upon the mercy of the Court. Instead of doing so, he told a rambling tale, false from beginning to end, and then had the assurance to ask the jury to believe him on the word and honour of a gentleman. He went, he said, to the prosecutor's shop in company with three other persons, not one of whom did he call as a witness, nor did he even mention their names. Having made his purchases, he stepped into his gharry and drove off in the direction of his own house. The shopman, he continued, followed him, and demanded payment for the goods, though sold on credit, and created such a disturbance that a crowd gathered around and began pelting him with stones. By this time the prosecutor arrived upon the spot and endeavoured to remove the goods by force, and in the struggle that ensued accidentally received a slight wound on the head from a sharp-pointed knife, which he (the prisoner) had all along held in his hand to prevent the point from being blunted. For the prosecution it was consistently stated that Dr. Warden was without any companions when he entered the prosecutor's shop; that he selected such articles as he required, and had them placed in his conveyance; and that he himself then stepped in and drove off. The shopman, having no authority to give credit to strangers, immediately gave chase, and, stopping the gharry, demanded payment or restitution. The prisoner declined to accede to either alternative, and an altercation ensued, in the midst of which a policeman came up while the neighbours gathered around. Leaving the constable in charge of the goods, the shopman hurried off to the Thannah for assistance, and in the meantime his employer arrived and also offered to take back his property. But the prisoner seems to have imagined that when the things were once placed in his gharry they became to all intents and purposes his own, and that he was authorised to defend them by every means in his power. Finding expostulation and entreaties to be alike in vain, the prosecutor put forth his hand to remove his pots and pans from the carriage, when the prisoner struck him a smart blow on the head with a pointed knife, inflicting a severe, though, fortunately, not a fatal wound. For this Dr. Warden has been justly doomed to eighteen months' rigorous punishment, in the course of which he will have time to arrive at a better knowledge of the characteristic attributes of a gentleman than he appears at present to possess.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 31.

ALEXANDER DUFF, D.D.

What the earnest and reiterated invitations of the Free Church of Scotland during the last fifteen years have failed to effect, a sudden stroke of sickness has accomplished. After services, which this is not the occasion for us to estimate, extending over more than the third of a century—services such as it has fallen to the lot of no one man to render to Indian progress as well as Christian Missions, the Rev. Dr. Duff has been driven from his post by a higher Power than any ecclesiastical authority. Weakened by that disease which the Englishman in the East dreads more than cholera, Dr. Duff has been removed only in time to Singapore, and thence, if his recovery will allow of it, he proposes to visit Java. Before returning to Bengal at the close of the year, it is his intention to inspect for the last time all those Missions in the three Presidencies which he did so much to call into existence; and then, after bidding farewell to India, to visit the Missions of his Church in South Africa on his way home.

Dr. Duff has been requested by the General Assembly of the Free Church to take, under the Scotch title of "Convener," the superintendence and executive administration of all its Foreign Missions. Nothing will make up to India for his absence from it, for there is no one who can fill that peculiar position as representative of non-official Christian men, which he has used with such effect to make Indian education all that is, and Indian society much that it has become, at the present day. But for the sake of the Church of which he is the most distinguished Missionary he could not return at a more critical time. The great men who put that body in the first rank of the Reformed Churches have either, like Chalmers, passed away, or, like Dr. Candlish, have so far fallen into the dotage of advancing years as to insult the Queen in the hour of her wifely sorrow; or like Dr. Guthrie and Dr. Hanna, have preferred the active duties of philanthropy and the graces of literature to the squabbles of sectaries. Mere ecclesiastical demagogues like Dr. Begg seem to be the only leaders the Church has got. It is important, at a time when the vessel needs a pilot whose charity and knowledge of mankind are equal to his zeal, that one who has learned—as we all learn in India—the folly of ecclesiastical shibboleths and the pricelessness of true charity and broad-minded wisdom, should fill the gap in the Church, until the younger men with a higher culture and wider spirituality than sectaries can understand, are equal to the task.

After the death of Dr. Chalmers, in 1847, there was an earnest movement in the Free Church to recall Dr. Duff as his successor in the college. This the latter declined, as well as the subsequent request to act as Convener of the Foreign Mission Committee. Still he was unanimously summoned home temporarily, to organise the whole Mission scheme on a wider and more solid basis, and from 1850 to 1855 he engaged in the duty with such energy that his life was hardly saved. Before his return to India he was again importuned to remain, but he emphatically refused, desiring to end his days in the work and in the land to which he had devoted his life. Recently Dr. Hanna, the son-in-law and biographer of Dr. Chalmers, accepted the Convener'ship, but the work was too much for one whose duties as a colleague of Dr. Guthrie were increased by a visit to the Holy Land and by literary work. On this occasion, last May, the general assembly unanimously resolved again to ask Dr. Duff to undertake the office, and his illness, which makes it fatal for him to spend another hot season in Bengal, has left him no alternative but to accept the invitation. When he returns from the Straits to bid farewell to India at the close of the year, it will be strange if those Englishmen and Asiatics who have ever been foremost in honouring philanthropists like Bentinck, allow one who for more than thirty years has borne the burden and heat of the day, to leave the scene of his peaceful triumphs in silence.—Friend of India.

THE PROPOSED DETECTIVES.

It is the intention of the Bengal Government to abolish the department for the suppression of dacoity, and to establish in its place a detective police under the Inspector General. The detective officers will exercise only police powers; that is, they will arrest criminals, but not commit them for trial. It is very doubtful whether such a system is practicable in this country, where it has been found that information derived from spies and informers cannot be depended upon. For this very reason Mr. Wauchope was compelled to introduce the Thuggee system into the Dacoity Department. That system requires that an accomplice witness who confesses to a dacoity shall be convicted and sentenced before his evidence can be used against his accomplices. The object is to have a hold over these men. In case they are found telling lies and accusing falsely, the sentence of transportation already recorded against them is instantly carried into execution. No doubt this was a great check on approvers. It is not likely "that an innocent man in his senses would deliberately and voluntarily sacrifice liberty by making confessions prejudicial to his interest and safety, unless urged by the promptings of truth and conscience." It is still more unlikely that he would make false statements and utter false accusations when he knows the penalty is transportation across the black waters, which a native of Bengal so superstitiously dreads. This safeguard is about to be sacrificed to another trial of a system which has been already tried and condemned. New and inexperienced men are ready to advocate a return to a plan which will open the door to all the abuses and oppressions of the old police Goindah system.

Allowing for a moment that such a change is practicable, it is a work of time to organise a trustworthy body of detectives, especially in a country like Bengal. Is it wise to allow the dacoits to have it all their own way until such a body of men can be organised? We believe the Dacoity Department has not had a fair trial. There has been but one Dacoity Commissioner, with two or three deputy magistrates in three or four districts. An establishment so limited can carry on operations in half-a-dozen districts; but it is absurd to expect that so inadequate an organisation could possibly make head against the crime of dacoity over the entire province of Bengal. As well might we expect the Secretary to the local Government with an establishment of one hundred coolies to cultivate the waste lands of Bengal! We believe the only detective system that can with safety be tried in Bengal is that which has proved so successful in putting down Thugs—that of using the evidence of convicted accomplices when clearly corroborated by independent evidence. We fear that, trusting to the statements of spies and Goindahs, will in the end prove a miserable failure.

COMPETITION AND THE CIVIL SERVICE.

While most Indian authorities, as well as the competition civilians themselves, deprecate all discussion on the respective demerits of Haileybury and non-Haileybury men as premature and unfair, Sir Charles Trevelyan has proceeded to action. Whether the press and the parties concerned discuss the question or not, there will be changes in the accessories, if not in the principle, of the present system; and it would be well for all concerned not to drop the agitation of which so much complaint has been made. Whether the principle of competition is bad or good England is committed to it. The struggle for a comfortable existence there is so great, that if Mr. Darwin philosophised upon it he would inevitably apply his peculiar theory to the facts. Selection for public offices by competition instead of patronage, must now be accepted as much as the education of the lower classes, which statesmen opposed in England thirty years ago as bitterly as the Bengal Government does now. But especially as applied to India the system, like most of our hasty reforms during the past ten years, is in a transition state, and it was not to be expected that one who has taken so paternal an interest in it as Sir Charles Trevelyan would allow it to pass without criticism and suggestions. While he, accordingly, calls for information and addresses a despatch to the Secretary of State on the subject, a member of his family enlightens the general public on the question by letters in Macmillan. This despatch is sure to result in certain changes, for an Indian career has so been misrepresented of late, that it begins to be difficult to secure even mediocre candidates at the annual examinations.

Recognising to some extent the want of physical energy, polished manners, and knowledge of each other among the competition civilians, Sir Charles Trevelyan has, we understand, made something like the following recommendations. The age at which candidates may pass the first examination for the Indian Civil Service in London should be from eighteen to twenty-one years. Each successful candidate should attend Oxford or Cambridge for at least two years, the maximum age for proceeding to India being twenty-three years. During these two years no allowance of any kind should be made to the candidates, as at present; for wealth ought, in these appointments, to have that legitimate influence which is denied to patronage. The candidates should, besides the usual college examinations, study the vernaculars of the Presidency to which each is to be sent; and on arrival in India they should be at once posted to their stations, or to act as assistants to Judges and Commissioners, the best being detained for preliminary work in the Secretariats. Sir Charles Trevelyan considers the present examinations in Calcutta most unsatisfactory and useless. Now we have here to consider the competition civilian in England and in India. As to the former, we look upon this plan as faulty, inasmuch as it does not provide against cramming for the first examination which is open to all the world. Sir Charles thinks England will not tolerate any such limitation of free and unrestricted competition, as is involved in the proposal that only those candidates should be allowed to apply, who have attended one of a fixed number of first-class public schools. We believe this to be imaginary, and that, on the contrary, the whole middle and educated classes would be in favour of a limitation which would improve our public schools without limiting their freedom; would destroy the pernicious trade of "grinders" and "crammers;" and would secure that high physique and those manly instincts which are the fruit of the great schools of England, the Royal Schools of Ireland, and such schools in Scotland as the High School and New Academy of Edinburgh. The next objection to Sir Charles Trevelyan's plan is the supposition that wealth will have its legitimate influence if no allowance is made during the two years of college life after the first examination. This will not deter poor men from applying, for it will be easy for them, with the certainty of high salaries on reaching India, to borrow the five or six hundred pounds necessary for college expenses and passage money. On the other hand, the young men with good expectations or a little capital whom it is thus intended to attract, will be repelled from India, for they consider the career offered them already too uninviting. It seems to us that Sir Charles Trevelyan will, by this means, effect the very opposite of what he wishes to secure. So far from attracting the sons of well-to-do gentlemen, he will obtain only the sons of poor men. Our third objection is that unless the competition men are concentrated in one college of one University like Downing in Cambridge, they will obtain very much less knowledge of each other than by the present nine or six months' residence in the presidency towns. We would therefore limit the sphere of competition to candidates trained at certain public schools, we would pay them at least their college expenses, and we would attach them to one college in one of the Universities.

Turning to the civilian on his arrival in India Sir Charles Trevelyan's suggestion is unexceptionable. As a rule the period spent with pundits and moonshees at the presidency towns is time lost. The confession is almost universal that nothing worth knowing, which might not be acquired in England, is learned in India, till the civilian enters a cutcherry. Worse than this, the time wasted in Calcutta is that which disgusts youths who have been already drugged with examinations and who pant for work; while the temptations of the low dens of the capital and the towns in its vicinity, unbalanced by the amenities of social and family life, too often rob the civilian of the bloom of his youth and convert him into a sensualist. In the court of a judge, or the office of a commissioner or a secretary to Government, the young civilian, fresh from the influences of one of the great Universities, would begin his Indian career with a satisfaction which might soon develop into an elevated enthusiasm at present too seldom experienced, because the formal examinations and degrading pleasures of Calcutta have nipped it in the bud.—Friend of India.

THE AFFGHAN CHESS-BEARD.

It is fortunate that one who was both an able soldier and an observant diplomatist was at the head of the mission which we sent to Candahar in 1857. Colonel Lumsden has furnished the English Government with a mass of detailed information regarding the rulers, the people, and the resources of Affghanistan, which is as reliable now as it was when first collected from personal observation and study only five years ago. It has also been our custom to maintain in Cabul a native agent or vakeel who, while he had the full confidence of the late Ameer, never failed on that account to supply us periodically with the most trustworthy details. Up to the moment that the Affghan army entered the so-called independent territory of Herat, when the presence of any English or Persian envoy would have been a violation of the treaty, our Vakeel accompanied the Ameer. Since he was instructed by us to confine himself within Affghanistan proper, his intelligence has been more delayed but hardly less valuable than before.

The most dangerous enemies of the late Ameer Dost Mahomed Khan were his brothers, sons of the same father, though of different mothers. The two survivors, who are older than he was, are wretches so utterly abandoned to all that is despicable in avarice and degrading in vice, each being a "monstrum nulla virtute redemptum," that they may be left out of account as politically powerless. But the only brother younger than the late Ameer, Sirdar Ramdhill Khan, is dangerous as an intriguer. A loathsome skin disease will always prevent him from taking any active part in public life, but he, in common with his brothers and thirty nephews, constitutes a party whom Persia is likely to use as its agents in annoying Cabul. One of the nephews, bearing the same name as the present Ameer, Shere Ali Khan, was Prime Minister of the late Sultan Jan of Herat. Another was in perpetual exile in Persia, and governed Sharukhs while the Shah occupied that district. The majority of the nephews have lived under a sort of surveillance as pensioners in Cabul, and it remains to be seen if they will rest contented under their cousin's rule. So poor is the country, and so dominant are the Baruckzyes, that there is not one man of influence in all Affghanistan out of the circle of Dost Mahomed's relatives. To them any struggle which may ensue will probably be limited. Dismissing, therefore, the brothers and nephews of the late Ameer as not likely to be dangerous except through Persian support—with one exception about to be noticed—we come to the sons of Dost Mahomed.

The favourite wife of the late Ameer was of the Populzye clan, which included the Suddozye royal family whom Dost Mahomed supplanted, and was sister of one of the wives of Shah Sujah. By her Dost Mahomed had three sons, Akbar Khan, Gholam Hyder Khan, and Shere Ali Khan. The first was his favourite son, who fought his battles, shared his captivity in Bokhara, and when he was an English prisoner kept the way open for his return to Cabul. He was the first heir-apparent, but died in 1848. His brother, Gholam Hyder Khan, succeeded him as heir-apparent, but died in 1858, and he was succeeded by Shere Ali Khan, the present Ameer. As the offspring of a Suddozye mother, and relative of Shah Sujah and the great Baruckzye, his father, he combines, like Henry VII. in English history, the pretensions of rival houses. This fact will probably form no unimportant element in the facility with which he may hold the throne, for Asiatics are great legitimists till loyalty is either hopeless or contrary to their own interests. But he is as much opposed to the English as his brother was in their favour. He is not quite forty years of age, and is described by his countrymen as having no little intelligence and aptitude for business. He is subject to the disease of his family—gout, and is a man of violent temper and cruel disposition. So disgusted was he with the English alliance, and eager in 1857 to take advantage of the rebellion in Hindostan, that he showed every mark of ill-will to Colonel Lumsden and our mission, and was in perpetual feud with the then heir-apparent, his own brother, who saw the advantages of the alliance. His favourite wife, like his own mother, is also a Populzye, and his heir-apparent, Mahomed Ali Khan, is her son. He and his family seem to be filled with the Douranee hate to us, and he is most unscrupulous. His most reliable assistant is Sharif Khan, his brother, who has hitherto governed the provinces of Mukhar and Alikhel.

The second party consists of the Ameer's nephews, the two sons of the famous Akbar Khan, Futeh Mahomed Khan, and Jullal-ooddeen Khan. Inheritors of their father's renown, they would fain exercise that supreme power which would have been his had he lived, and theirs after him. They are respectively twenty and twenty-five years of age, and have a private grievance of their own. According to Mussulman law their uncle, the late heir-apparent, married their father's wives, and then secured all their property to the amount of seven lakhs of rupees. The boys were thus reduced to poverty, which so stimulated their martial spirit that even Dost Mahomed could hardly restrain them. If there is the slightest prospect of a rebellion being successful they are sure to strike for power. The chief security that the present Ameer will not annoy our frontier or sell himself to his father's greatest enemy, Persia, is, that his brother by a different mother, Mahomed Azim Khan, is a most superior administrator for an Affghan, and is so convinced of the benefits of the alliance with us that in July, 1857, when the Affghans clamoured to be led against us that they might recover Peshawur and take Delhi, he was the most active in opposing them. He is at the head of the third party, and there can be no doubt that it would be for our interest if he were Ameer. He has hitherto governed the Kohistan, and is supported by Aslam Khan, the Lord of Bamian, and Asman Khan, a Suddozye, who lives on an allowance in Cabul. Such are the three parties. We have not mentioned Afzul Khan, the conqueror of Balkh and Turkistan, for, being allied by marriage with the young Khan of Bokhara, his policy is to carve out a kingdom for himself in Turkistan and the frontier provinces of Persia. The eldest of all the Ameer's sons, he is now nearly sixty years of age. He has governed Balkh better than any of the numerous adventurers who have successively held it.

It is not to be denied that the conduct of the present Ameer in 1857, and his unconcealed hate of the English alliance, are causes of some anxiety to us. Not only may he stir up the tribes on our frontier as his father did before 1850, but he may ally himself with Persia, and make Cabul as much an asylum for discontented Muslims and rebel Hindoos as Mecca, Teheran, and Herat have been. On the other hand, the rivalry of his brother and our friend Azim Khan, whom he keeps beside himself in Cabul, and the restlessness of his brother Akbar Khan's sons, as well as the new responsibility which he has assumed as a ruler, may combine to lead him in Dost Mahomed's footsteps. This much is certain, that our Punjab irregular army has never been so perfect, the frontier tribes so peaceful, and the frontier posts so secure. Nor is it less certain that no contingency short of a Persian invasion of Afghanistan or Beloochistan will tempt us to move beyond that rampart which nature has rendered almost impregnable. Meanwhile the latest intelligence represents all as quiet in Cabul, and we can only trust that the lull is not that which precedes the storm. The surest sign of perfect peace in Afghanistan will be the revival of that Central Asian trade which has been so seriously diminished since Dost Mahomed advanced to capture Herat.—Friend of India.

REDUCTION OF FARES BY THE MESSAGERIES IMPERIALES.

The French have at last done for the British in and connected with India, what up to this time they have been unable to do for themselves or for one another; and we hope that in what has now been thrown open for one class of the Anglo-Indian community we are justified in expecting a not far distant extension of its benefits to us all. The Messageries Impariales have thrown open to military and naval officers, French and English, travelling on their lines to and from Europe, India and China, first-class passages on board their steamers at a deduction of thirty per cent. from the rates paid by civilians; and to non-commissioned officers and private soldiers passages are available at a deduction of fifty per cent. on the rates paid by non-military travellers of a similar class in society; always providing that the officers and soldiers are travelling on their own account, and not on service. Here is a substantial boon, which will be hailed by the military body throughout India with universal and heartfelt satisfaction, placing, as it does, at the disposal of officers and men the means of revisiting, or retiring to, their native country, their homes, and their friends and families, at fair and reasonable passage rates, with a most welcome abatement from the enormous fares hitherto paid, or avoided, by a class of the Anglo-Indian community notoriously not over-burdened with money. A first class passage for a British military or naval officer, from Calcutta to Marseilles, can now be had for about Rs. 750, and at proportionate rates between intermediate places, and steady non-commissioned and warrant officers may henceforward hope, with care and prudence, once more to see their native land and the scenes of their childhood. We think that although this boon is not as yet universal, but is limited to "the services," the entire English community in India will join us in saying that the French company is largely entitled to their gratitude and good wishes; and we sincerely hope that what is now thrown open to a class only, may soon, through the success and prosperity of the Messageries Impariales, be conceded to the whole. The days of monopoly are at an end on the Indian lines; let us hope that the days of extortionate and prohibitory passage rates which many cannot meet at all, and which few can pay without distressing themselves, are also drawing to a close for all of us. We have not for a long time made an announcement which has given us so much satisfaction as the above, looking upon it, as we do, to be "the beginning of the end" of a system of passage rates which is disgraceful to us as a great maritime nation.—Englishman, August 3.

BENGAL CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.

At a special general meeting of subscribers to the Bengal Civil Service Annuity Fund, held at the Town Hall on the 29th July, 1863,

PRESENT:—

A. Grote, Esq., the Hon. A. A. Roberts, E. C. Bayley, Esq., S. Wauchope, Esq., V. H. Schallch, Esq., the Hon. G. Campbell, C. P. Hobhouse, Esq., C. F. Carnac, Esq., E. F. Harrison, Esq., J. A. Crawford, Esq., the Hon. A. Eden, H. A. Cockerell, Esq., A. M. Monteath, Esq., J. Geoghagan, Esq., A. C. Tupp, Esq., and J. C. Graves, Esq.,

The Hon. A. A. Roberts in the chair,

The report of the committee nominated by the managers, in accordance with the resolution of the last general meeting, to consider the measures proposed by the Secretary of State in connection with the fund having been laid upon the table, the following motions were made:—

(a.) Moved by Mr. Monteath, and seconded by Mr. Wauchope, that the recommendation made by the committee on the point classed as No. 2 in the 11th page of their report be adopted; the Secretary of State's scheme being accepted by the meeting as an earnest of the desire of the Government to meet the wishes expressed in the memorial of February 4, 1862, but without abandoning the expectation of obtaining terms more commensurate with the privileges the loss of which was made the basis of the memorial in question.

(b.) Moved as an amendment by Mr. Eden, and seconded by Mr. Hobhouse, that the recommendation made by the committee on the point classed as No. 2 in the 11th page of their Report be adopted; the Secretary of State's scheme, in respect of the assignment and scale of annuities, being accepted by the meeting on the understanding that the interpretation put thereon by the committee is correct; and the question of the inclusion of private affairs leave in the calculation of residence being left for separate discussion.

(c.) Moved as an amendment by Mr. Bayley, and seconded by Mr. Crawford, that the recommendation made by the committee on the point classed as No. 2 in the 11th page of their report be adopted; the Secretary of State's scheme being accepted by the meeting as an earnest of the desire of the Government to meet the wishes expressed in the memorial of the 4th February, 1862, but without abandoning the expectation of obtaining terms more commensurate with the privileges the loss of which was made the basis of the memorial in question, and on the understanding that the interpretation put thereon by the committee is correct.

In bringing forward the above motions it was explained that Mr. Monteath's motion (a) was a simple adoption of the Committee's recommendation, contemplating an unconditional acceptance of the Secretary of State's scheme, but guarding the unconditional acceptance so proposed from being construed into a complete and final surrender of the claim of the service to further compensation.

In respect of Mr. Eden's amendment (b) it was explained that the acceptance by the service of the scheme was proposed to be conditional on the acceptance by the Secretary of State of the interpretation put thereon by the committee; the express reservation of a contingent claim to further compensation being in that view deemed unnecessary and objectionable.

Mr. Bayley's amendment (c) was explained to have for its object the retention of the reserved claim contemplated in Mr. Monteath's motion, together with the condition contemplated in Mr. Eden's amendment; it being, in the opinion of the mover, inexpedient either to part with the claim to further compensation on account of a measure the full effect of which on the prospects of the service was as yet uncertain, or to accept meantime a scheme without an explicit understanding as to the interpretation to be put on some of its provisions.

Mr. Bayley's amendment (c) having been put to the meeting was lost, there not being nine concurrent voices of members present to support it.

Mr. Eden's amendment (b) having been put to the meeting was lost, thirteen votes (including four proxies) being recorded for it, and fourteen votes (including eight proxies) being recorded against it.

Mr. Monteath's motion (a) having been put to the meeting was lost, there not being nine concurrent voices of members present to support it.

It was then proposed by Mr. Bayley, seconded by Mr. Crawford, and carried, that the whole of the questions respecting the annuity fund arising out of the Secretary of State's despatch of the 25th November, 1862, and the committee's report thereon, be postponed for consideration at a special general meeting to be convened by the managers for this day two months (Tuesday, the 29th September). In adopting this resolution a hope was expressed by the meeting that the consideration of so important a subject would not again be frustrated by the small attendance of subscribers, rendering uncertain the obtaining of the required number of nine concurrent voices of members present in support of motions which might otherwise have been carried.

ANARCHY ON BOARD THE HOSPITAL-SHIP IN THE HOOGLY.

The Englishman may have been in possession of full details of the late disturbance on board the Bentuck when he declared that "Dr. Franklin was throughout thoroughly and completely in the right," but his informant was very far from being impartial. No one ever disputed Dr. Franklin's "legitimate power and authority." All that anybody ever asked for was, that that authority should be exercised in a discreet and gentlemanly manner, and not with an arrogant demeanour, or in loud and boisterous tones. It would have been far better had the whole affair been left in the hands of those whom it principally concerned. There was no occasion whatever for dragging it into publicity; but nothing ever comes amiss to the voracious maw of our contemporary, who would any day ruin a character to fill a column. On the principle, however, of being thankful for small mercies, we should at least be grateful that it has escaped the vulgar buffoonery of the "low comedian" who acts the part of the drunken Heiot in the Englishman's weekly supplement. But it is more to the purpose to state the exact circumstances of the case.

It is quite true that a young officer who had arrived at the convalescent stage invited four of his friends to a light repast of oysters, washed down by champagne frippe, at the early hour of 8.30 p.m. Before a single native had descended into the tomb of the Capulets, one of the party went to Dr. Franklin, and asked him to make one of their number. The invitation was declined, but nothing was said against the oyster-feast beyond the good humoured remark, "You oughtn't to be drinking champagne," addressed personally to the young officer who had been deputed to invite him. After "the rage of hunger had been appeased," several songs were sung, as frequently happened in the evening, and apparently not without affording a certain degree of pleasure to Dr. Franklin himself. On the night in question the concert was kept up till a few minutes past ten, when Dr. Franklin shouted from his cabin, "Stop that singing!" To which was returned a reply of "All right!" It was then proposed to wind up the evening's entertainment with a verse of the National Anthem. Hardly had the solo singer got through the first line, when Dr. Franklin rushed out of his cabin and dashed past the sociable little party, shouting out as if he were telling a dog to lie down, "I won't have this. I'll see that you go to bed at once. I'll have the lights put out," or words to that effect. On this the officer in command of the guard quietly asked if they might not finish the Anthem, and was answered in a rude and overbearing tone, "No, you may not, and I won't have any more noise at this hour of the night." Lieutenant Talbot, probably feeling a little nettled at being addressed in this cavalier manner, then remarked that, if Dr. Franklin objected to a little singing, he also objected to the Doctor's disturbing the whole ship by bawling out for the watchmen, as he had done more than once, between two and three in the morning. The party was then breaking up, when Dr. Franklin, in a passionate manner, called upon them to bear witness that Lieut. Talbot was opposing, instead of upholding, his authority. The other temperately disclaimed any such intention, but was cut short by a threat to report the whole affair to the Commander-in-Chief direct. Dr. Franklin then produced writing materials from his cabin, and sent for Captain Lewis, the commander of the ship, and when that officer made his appearance, he was told that he also should be reported for serving out champagne without his (Dr. Franklin's) permission. A rambling discussion then ensued, in the course of which Doctor Franklin intimated his intention of sending away, by the first opportunity, both the officer who gave the party and the one who had invited him to join them. He then added that his instructions were, that all officers should turn in by six o'clock, but was reminded that no such rule had ever been promulgated, and that he himself frequently sat up with them till long after that hour. In short, on this occasion Dr. Franklin appears to have acted under the impulse of caprice, or indigestion, and to have worked himself up into a passion about nothing at all. Fortunately, his successor, Dr. Menzies, is not only possessed of no ordinary amount of professional skill and knowledge, but is also represented as being endowed with tact, temper, and a quiet gentlemanly deportment. Probably the wisest plan would be to invest the Medical Superintendent with absolute powers, and to dispense entirely with a Military Commandant—a sergeant's guard being sufficient for all purposes. It is worthy of note, however, that it is the Duke of Cambridge who has ruled that no regimental surgeon should be attached to the Bentick, although it was only the other day that his Royal Highness stated, in his place in Parliament, that his supervision of military affairs in India was merely nominal, and that he never interfered with matters of detail. That declaration is scarcely borne out by facts.—Hurkaru, August 3.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHOLERA AT BENARES.—Advices from Benares of the 26th inst. mention that cholera made its appearance about a fortnight ago in her Majesty's 20th Regiment, which immediately went into camp. Since the 22nd no new case had occurred. One poor lady is mentioned as having lost two children within a fortnight. The "Days" have kept free of this dire disease, and we trust may continue to do so. The natives, it would seem, have been carried off in numbers. After a month's continued heavy rain the residents of Benares had been favoured with a couple of days of sunshine, and the indigo planters of that district were praying for a short continuance of fair weather.—Oude Gazette, July 29.

CACHAR, July 18.—I shall commence with that never-failing topic of remark, the weather, which has been lately rainy, the downpours being occasionally succeeded by fits of sunshine. It has been superb weather for transplanting, and nearly every planter in the province is busily occupied in this department of tea cultivation. The season has not at all turned out a good one for manufacturing, as two successive months, April and May, were literally lost on account of the excessive drought—many, I feel sure, will not be able to come up to their estimates. A meeting of the Cachar Tea Planters' Association was held the other day, consisting of James Davidson, Esq., secretary; Mr. R. A. Wood, who was unanimously voted to the chair; Messrs. Deveria, J. P. Stuart, and A. D. Macleod, forming the committee. The members present were Messrs. J. Boothby, A. S. Campbell, and W. H. Smith. In the course of the meeting the subject of time-expired coolies was brought on the board, the question being whether one tea planter could engage the services of a time-expired labourer of another's. As this subject was deemed of great importance, it was resolved to pass sundry resolutions to be put before all the members of the association for confirmation or otherwise. It was proposed and seconded by two of the committee, that a time-expired labourer should, in the event of his wishing to stay in the province, be compelled to engage himself with his former employers, on the payment of a bonus to be agreed upon. This resolution met with strenuous opposition from the chairman and secretary: and I entertain doubt whether the same will be carried, when it is put before the consideration of the members of the association. Several other unimportant resolutions were proposed and seconded, and await the confirmation of the members.—Hurkaru, August 3.

LUCKNOW, July 20.—People who have nothing better to do are, I see by the Bombay papers, getting up sensation letters relating to the Nana and his capture at Ajmere; but I fear the Bombay authorities will be disappointed, as the real Nana has been dead some time. I have been told this by many respectable natives, in a position to know this for certain, among others the Rajah of Bulrampore. Drighighur Singh has, I believe, informed the authorities of the Nana's death having occurred two years ago in Nepal. There has just died at a village near Ajoodia a man who was a noted character in Oude some years ago. Tara Chund was a dacoit; he was the son of a rajah, who had been despoiled of his possessions, and who robbed to benefit the poor and destitute, he robbed the King's Treasury, or used to give orders on the rich shroffs and mahajuns to poor people who applied to him for money, and the bankers were so afraid of him that the orders were always honoured. A warrant was issued by the King to capture this man dead or alive, and this was at last effected by Captain Hyder Hearsay, of the King's service. When captured, Captain Hearsay was surprised to find his camp surrounded by hundreds of widows and orphans, who implored him to release the prisoner, or to do all he could to get his release, as they said Tara Chund was a father to them, as the money he got he made over to the poor, whilst he remained with barely enough to eat, and had to earn his livelihood by selling grass. Captain Hearsay, astonished to hear such an account of his captive, mentioned the prisoner's history to the King, who desired Tara Chund should be brought before him. In the presence of his Majesty Tara Chund told his story, and said that as he was poor, and had no way of benefiting the destitute, he thought the best way of doing so was by robbing his Majesty, whose Government robbed and cheated of so many thousands. His Majesty was so pleased with his bluntness and eccentricity of character, that he gave him a jaghire worth Rs. 20,000 per annum, and told him to go and rob no more. This jaghire was near Ajoodiah, and Tara Chund lived there, giving away every rupee of his income in charity, and worked at various trades to earn his own living. Being of a very pious disposition he led the life of a faqueer, and thus died a poor man.

CROSSMAN THE FIRST.—The throne of the Andamans is still vacant, as Crossman the First, for reasons best known to himself, has declined the crown and sceptre, and as yet no successor has been appointed to the abdicated Tyler. There will not, however, be great difficulty in finding a king, though by all accounts the place is not very desirable. For instance, the sun but seldom shows his face, and an unfortunate sucking "Astronomer Royal," who went down there on purpose to take an observation, was obliged to return without having attained the desired effect after a sojourn of thirty days.

PROGRESS OF BRITISH BURMAH.—Certain local journals having protested against the rates of taxation imposed upon the people of British Burmah as unjustly burdensome, Colonel Phayre has prevailed upon the Government to sanction the unusually early publication of the trade returns of that province as the best proof of its prosperity. He does not deny that the average amount of taxes is somewhat high, being five rupees a head per annum on the entire population; but he maintains that this rate is not excessive or even inconvenient to the taxpayers. The returns, which are given elsewhere, certainly support this view, and exhibit a commercial progress "more rapid and greater in proportion to the number of inhabitants than that of any other British possession east of the Cape of Good Hope." As compared with Sind, a British province of twenty years' standing, Burmah displays a superiority, all the more remarkable that the neighbouring territories contain no more than four millions of inhabitants, while Sind "has at her back the Punjab, with fifteen millions of inhabitants, besides the wool-traders from Beloochistan and Afghanistan." And yet, notwithstanding these disadvantages, the trade of British Burmah is estimated at 539 lakhs, while that of Sind is only 296 lakhs,—the difference of population being less than a quarter of a million in favour of the former.—Bengal Hurkaru, Aug. 8.

LIQUOR AMMONIA FOR SNAKE-BITES.—A statement has been prepared by authority, showing the result of the use of liquor ammonia during 1862 as a cure for snake bites. In Ferozepore the number of cases treated was 45, all of which were cured. In Lahore 26 cases, of which 3 ended fatally. Shapore, 75 cases; Goojrat, 58; cured, 55 and 56 respectively. At Gogaira there were 2 recoveries out of 71 cases treated. In this district ammonia was also given in 98 cases of cholera, of which 74 recovered. In other stations of the Punjab the antidote was used with the same general results, but we have not sufficient information to warrant our endorsing the opinion expressed by Government that "this is very satisfactory." The proportion of venomous to harmless snakes is about 5 to 95, which seems to be the same proportion that the deaths bear to the cures in the report before us. It would, therefore, seem to follow that ammonia is of no value, seeing its application is unnecessary in the case of a person bitten by a harmless snake, while it is of no effect in the case of one who has been pierced by the fang of a cobra de capella. To render the statement useful, the character of each snake should be given, or at any rate in every instance where a cure has been effected after a bite inflicted by a snake known to be poisonous, the fact ought to be recorded. Of course we cannot accord credit to ammonia, in consequence of no fatal consequences resulting from the bite of snakes as incapable of doing harm as an earth-worm.

SIMLA, July 24.—Lord and Lady Elgin are still at Mahoseo, residing in Sir Hugh Rose's country villa. The Viceroy's health is now quite reinstated, but no doubt his late bereavement induces him still to remain quietly in retirement. His position, however, and his duties to the public will oblige him to shake off his sorrow and grief, long before Time, the great consoler, will have blunted its sharpness and poignancy, and hard necessity will compel his appearing and taking part in the world's bustle, its toils, and its pleasures.—A curious story is at the present moment being circulated, added to and commented on among all classes and in every circle; but, shorn of all exaggeration, I give it to you in a plain, unvarnished style. I think I mentioned in a former letter that many of our visitors had gone into the "Interior" for change of scene, air, or for amusement, as the case might be, the favourite spot at which our travellers stopped being Narkundah; consequently, the little dak-bungalow at that place has been constantly full. On one occasion, when every room was occupied, a very young officer, accompanied by an elderly lady, his relative, arrived, and though the occupants of the bungalow proposed making arrangements by which the officer could have occupied a portion of a room in which a gentleman was already located, and the lady could be accommodated in another in which there was an invalid of her own sex; still this did not satisfy the new arrivals: they insisted upon the invalid lady and her brother (an officer) immediately quitting the house, they having occupied it more than twenty-four hours, the usual limit permitted. As the rain was pouring in torrents the officer naturally objected to having his sister, in her state of health, exposed to the inclement weather. The young officer blustered and talked of his being the son of one of the hill officials, as though that gave him a right over every other person to accommodation in a Government building open to the public. He soon found, however, that his relationship did not prevent his being compelled to learn a lesson—that courtesy and politeness are the attributes of a gentleman, failing which he must submit to be treated as a ruffian. A fracas was naturally the result of this unaccommodating spirit, and the affair has been handed up to Sir Hugh Rose. A court of inquiry has been assembled, and is still sitting; the result, therefore, is at present unknown, though I have no doubt that Sir Hugh Rose's known gallantry towards the fair sex will lead him to uphold this conduct on the part of one of their defenders. A subscription ball was given on Wednesday last, but was not well attended. It was a tame affair, no life or spirit animating the dancers; but a new series of four balls under fresh auspices, promising better arrangements, has been announced, and may perhaps prove more popular than those heretofore given, owing to the assembly-room having been rented for the remainder of the season by one of our visitors from Major G——, the proprietor, so that the public generally will no longer be brought into immediate contact with that worthy individual. The racquet court has also been rented by the same person, so that once more the lovers of a healthy game of racquets can indulge with some degree of comfort in their favourite amusement. The King of our Hill States—I mean the Superintendent, Colonel Lawrence—has been, it is reported, exercising his authority in a most arbitrary, cruel, and unjust manner towards certain persons, the subjects of the King of Bissahir. The Rajah is a weak, cowardly man, totally incompetent to protect the people whom he is supposed to govern, or such acts as we constantly hear of the officials committing could never take place. A dispute regarding the distribution of property has been going on for some time between two persons, each claiming to be the true heir to a man deceased. Colonel Lawrence has arbitrarily taken the part of one, to the entire exclusion of the other, who, being the son, one would suppose had some right to be considered. The one that report says he favours is the present holder of the property, which is large, and he is said to have obtained the ear of the superintendent by bribes given to his attendants, and to certain individuals whom he is in the habit of consulting. Thus runs the story. The unfortunate claimant is unable to get redress. He has been insulted, abused, imprisoned, though subsequently released by Sir Herbert Edwardes, the Commissioner. He still is endeavouring to enforce his, as he considers, just claims, and has appealed to the Commissioner, and while this appeal is pending, the Superintendent, credible report says, continues to persecute him. A reward has been offered to any one who will bring the unhappy man to Colonel Lawrence: he has therefore been obliged to secrete himself in a neighbouring State. His servant has been seized, flogged, and turned out of the country. This is the case, if report speaks the truth. Is this impartial justice? an act to be expected from an officer of the British Government? How very high must the character of the English stand in the estimation of these semi-barbarians! I hear that the Commander-in-chief's camp is ordered to be in readiness at Lahore about the beginning of October. This is somewhat earlier than usual, owing, I fancy, to the length of time it will take Sir Hugh Rose to visit Peshawur and the other frontier stations. The Council is also, I believe, to assemble at Lahore during the approaching cold season, but no doubt you are better informed on this point than I am. A change is about to take place in the Foreign Department. Mr. Aitcheson will vacate his appointment as Under-Secretary, and accept a somewhat similar office under the Punjab Government. Mr. Wylie is the gentleman named as likely to succeed Mr. Aitcheson.

CANPORE, July 25.—It is most sincerely to be hoped that the individuals lately captured at Ajmere may prove to be, as they are at present supposed, the Nana of Bithoor and his brother Baba Butt, and that it will eventually not turn out that Major Davidson has found a mare's nest. So repeatedly have errors been made regarding the identity of these arch fiends, and so frequently have our hopes been raised that these miscreants were actually about to expiate their crimes on the gallows, only again and again to be blasted, that at last we have come to the conclusion of never allowing ourselves to be brought into the belief that they are still alive, have been seized, have been tried, and have been convicted, until, with our own eyes, we see them on the scaffold, with a rope round their necks on the eve of being cast into eternity, or that they have so been seen by those on whose credit we can rely. Most of the public journals express an idea that the greatest difficulty will be experienced in proving the identity of these villains. Firstly, it is imagined that those natives who it is known have associated and been intimate with the Nana's family prior to the outbreak in 1857 would now ignore all knowledge of them, or evade giving straightforward testimony against them; and, secondly, that with the exception of Dr. Tressider, now in England, and Captain Mowbray Thompson, few, if any other Europeans, could recognise them in the slightest degree. So far as the natives are concerned, the opinion expressed may or may not be a correct one; but, judging from the description of the two adjoining, which have been sent to us duly authenticated, we think we are justified in the belief that others independent of these authenticators may readily be found, who, with as great willingness as they, would be able to come forward, and by their evidence avenge the murders of those who were the victims of the treachery of the Nana and his bloodthirsty followers. It is generally supposed that the Nana of Bithoor was a most horrible-looking man, instead of which he had a most pleasing expression of countenance. In 1856 he was excessively stout, about twenty-eight years of age, fair olive complexion, full round face, large eyes, very little moustache, if any, and no whiskers. His ears were pierced, and he wore thin large gold wire rings. His height must have been about five feet ten inches. He may have understood English, but did not speak that language. The Nana's brother, Baba Butt, was a man much older than the Nana, and in 1856 I should say he must have been verging on fifty. He may have been somewhat less, or he may have been a little more; had iron-grey hair, moustache, and, had he allowed them to grow, would have had much whisker and beard. His teeth were even and complete in front, his complexion was somewhat fair for a native, and his countenance bore rather a sad expression. His height must have been about five feet ten or eleven inches; he stooped slightly, and was inclined to be bow-legged. He was also a great snuff-taker. He could speak a few words of English, which he said had been taught him by a moonshiee, who was then in England petitioning Parliament on his brother's behalf.

SIR MORDAUNT WELLS.—We are glad to learn that the attorneys of the High Court, Original Jurisdiction, are taking steps to present a farewell address to Sir Mordaunt Wells, Kt., on his retirement from the Calcutta Bench. But what action has the European community yet taken? It can hardly be that one of the most sound, earnest, hard-working judges who have ever sat upon this bench will be allowed to leave these shores without some outward and visible token of gratitude and respect.

THE REV. DR. DUFF.—The friends and admirers of the Rev. Dr. Duff will be glad to learn that there is every prospect of a speedy restoration of his health. A letter has been received from him from Penang, in which he states that he felt very much better during the first two days of the voyage, but as he is exceedingly subject to sea-sickness he became unwell again, owing to the heavy and squally weather in the Bay. He expected, however, to regain his health and strength on reaching Java.—Indian Reformer, August 7.

P. AND O. COMPANY'S STEAMERS.—Some of the passages recently performed by the P. and O. Company's steamers on both sides of the Indian Peninsula satisfactorily attest the possibility of greatly accelerating the communication between India and Europe. For instance, the Benares, which brought the English mails of the 3rd July, made the run from Suez in ten days, eighteen hours, and the whole time occupied in the transit from London was only nineteen days, eleven hours. It follows, therefore, that with really fast vessels London and Bombay might be brought within twenty days of steam communication with each other. Again, the old Candia, with the English mails of the 10th July, may be expected at Garden Reach on the 8th August, showing that twenty-eight days should be the limit with new and fast steamers such as are employed on the Cunard line. It is now a question of existence with the P. and O. monopolists. They have been beaten in price by their French rivals, while opinions differ as to superiority of comfort, and thus their only chance of holding their own is by distancing their competitors in point of speed.—Bengal Hurkaru.

HER MAJESTY'S 77TH remained encamped at Mowserai till Monday, in two detachments some three hundred yards apart. Cholera still existed. Two deaths occurred on Sunday night. Yesterday two companies crossed the river and took up their position at the halting bungalow at Jhoosie. The remainder of the regiment formed into two detachments, and march up to the Grand Trunk Road towards Cawnpore, so soon as carriage can be procured. The plan of putting the men under canvas seems to have utterly failed. Why, then, still persist in it? Since the epidemic broke out, excepting an occasional lull of thirty-six or forty-eight hours, the regiment has lost on an average two men daily. Add to this the number of fever cases, with two or three deaths from the same, dysentery and diarrhoea to a very great extent, and surely there seems to be argument strong enough from further trial of the camping experiment. Let us couple this with reports from every other regiment out under canvas, and then if that is not sufficient to upset the most ingeniously spun theory that ever gratified the brain of the most honest theorist, we know not what would.—Allahabad Gazette, Aug. 5.

THE "SLEEVE DONARD."—We are indebted to Messrs. Ramgopal, Ghose, and Co. for the following information:—The Sleeve Donard, Capt. Thompson, from Liverpool, reports having been boarded by the Confederate steamer Florida on May 28, in lat. 19-40 south, long. 36-52 west. The steamer had been in company with the Alabama a few days before, and had lately landed on the Brazilian coast about 150 men taken from various ships which she had destroyed.—Hurkaru, August 3.

LOSS OF HORSES.—We are sorry to hear that the ship Antagonist, bringing up forty selected horses from Australia, has been totally lost somewhere in the Straits, crew saved; but the horses, some of which belonged to a gentleman who has just returned to Calcutta from the colony, were not insured.—Englishman, August 8.

TELEGRAPH ON THE FRONTIER.—The line of telegraph has been completed from Moulmein to Shway Gyeen, on the frontier. Thence, we trust, 1865 will see it open to Canton and Peking, as proposed by Captain Sprye.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.—A second instalment of the Delhi Prize Money at Rs. 42 a share, has been ordered to be paid. The booty captured at Seeta-see will be distributed also at the rate of Rs. 76 a share.

BERHAMPORE, July 5.—A deputation from most of the wealthy and respectable Hindoo inhabitants of Berhampore and of its neighbourhood waited upon his honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, on Monday, the 27th ult. The deputation consisted of Baboo Rajib, Lochun Roy, Rajkrishen Roy, Poolin Behary Sen, Kedar Nauth Mohita, Brojo Lal Chowdhury, Koonja Lal Banoorjee, Shama Churn Bhutto, Eshan Chunder Roy, Dena Nauth Gangooly, Gooroo Churn Doss, Gobind Kant Vidyabhooshun, Eshan Chundra Banerjya. After the usual interchange of compliments the following address was presented:—"Honourable Sir,—We, the undersigned inhabitants of Berhampore and of its neighbourhood, most respectfully beg leave to approach your honour with a subject which, though it has no direct bearing upon the questions that come before you in connection with the administration of the Government over which your honour presides, cannot, we have reason to believe, fail to prove to you highly interesting. Seeing around us, though, unfortunately, not among us, daily and almost hourly illustrations of the benign influence which the educated woman exercises around the domestic hearth, and the chaste and generous tone she imparts, as well to the family as to the social circle, of which she is the centre,—and recognising, also, in female education a powerful agent for the moral and intellectual regeneration of our countrymen, we have recently opened a girl's school here, and called it the "Berhampore Balika Vidyalay." Of its future it were yet premature to form any opinion. It is only hoped that, if it does not realise all our bright anticipations, it may at least become in time an humble auxiliary to the college to which your Honour has this day given a local habitation. An exotic plant, however, requires not a little of watching, perhaps, also, of humoring; and our school, as a sort of moral exotic (for although female education is not quite foreign to our clime, a public school for girls is), shall have from us both. But as in the one case so in the other—the genial warmth of the radiant sun, which we interpret into encouragement, is essential no less to its preservation than to its health and vigour. And that encouragement, sir, we beg to solicit from your Honour. Before it the traditional horror of innovation may be expected to melt away, apathy to be revived into action, and vacillation to be summoned to firmness. Our humble but earnest prayer, therefore, is, that as you have this day, by laying with your own hands the first stone of a building that shall long commemorate your name and the liberality of your Government, given a permanency and a completion to your own scheme for the education of our sons, you will also be pleased, as an appropriate sequel to your labours of this important day, to request your lady to be the patroness of our infant Vidyalay, and thereby confer on our daughters the inestimable boon of an intellectual education. A system of female education, inaugurated under such favourable auspices, cannot but lead to success; indeed, if we could borrow the eye of the gifted seer, we might see, even now, through the long vista of a remote future, among other necessary and contingent advantages, the refining, the humanising, the spiritualising influences of knowledge and enlightenment, all associated with the name of one of the greatest benefactresses of our country, the Hon. Mrs. Beadon.—We have the honour to be, hon. Sir, your most obedient and humble servants" (signed by upwards of one hundred persons). The following is the substance of the Lieut.-Governor's reply:—"His Honour said that he was authorised by Mrs. Beadon to say that she gladly accepted the compliment they desired to pay her in asking her to become patroness of the female school, and would do all in her power to foster and encourage it. His Honour added that it gave him much pleasure to see the native gentry in all directions establishing schools for the education of their daughters, for he felt convinced that it was the most important step that could be taken towards improvement in the relations of domestic and social life; that he remembered the opposition the late Mr. Bethune met with when he first established his school for the education of Hindoo girls in Calcutta, and could with difficulty induce a dozen parents to send their children there, but that now this school was numerously attended by daughters of the most respectable native gentlemen; and that Mr. Bethune's excellent example had been followed in Dacca, Kristonugger, Moorshedabad, and many other parts of Bengal. The Lieutenant-governor concluded by expressing a hope that the school would continue to flourish and prove a source of comfort and happiness to them and their fellow-countrymen in their homes and families.

KISHNAGHUR, July 25.—The Lieut.-Governor of Bengal arrived at this station on the 10th inst., and after an active sojourn of four days left us on the 24th, highly pleased with the inspection of the public offices and schools. In pursuance to a circular issued by the magistrate of the district, the European and native gentry waited upon his honour on the 20th instant at his yacht, and he received them with peculiar courtesy and urbanity, admitting them one at a time in his cabin, and giving them audience in a most kind and cordial manner. In the evening of that day he inspected the newly organised police, the District Charitable Dispensary, and the jail, accompanied by the magistrate and joint-magistrate and his suite. He minutely examined the jail and jail hospital, and expressed his entire satisfaction of the manner in which they are conducted. On the 21st his Honour was a little indisposed, and could not, therefore, leave his yacht. On the following day he visited the collectorate, the magistracy, and the judge's office. The judge was holding his sessions, and a very important case of forgery was being decided when his Honour appeared at the Judge's Court. The case was instituted by Mr. Kenny, the well-known planter of Koosteah, against one Kashynath, a ryot of the former, for forging a pottah. A special jury was selected to give a verdict in the case, composed of some of the most respectable and conscientious men of the station, who, after mature consideration, and a retirement of about an hour, gave a verdict of guilty against the prisoner, and the Sessions Judge sentenced him to ten years' transportation beyond the seas. During the indigo disturbances the prisoner was on good terms with Mr. Kenny, but subsequently they fell out, and, taking advantage of his previous connection with the factory, he succeeded in preparing the forged pottah. On the 23rd the Lieut.-Governor devoted almost the whole day to the inspection of the educational institutions. He entered the Kishnaghur college at eleven a.m., and for full two hours remained there engaged in examining the pupils, and was quite pleased with the results, especially the explanation that the second-year students gave of Milton's "Paradise Lost." He left the college at one p.m., and visited the Kishnaghur Mission School and the Kishnaghur Anglo-Vernacular School. The latter institution owes its existence to the unabating and disinterested zeal and exertions of that philanthropic gentleman, Baboo Brojonath Mookerjee, and it is therefore commonly called Brojo Baboo's school. The Lieutenant-Governor observed the flourishing condition of this academy, and gave encouragement to its founder. The Local Committee has submitted a petition to the Lieutenant-Governor praying a grant of money for a suitable school-building, the present house being quite unaccommodating, owing to the increase of students from one hundred in the beginning to five hundred at present; and it is fervently hoped by all that he will take their prayer into his favourable consideration. The next school his Honour visited was the Kishnaghur Female School, held at the premises of Baboo Kallychurn Lahiree, a kind hearted and very popular medical practitioner of Kishnaghur. The school is attended by girls not exceeding ten years of age, all belonging to ancient and respectable families of Kishnaghur. These tender girls, decorated with shaltie and sheentee, and holding charoo potah and chauritaballec in their hands, presented an aspect at once amiable and innocent, and the Lieut.-Governor personally examined the lasses in Bengalee, and they passed the ordeal with sufficient self-possession and pleasure, so that his honour gladly made the following laudatory remarks in the visitors' book:—"It is with great pleasure that I record the favourable impression made on me at my visit to this school to-day. It is most creditable to Baboo Kallychurn Lahiree and his friends, that by their exertions a school should have been set up at Kishnaghur, in which upwards of forty children (of whom more than thirty were in attendance) all of highly respectable parentage, and most of them Brahmins, are enrolled. The girls vary from four to ten years of age, and those in the first class read Bengalee fluently, and answer all questions put to them with much intelligence. I hope the promoters of this excellent and useful school will receive all the encouragement they so well deserve.—CECIL BEADON. July 23, 1863." The Maharajah of Kishnaghur gave a sumptuous dinner to the Lieut.-Governor on the night of the 23rd, and it went off with all possible grandeur and éclat. Next morning the Lieut.-Governor left Kishnaghur, and steamed up to Nobodeep, where he visited the female school organised by Baboo Tarineechurn Chatterjee and patronised by the noble minded Bhydiasagura, and became quite satisfied with the manner in which the girls acquitted themselves in the examination. He then repaired to the Toles of the Nobodeep Pundit, the remnant of those ancient Sanskrit seminaries which secured to Nobodeep the proud appellation of "the seat of learning." Brojonath Bydiaratna, the first pundit of the place at present, recited several Sanskrit shlo khas and explained their purport in Bengalee to the Lieutenant-governor, which exceedingly delighted him. He left Nobodeep on that day for Berhampore.

PUNJAB EXHIBITION.—The Committee of the Punjab Exhibition have arranged that the maximum number of prizes awarded will be 1,000, in the proportion of 340 for raw produce, 480 for manufactures, 110 for machinery, and 70 for fine arts. The jurors will decide whether the sum allotted shall be given to one, or divided between two or more specimens of merit; and if, in the opinion of the judges, sufficient merit is not shown in any class, then it shall be competent for them to award a part only, or more, as the case may require. The savings on this head will go to swell the prizes allotted to more meritorious specimens in other classes. No prizes will be given for any specimen that has not in its manufacture or formation some distinct relation to the Punjab or its dependencies. A certificate on parchment will accompany each prize, and, with a view to give a greater value to the award where the amount available is small, it is in contemplation to give medals, if they can be prepared in time. Lady Montgomery has offered a prize of Rs. 100 for the best woven shawl, and Rs. 50 for the best piece of silk manufacture. Sir Robert offers Rs. 50 for the best specimen of Punjab cutlery, and Rs. 50 for the best specimen of Punjab pottery.

THE RACE REGENT OF ADJEYOURH has abolished all transit duties on the two high roads which traverse that State, viz., first, the high road from Saugor to the Great Deccan Road from Rewah for Mirzapore, Allahabad, &c., via Hattia and Nagode; second, the Banda and Myhere Road, joining the Great Deccan Road at the latter place for Jubbulpore, &c., via Kallinger and Vagode.—Allahabad Gazette, July 30.

RAIN IN THE PUNJAB.—The reports of continuous rain from the northern districts of the Punjab are beginning to cause some alarm in the minds of those who are interested. Much of the cotton has been eaten by locusts, and renewed sowings have been seriously damaged by the overabundance of rain. In many parts the ordinary khureef crop has not been sowed. It was hoped that a break would take place towards the end of July, but up to the 28th none had occurred, heavy falls having been registered on that day and the day before on many parts, with the prospect of more.—Delhi Gazette, Aug. 4.

THE NEW POLICE IN JEYPORE.—The Inspector-general of the Madras police has reported to Government the successful organisation of the new police in Jeypore, under the superintendence of Captain Galbraith, assistant superintendent of police. One large and several smaller police stations have been established in the Khond country, belonging to the Ganjam provinces, which has been made the basis of a local village police. This police will be selected from the "Paidi" class. Mr. Robinson suggests that good public buildings ought to be given for hutting the constabulary in Jeypore. The feelings of the people towards the police are said to be exceedingly good, and law and order have been maintained.—Madras Examiner, July 25.

SON OF THE KING OF BURMAH.—The only item of interest in a batch of late Rangoon and Moulemein papers is the circumstance of another effort having been made by the King of Burmah to induce his son, the fugitive Prince of Thonzai, to return to Mandalay. To this end the King had despatched an envoy to the Prince, who continues to reside at Rangoon, but, notwithstanding the most enticing promises of forgiveness, the Prince continues steadily to refuse to leave his present protectors and return to his father. The Prince has expressed a wish to travel, and it is probable that he will visit Europe before long, the only obstacle at present being the want of funds.

NATIVE WEAVERS.—We are glad to find what seem to be reliable facts in the Madras Times, illustrating Sir Charles Trevelyan's allusion to the distressed condition of the native weavers. There are several large villages in the vicinity of Conjeveram, entirely occupied by thrifty weavers. A large number have emigrated, and are continuing to do so, not only to other parts of India, but to the colonies, so that the different colonial agents are driving good bargains among these wretched people to whom starvation has left no other alternative. A native gentleman, whose veracity can be fully depended on, told the writer that in ordering "raggy" gruel to be distributed to the low castes in the vicinity of Conjeveram, he was surprised to find among the number many weavers, who, foregoing caste prejudices, mingled eagerly with the wretched to receive the gruel, in some instances snatching away that in the hands of the pariahs, and drinking it up at once to appease the cravings of hunger.

THE CRAWLEY SCANDAL.

When the British public gets the bit between its teeth it generally makes such a bolt of it as to defy all the jockeying in the world to hold it. It listens to no reasoning, no warning; and though its indignation is, in the commencement, usually just, the justice is, as the indignation increases, apt to be lost sight of. And in this unhappy affair of Colonel Crawley and the late Sergeant-Major Lilley it has taken just such a bolt, while the press is ever nagging at the bridle to increase the phrensy. There are many facts to be regretted in this case, but not the least is the manifestation of that inclination on the part of the press here and in England to comment on such cases pendentelite. We have ever opposed this proceeding as unfair and unjust to all parties, and in this Crawley affair have, as usual, abstained from any comment whatever. When Captain Smales was first put on his court-martial we received letter upon letter of explanation or censure; when Lilley died we heard on all sides accounts of and revilings at the tyranny which had hurried him to his grave; but knowing that the matter would be agitated and re-investigated at home, we carefully refrained from comment, in justice to Colonel Crawley, Captain Smales, and the memory of the deceased Sergeant-Major. We are sorry that some of our contemporaries did not follow the example, for it is impossible for an unprejudiced observer to deny that the public animus against Colonel Crawley has been goded into positive rabid hatred by the unfair writing of the English press against an absent man. With the storm of indignation that was raised throughout England when Lilley's death and the conduct imputed to the Colonel was first known, we fully sympathised; but when once it was ascertained that the Horse Guards was about to take up the matter, discussion, comment, and, above all, invective, should have ceased. We do not seek for a moment to defend Colonel Crawley in the course of conduct adopted by him, for the confessedly disorganised condition of the Inniskillings is quite sufficient to show his unfitness for the post of commanding officer, and we have good proofs of his more than culpability in the sad occurrences connected with the Smales court-martial. But we do say that, now that his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief has determined that the matter shall be closely investigated, it would be unjust in the extreme were the English press to continue to rave upon it till the whole evidence is before the public. If Colonel Crawley be a man possessing in any degree the ordinary feelings of a gentleman, he has already undergone no slight punishment in the public execration of which he has been made the object, and should the evidence prove, after all, that he has been in a measure unjustly accused, the sting of that punishment will be enough retribution for any want of judgment or discretion. With the facts known to us, such a result does not in our view appear likely; but, in the interim, we claim for Colonel Crawley, Sir Hugh Rose, and Sir William Mansfield, what we would claim for the sergeant-major were the case reversed—a fair field, and no favour. It has been decided that a trial in England will cost less and serve better to attain the ends of justice, and we are well content that it should be so, strong in the certainty that a tribunal of British officers, with unbiassed, untrammelled, evidence before them, will so adjudicate the case when brought before them, as to satisfy the ends of justice, the just expectation of the public and the needful requirements of military discipline.—Englishman, August 3.

We yesterday made some preliminary remarks upon the Crawley case, referring to the mixture of clamour and sentiment which has prevailed in England regarding the whole affair, and which has been stimulated and warmed up by members of Parliament in both Houses, and by the press throughout the general community of Great Britain. Whilst this state of public feeling and ferment of sentiment existed in full warmth we have remained intentionally silent regarding this very painful affair; but as no such unreasoning burst of hasty anger has exploded with reference to the Mhow case in this country, and as, by the time our remarks can reach England, calm reason will have returned to the public mind without at all diminishing the desire for full investigation and justice, we may now say a few words upon the most prominent features of this lamentable case. What we are now going to write might have been written at any time for several months past; but seeing plainly that the affair in question must come before the public at home, and knowing that it would, in all probability, create this excitement, we have been silent, awaiting the opportune moment to interfere. We are not going into either the law, civil or military, or the sentiment, public or private, of the case. We leave the former to the lawyers and to the coming court-martial in England; and, though feeling as much as any one for the unfortunate sufferers in the case, we find it our duty to divest ourselves as much as possible of what is called sentiment, and to adhere strictly to the actual matters of fact. Whether we are right or wrong will be seen and known when the whole case is re-opened, when the voice of clamour is silent, and when the public mind and reason, tempered by time and information, shall be in a condition to come to a just decision upon the whole matter. Our remarks refer chiefly to the case and sad fate of Sergeant-Major Lilley, for it is these which have caused the commotion in England, which, without that non-commissioned officer's death, would never have resulted from the now too famous Mhow court-martial. The following are the main statements with reference to Sergeant-Major Lilley's confinement and death, for the verification of which we await, and request the public to await, the publication of the proceedings of the coming court-martial, having ourselves no doubt whatever as to the result. First, a great staple in getting up the excitement and sympathy as regards the unfortunate deceased in England, has been the persistent assertion as to his strict temperance and sobriety and uniform exemplary conduct. We do not believe this assertion to be strictly true; but we do believe, and expect to see it proved by the coming court-martial, that Sergeant-major Lilley was one of a numerous class in the British army, and perhaps in all European armies; a free liver and yet a soldier always ready for his duties, and punctual and efficient in their discharge. In saying this we mean not the slightest disparagement whatever to the character of the deceased; knowing, as we do, and as every officer in the British army of any experience will bear us out in saying, that some of the finest non-commissioned officers in that army come under the above description; the fact of their habitual intemperance or frequent excess very often not becoming known to their immediate commanding officer, with whom they may have been in constant communication, until accident or death reveals the real state of affairs. We believe that the coming court-martial, including the post mortem disclosures as given by the medical officers, will go to prove fully and satisfactorily to the public that Sergeant-major Lilley was one of this class of men; and that the assertions so loudly made of his habitual temperance and sobriety will be proved to be exaggerated and untrue. A second leading point brought forward to warm up the sentiment and indignation of the English people is "the harsh and inhuman imprisonment" of Sergeant-major Lilley and his fellow non-commissioned officers; one of the home papers having much aroused and pleased the British public by the enunciation of a most clever sensation description, to the effect that Sergeant-major Lilley was removed to a dungeon, or something like it, in the height of the Indian hot season, and there "baked to death." This is very fine writing indeed; but it is neither fact nor truth; the fact and truth being that these non-commissioned officers were placed in arrest in their own quarters, the quarters assigned to them and to their predecessors by the Government. Another statement put forward at home is, that the cruel and rigorous confinement to which Sergeant-major Lilley was subjected, acting upon a man of his full-blooded and corpulent habit, caused his death. Unfortunately for the stability of this assertion, the fact is, as will be shown in the court-martial, that Sergeant-major Lilley had, during the time he was in arrest, regular walking exercise morning and evening; and as to his confinement acting upon his plethoric habit, it may be remarked without levity that there cannot be two kinds of close arrest in the army—one for the stout and one for the thin, one for the plethoric and one for the active. As for the necessity of placing the sergeant-major in arrest at all, or the legality or illegality of the proceeding, we do not, as we have said at the commencement of our remarks, touch upon these or other points of law at all, confining ourselves strictly to dealing with the assertions put forward regarding this lamentable case in England, our own knowledge of facts entirely rebutting many of those assertions. The sergeant-major was placed in arrest by order of Sir William Mansfield, who, we have no doubt, will fully justify his action in the matter when the proper time arrives. The home orators and writers have informed the British public that Sergeant-major Lilley and his fellow non-commissioned officers having been placed in arrest, ought by the military law to have been tried or released and set at large within eight days; the fact being that if there were any such unconditional rule in the Military Code, the British army would be disorganised in a month, as one court-martial out of five would not be able to collect and arrange its evidence within that period of time—a fact which is well known to the military portion of the home orators, but which it was convenient for them to ignore when instructing the public, profoundly ignorant of military affairs and military law. We have not a very profound respect for the universal and permanent application of the de mortuis nil nisi bonum, but as this unfortunate affair is about to be soon reopened and thoroughly investigated, we suppress some indisputable facts with reference to the asserted temperance and sobriety of those who are no more—facts which will be fully proved when the coming trial takes place. It will then be seen whether or not the Commander-in-Chief in India was fully justified in stating, in his remarks upon the Mhow Court-martial, that Sergeant-Major Lilley's habits, whilst in close arrest, "compromised" his life; and his Excellency's language will, we think, be considered very moderate and cautious indeed. Those who are so tender de mortuis should be just and magnanimous to think sometimes de absentibus, and to remember that, if it is indecorous to tell the truth about the dead, it is something worse to malign the distant and the absent, to hound on their countrymen at home to condemn them on partial or imperfect evidence, and without a final hearing. We have not in these remarks taken up any side or any person's defence; nor do we believe that, as far as the two highest public functionaries in this country are concerned, there is any occasion for us to do so. We have simply taken up the main statements made in England as regards Sergeant-Major Lilley and the causes and circumstances of his death; we assert that these statements are all untrue or grossly exaggerated, and we await, and request the public to await, the publication of the proceedings of the English court-martial as proof or disproof of the truth of what we have written. That there has been serious wrong-doing, possibly unjustifiable cruelty, somewhere, we have very little doubt; and we sincerely hope that strict and stern justice will be done in the matter. But we certainly would not assign whatever punishment may be due according to the award of the home speakers and writers, most of whom will subside into silence as the true facts of this unfortunate case come out, and it begins to be seen that, in their inconsiderate zeal and excitement, they have flung unjust accusations broadcast, and supported their indictments with untenable assertions.—Englishman, August 4.

STRANGE PROCEEDING AND CONFESSION.—We understand that Rs. 8,900 have been dug up in the general's compound at Ahmedabad. The sum was buried there three years ago by a subject of the Public Works Department to injure his master, a lieutenant in the engineers. The sergeant was tried by a court-martial, sentenced to two years' imprisonment, and deported to England. On arrival in England he went to Sir C. Wood, said he never stole the money for which he was tried, but buried it to get his master into trouble. Sir C. Wood sent the man to India, he arrived here a few weeks ago, and pointed out the place where the money was buried.

THE COTTON MARKET.—The Bombay Times represents the cotton market as at a standstill during the fortnight ending 9th July. There was a sale of only 1,000 "candies" of Oomrawattee without selection at Rs. 452 per candy. An impression as to the near close of the American war, and the small margin between prices in Bombay and Liverpool, are assigned as the causes.

CHINA & JAPAN.

HONG KONG, July 29.

The accounts received from Japan since the departure of last mail show more pacific relations between the Tycoon's Government and foreigners, but point to the great probability of a civil war in that country. From Yokohama the latest date is of the 11th inst., when two English steamers had been chartered to take Japanese troops to Osaka to strengthen the military force of the Tycoon, respecting whose real position at Miako, however, there is much uncertainty. Meanwhile, the anti-foreign Daimios have boldly shown their hostility, for, in addition to the American steamer Pembroke, the attack on which in the inland sea has already been reported, the French despatch steamer Kienchung was vigorously assailed by batteries and two war vessels, when at anchor near the same spot, and narrowly escaped being sunk. She was obliged to slip and make off with considerable damage, it is said, in her hull. This occurred at Samousaki, where the forts are under the command of the Prince of Chosew; but whether he acted under orders from the Mikado, or proprio motu, is not yet known. Encouraged by these successes, he is now reported to have opened fire on the Dutch man-of-war Medusa, with very different results, however; for that vessel immediately engaged and silenced the forts, sinking at the same time an armed brig, supposed to be the Lauruk. An American frigate was about to pay him a visit on account of the attack on the Pembroke.

The mail-steamer Columbian arrived on the 19th inst. with the London mail of June 10. The Imperatrice, steamer, of the Messageries Impériales, came into harbour yesterday, and the steamer Behar leaves to-day at two p.m. with the outward mails. Her Majesty's ship Osprey arrived from England on the 19th.—Correspondent of the Times.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO OFFICERS OF THE NEW REGIMENTS.

*July 22.—No. 104a.—*The following copy of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 152, of April 24, is published for general information:—

Military.—No. 152.

India Office, London, April 24, 1863.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. GEN. of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have received and considered in Council your letter, No. 75, dated Feb. 19, requesting explicit instructions as to the rules under which leave of absence is to be granted to officers of the new royal art. and new line regts. of cav. and inf.

2. Your inquiry relates to two distinct subjects,—
1. The regulations under which leave of absence is to be granted to officers of the new brigades of art. and new line regts.

2. The application of the furlough rules in determining the claims of these officers to pension.

3. In regard to the first of these points, it was determined, in reply to No. 79 of the published question, that officers of the new line regts. of cav. and inf. would be under H.M.'s regulations generally.

4. They would be, therefore, necessarily under the new furlough rules, while their corps remained in India, in the sense in which officers of H.M.'s regts. serving in India are under those rules.

5. The same applies to the officers of artillery.

6. As these officers were thus brought under the regulations of H.M.'s service as regards leave, it followed that leave should be granted according to the practice obtaining in the British service; but you were informed in my despatch No. 291 of Aug. 14, 1862, that, in order that the claims of these officers to Indian pension might be duly entertained and recorded, I had suggested to his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commander-in-Chief that exchanges, casualties, leave of absence (under the Indian regts.), and other circumstances affecting the interests and claims of the officers in question, should be communicated to this office, or to the Govts. in India, as the case might be.

7. It was intended by this rule not that the Govts. of the several presidencies in India should grant leave to officers of these regts. as heretofore, when they belonged to the local service, but that the Commander-in-Chief should communicate to the Govt. all cases of such leave with a view to the determination of their claims to pension.

8. On the same occasion I informed you, with reference to the officers of engineers, that, as the Governments in India had retained a prior claim to their services, it would be necessary that the grant of leave of absence, in their case, should be regulated by the practice then in force, and that no change should be made in this respect.

9. With regard to the application of the furlough rules to a consideration of claims to pension on the part of officers of artillery and engineers and new line regts., you have justly observed that, under all circumstances, the rules, as to the service required for pension, will be complied with, that is, that no time passed on leave beyond the amount sanctioned by the furlough regulations will count as service towards pension.

10. In this respect, therefore, the position of these officers will remain unaltered by their transfer to the British army.

11. The amount of leave to be deducted from their service for pension will depend on the furlough rules which they may have chosen, and it will be necessary that the Commanders-in-Chief of the several Presidencies should be careful to require that every officer who has not yet made his selection should do so (the same being reported to Government) on the Military Letters.

THE NEW LINE REGIMENTS.

Simla, July 31.—No. 112a.—The following copy of a military letter from the Rt. Hon. the Sec. of State for India to H.E. the Gov. gen. of India in Council, No. 233, dated June 30 last, is published for general information:—

India Office, London, 30th June, 1863.

No. 233.—Military:—

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord.—Para. 1.—The following arrangements have been adopted consequent on the late army alterations:—

A.—That the general and other officers of the twelve new line regiments are to be considered as belonging to the British army, and are to take their places for promotion accordingly on the general lists of that army. Their names will, in consequence, be withdrawn from the Indian general gradation lists, but will be retained on their former cadres, and on the regimental gradation lists, in the manner shown in paragraph 58 of your G. O. No. 332, April 10, 1861.

B.—That the colonels originally appointed to the new infantry regiments are to continue to receive their pay and colonel's allowance at the Indian rate.

C.—That the colonels of the late Indian brigades of artillery are to receive colonel's allowance at the Indian rate.

D.—That officers of the artillery transferred from the Indian service should receive furlough pay under Indian regulations so long as the brigades to which they are attached are serving in India.

E.—That officers who have been appointed to the new line regiments from the Indian forces having been stated to be "under the conditions of service of line officers," should receive the same pay while on furlough as officers of the old line regiments.

F.—All officers of the artillery and new line regiments will, without reference to the furlough regulations they may have elected, and by which their claim to pension will be determined, receive Indian allowances during six (6) mos. absence on sick certificate, as allowed to other officers of the British army.

G.—Officers of the artillery and new line regiments should be allowed passage money under the regulations applicable to British officers, care being taken that passage money is not issued by both Government and the funds. When passage money is due from the funds special arrangements must be made for adjusting the account between the Government and the funds.

H.—The statute regarding five years' absence from India will not apply to artillery, engineers, or officers of the new line regiments.

2. You will notify these arrangements to the Governments of Madras and Bombay.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) C. Wood.

THE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA COMPANY (Limited) have issued a report in which they state that, having received the first half-yearly payment of £1,250 from Messrs. Glass, Elliot, and Co., under the arrangement for working the Alexandria and Suez line, they have summoned a special general meeting for declaring a dividend. The dividend proposed is at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, free of Income-tax, for the half-year ending the 30th, which will absorb £1,135 out of the amount, leaving a balance of £115. It is expected the proprietors will continue to receive interest on the capital for the remainder of the lease, by which time the result of the Persian Gulf line will have been fully developed. The directors have received the concession for the construction of the El Arish line, and a new company has been registered under the title of the Syrian Telegraph Company, by which it can be carried out whenever it is considered advisable to do so.

EX-PAYMASTER SMALES.

The following letter has been addressed to the editor of the Times :—

"Sir,—In your impression of the 3rd instant there is an extract from the Express, in which the authorities of the War-office are charged with inconsistency and injustice in not appointing Mr. Smales to a paymastership upon his being pardoned.

"A paymaster has large sums of public money intrusted to his charge, and the appointments can, therefore, only be given to officers in whom the authorities have the fullest confidence.

"It appears from the newspaper reports of the proceedings at Mhow, that, when Mr. Smales's accounts were examined by the appointed authorities, there was a deficiency of public money not far short of £2,000. Therefore, before giving the sympathy which is asked for Mr. Smales, it would be desirable to know whether there is any foundation for this statement. "R."

We can answer this letter, we think, very satisfactorily. It is quite true that a charge of breach of trust was brought against Captain Smales by Colonel Crawley. He was taken before the Civil Court of Bombay. The grand jury at once threw out the bill against him. Captain Smales seems to us a singularly unfortunate and ill-treated man. He was cashiered for bringing charges against his commanding officer, Colonel Crawley, which were proved to be true, though informal or irregular in the mode in which they were brought forward in a private letter; while Colonel Crawley, who had acted in a way that could not escape the censure of the highest authorities, and which showed him to be quite unfit to command a body of officers and gentlemen, was suffered to retain his more responsible and important post. Evidently in consequence of the public discussions on these matters the War-office was shamed into a sense of the extreme hardship of the case as far as it had relation to Captain Smales, and her Majesty was recommended to grant him a free pardon; but the pardon itself is virtually a mockery, for he is told that he is never to be employed again in her Majesty's service; so that he is still as it were cashiered. If he is really pardoned, why should he be made still to suffer the full effects of the displeasure of the authorities? The sentence against him is acknowledged to be illegal, yet his redress is purely nominal. The pardon was intended, we suppose, to appease the public indignation; but such sham justice is much more calculated to increase it. The unfortunate court-martial at Mhow has been attended with blunder after blunder, and has involved all the highest military authorities in a succession of false movements and disgraceful difficulties. Every step they take sinks them deeper into the mire.

After we had written the above brief editorial on the subject of the persecution of Captain Smales, there appeared the following letter from that gentleman to the Times. We mentioned that he had been tried and acquitted before the Civil Court at Bombay. We did this on the authority of a pamphlet on the subject of the Mhow trial, which quoted the Times of India; but Captain Smales does not, it will be seen, allude in the following letter to the acquittal in the Bombay Court. However, by his own account, a sort of court of inquiry, appointed by his vindictive enemy, Colonel Crawley, acquitted him of the charge brought against him :—

"Sir,—A letter appears in the Times of this morning, under the head of 'Ex-paymaster Smales,' referring to what is termed a newspaper report of the proceedings at Mhow, and stating that when my accounts were examined by the appointed authorities, a deficiency of public money appeared, not far short of £2,000. Indian newspaper reports on such a subject I care little about. I think it would, however, have been more honest on the part of your correspondent, whoever he may be, had he displayed more caution before putting before the public such a false statement. The last time my regimental accounts connected with the 6th Dragoons were examined was the end of May, 1862, when a very searching investigation took place by order of Lieut.-Col. Crawley; and while my trial was in progress it was made as a hostile demonstration against me, in the hope of adding something to my detriment. That committee's report proved my public accounts to be in a perfectly correct state, with a balance standing to my favour. Immediately after this committee had made their report the whole of my books and accounts were seized and carried away out of my house by order of Lieut.-Colonel Crawley, and I have never seen anything of them since, on which account I officially repudiated all further responsibility. I have never had, directly or indirectly, a single demand made against me in respect of my accounts; there is one deficiency connected with the accounts of the 6th Dragoons, for which I am neither legally nor morally responsible; and the best proof of the falsehood of your correspondent's statement is, that I addressed an inquiry to the War Department on the subject of my accounts and received a reply intimating that they had received no report on the subject, nor had any demands been made against me. I may also be permitted under the circumstances to observe that I have repeatedly written to the Horse Guards, also to the War Department and India-office, complaining most urgently of the manner in which I, as a financial officer under a heavy bond to the Crown, had been treated by the Indian military authorities in respect to my accounts; two of these departments for many months never answered my letters; and the third, the War-office, referred me for 'redress' to one of the very officers who had never answered my letters; and it is a curious circumstance, one well worthy of public record, that no later than yesterday, the 8th inst., I was compelled to waste the whole of my day backward and forward to the War-office, endeavouring to get an interview with Sir Edward Lugard on the very subject now referred to, and after notifying to his private secretary the nature of my business. On my final visit, at 5 o'clock in the evening, after waiting half an hour, I was coolly informed that Sir Edward Lugard 'really could not see me on any such subject.'

"I trust, Sir, to your indulgence for this lengthy reply, and that from your high sense of justice you will grant me the same publicity for it as you have done to the libel—as the treatment I have experienced from one and another in reference to the matter now referred to has been so scandalously unjust, that to remain silent would be undignified to myself and unjust to my friends who have interested themselves on my behalf.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, "F. W. P. SMALES.

"London, Sept. 9."

Captain Smales has written a long letter to the editor of the United Service Gazette, in which he states that it is his intention to prosecute Sir William Mansfield and Lieutenant-colonel Crawley for sanctioning the sudden and forcible capture of all his account-books in his office as paymaster, and depriving him thereby of the means of protecting his own reputation and the interests of his sureties. It seems that Colonel Crawley brought the charge of defalcation against Captain Smales just at the time that he was brought to a court-martial for his informal and disrespectful letter to the colonel, so that he, too, like poor Lilley, had a shadow cast upon him in his hour of trial, as if to lessen his chance of fair play. The authorities both in India and in England seem to have treated Captain Smales with peculiar severity and injustice. To this day he has been refused a copy of the proceedings of the court of inquiry that ended in his honourable acquittal, though the members of the court were selected by his hostile commanding officer, and were all witnesses on that officer's side at the court-martial.*

THE PRESS OF INDIA.

THE Anglo-Indian Press has long had the reputation of being remarkably quarrelsome and scurrilous. This evil repute has not been wholly undeserved. The editor of a Madras newspaper, smarting under personal attacks from some of his contemporaries, lately reminded them of the contempt with which the press of India is said to be regarded on account of its petty scandals and vindictive personalities. We think, however, that the largest portion of this ill-fame is due to its conduct in days long gone by, when even the press at home had little reason to boast of its temperance or candour. We are old enough to remember the time when the John Bull of London was even more personal and abusive than its namesake in Calcutta. The former, under the editorship of the notorious Theodore Hook, had its spies in private circles, and did not spare the gentler sex. The John Bull of Calcutta, though it was under the management of a clergyman, did much to make the press of India a by-word; but, bad as it was, it never equalled, in the baseness and brutality of its personal onslaughts, the John Bull of London in the olden time.

The quarrels, however, of Dr. Bryce, of the Calcutta John Bull, and of James Silk Buckingham, of the Calcutta Journal, occupied a much larger space in their columns than the conflicts of nations or the most momentous events in the civil history of India, or of their own country. But private scandal and the basest party and personal hostilities were then almost everywhere the staple commodities or chief stock-in-trade of the editorial tribe. The most brutal press-warfare—from pure shop-rivalry or interested motives—was at that time carried on as furiously in Edinburgh and London as at Madras or Calcutta. Blackwood and the Quarterly, the Satirist and the Age, made moderate men more than half-inclined to regard a free press as a curse rather than a blessing. The English press at home has long ago retrieved its character. The Indian press is still coloured or characterised, though in a far less degree than of yore, with the taint of personal animosities. In the time of the mutiny the style of its personal allusions to Lord Canning, the local representative of the Imperial Power of Great Britain, was singularly ungenerous, unfair,

* Capt. Smales had obtained the following important testimony to his character as a paymaster.—"War-office Letter, dated March 3, 1855:—From the known correctness of Captain Smales in the performance of his duties as a paymaster, it is inferred that his accounts are in a most satisfactory state. "B. HAWES."

and unwise, to say the least of it; for he had awfully responsible and trying duties to perform—a most painful pre-eminence to maintain—and stood in the direst need at so critical a time of cordial and loyal support and encouragement from his own countrymen. But he was worried and insulted daily by the local press, and could not but feel that such incessant ridicule and hostility and contumely from his own people must have lowered his authority and lessened his influence even with those natives who were disposed to be faithful to the British Government. It was a cowardly act to abuse so powerful an instrument as the press, and to lavish daily personal insults on a man who was too high in place or too magnanimous in disposition to defend or revenge himself. Lord Canning only just lived long enough to live down the calumnies that were so lavishly heaped upon him in his hour of trial. What his personal feeling on this subject was we have no means of knowing, but we suppose we shall soon have some revelations upon this point from Mr. Kaye, who is in possession, we believe, of much of his lordship's private correspondence in the years of the mutiny. We know well how one eminent public man, of a somewhat more irritable temperament than Lord Canning, felt the attacks upon him by the Indian press, for we have a letter of his upon this subject now lying before us. We allude to the late Sir Charles Napier, when he was Commander-in-Chief of the Indian army. Alluding to a flattering note from a very eminent author, he writes—“I have been defended by him on one or two occasions, and his good opinion with that of a few others, has helped me to defy the abuse of the many rascals I have had to deal with. The vile part of the Indian press is secretly sustained by men in power who are hostile to me and war on me in this secret way, though why I am not aware. However I have long found out that their ill-nature is very mischievous and has been constantly at work to baffle my exertions in the public service,—so I have resigned.” In this case we see that a man covered with honourable wounds received in the service of his country, and who could at all times face the cannon's mouth with the most marvellous coolness and indifference, acknowledges that he was driven from his important post by the paper pellets of the brain. Lord Canning was of a calmer temperament, and could more easily set aside all care of what was said of him personally so long as he could carry on the business of the State without interruption; but when the local papers by their revelations and discussions began, however unintentionally, to thwart the measures of Government and thereby assist the enemy, he was quite prepared to meet and defy the odium of putting a temporary check upon the liberty, or rather licence, of the press.

Sir William Denison, the Governor of Madras, it seems, has given his opponents a rare advantage over him. He has rushed into print.

“Oh, that mine enemy had written a book!”

Sir William is an author. He has made it easy for any puny whipster to disarm him. Nothing is easier than to say something exceedingly contemptuous and offensive of a man in high place who has trusted the bantling of his brain to the mercy of the public.

Sir William has been sadly mauled as an author by the critics of Madras. If he had been more prudent he would have kept back his book until he had retired into private life.

Though there is still a great deal too much personality and petty and private matter in the Indian press, it is very far from being so culpable in this way as it used to be, and it is now conducted with much more ability and in a fairer and more temperate spirit than it used to be a quarter of a century ago. We feel perfectly sure that it has never been so corrupt, and that Sir Charles Napier was quite mistaken in supposing, as we believe he did, that any portion of it ever received a bribe to pursue him with hostility. As far as purely mercenary influences are concerned, it is as honest a press as any in the world.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE LORD CLYDE.—A committee has been formed for the purpose of erecting a memorial in honour of this gallant officer. Amongst a very distinguished list of names announced are the following:—Field-Marshal his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, K.G.; his Grace the Duke of Somerset, K.G.; his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, K.G.; his Grace the Duke of Argyll, K.T.; his Grace the Duke of Wellington; the Right Hon. the Earl of Derby, K.G.; the Right Hon. the Earl of Malmesbury, G.C.B.; the Right Hon. the Earl De Grey and Ripon; the Right Hon. the Earl of Ellenborough, G.C.B.; the Right Hon. the Earl Russell, K.O.; the Right Hon. the Viscount Palmerston, K.G.; Field Marshal Viscount Gough, K.P., G.C.B.; the Right Hon. Lord Stanley; the Right Hon. Sir C. Wood, Bart.; the Right Hon. General Sir G. Brown, G.C.B.; Admiral Sir Thomas Cochrane, G.C.B. A public meeting will shortly be held in the metropolis for the purpose of taking the matter into consideration.

ROYAL ARTILLERY FOR INDIA.—On the 10th inst. a detachment of the Depot Brigade Royal Artillery, comprising 163 rank and file, assembled on parade at an early hour at Woolwich, and, after inspection, proceeded to Gravesend by railway, and embarked on board the troopship Canning, for Madras. The following officers, in addition to Lieut.-col. Macintire, in command, embarked with the force, viz.:—Captains Purvis, Laurie, and Jackson; Lieuts. McCarthy, Gambier, Haynes, Johnson, Roberts, Knot, Deedes, and Lavie.

PUNJAB RAILWAY DEBENTURES.—The sum of £14,900 was paid to the credit of the Secretary of State for India in Council on the 5th inst., making, with previous payments of £485,000, a total of £500,000 on account of the Inconvertible Punjab Railway debentures recently issued, bearing interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum.

THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH CABLE.—The Kirkham, 1,061 tons register, with about 187 miles of this cable on board, left Gravesend yesterday (Friday) for the Persian Gulf, her precise destination being Bagdad. This is the second portion that has gone out, and the remaining lengths will be conveyed in three sailing vessels and a steamer. The entire length is upwards of 1,200 miles, and the weight about 5,000 tons.

ARRIVAL OF INVALIDS FROM INDIA.—The Egmont, sailing transport, arrived at Spithead on the morning of the 11th inst., from the East Indies, with military invalids, who were discharged to Netley Hospital the same afternoon.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA
IN COUNCIL HEREBY GIVES NOTICE, that holders of INDIA FOUR PER CENT. DEBENTURES, who have assented to their conversion into "India Four per Cent. Stock," are required to SURRENDER their DEBENTURES at the Chief Cashier's Office, Bank of England, on or before the 1st of October next, and to state at the same time the names, addresses, and quantity of the parties in whose favour the Stock is to be registered.

The Stock will be created on the 8th of October, and will be transferable after that date.

Holders of "India Four per Cent. Stock" who are registered in the books of the Bank of England on the 8th of October next, and who desire to hold "Stock Certificates to bearer with Coupons attached," in lieu of Stock registered in their names, may do so by transferring their Stock to "The Secretary of State in Council of India" on or after the 8th of October next, when they will receive "Stock Certificates to bearer" in lieu thereof.

Debentures which are to be paid off on or after the 8th of October next must be left at the Chief Cashier's Office, Bank of England, for examination three days previous to payment being made.

Parties leaving their Debentures on or before the 5th of October can receive payment of the same on the 8th of October.

Receipts will be given for the Debentures deposited.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVE-

MENT in the CONSTRUCTION OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN AND CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY.—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. cloth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Comte is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics itself, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1862.

A SHORT TRIP IN HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. ANSTED. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted's descriptions are written with a neatness attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. His volume is one both of value and entertainment: a book calculated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube."—Athenæum, Aug. 16, 1862.

"Many a tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Professor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a tour than the author of this interesting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

THE SCIENCE of HOME LIFE. By ALBERT J. BERNAYS, Professor of Chemistry and Natural Philosophy, and of Practical Chemistry at St. Thomas's Hospital Medical and Surgical College (late Lecturer on Chemistry and Practical Chemistry at St. Mary's Hospital), &c., &c. Illustrated by several cuts. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s.

MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN HISTORY. By J. G. EDGAR. Author of the "Boyhood of Great Men," &c., &c. With Illustrations. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children, Mr. J. G. Edgar never makes a contribution to juvenile literature that does not deserve a certain measure of commendation. We can conscientiously recommend it ('Memorable Events') as a work at the same time entertaining and useful."—Athenæum, March 6, 1862.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-heads, and of so describing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. This last ('Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable, high-minded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failures."—Spectator.

"A most acceptable present for the youth of both sexes."—Observer.

THE FORESTS and GARDENS of SOUTH INDIA. By HUGH CLAPHORN, M.D., F.L.S., Conservator of Forests, Madras Presidency. Post 8vo., with Illustrations, price 12s.

"Full of valuable information and thoroughly reliable in all its statements."—Daily News.

THE HISTORY of CHESS: from the Time of the Early Invention of the Game in India till the Period of its Establishment in Western and Central Europe. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes a stout fight for the Hindus as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chess-playing, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative ethnology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but easily, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Herald.

SIN: its Causes and Consequences. An Attempt to Investigate the Origin, Nature, Extent, and Results of Moral Evil. A Series of Lent Lectures. By the Rev. HENRY CHRISTMAS, M.A., F.R.S. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"These lectures are learned, eloquent, and earnest, and though they approach the 'limits of religious thought,' they do not transgress those limits; and they present the reader with a comprehensive review, based upon revelation, of the nature, extent, and consequences of moral evil or sin, both in this world and in the world to come."—Civil Service Gazette.

A COURSE of ELEMENTARY MATHEMATICS, for the Use of Candidates for Admission into either of the Military Colleges; of Applicants for Appointments in the Home or Indian Civil Service; and of Mathematical Students generally. 2nd Edition. In one closely printed 8vo. volume. Pp. 648. Price 12s.

"In the work before us he has digested a complete Elementary Course by aid of his long experience as a teacher and a writer; and he has produced a very useful book. . . . Mr. Young has not allowed his own tastes to rule the distribution, but has adjusted his parts with the skill of a veteran."—Athenæum, March 9, 1861.

"Mr. Young is well-known as the author of undoubtedly the best treatise on the 'Theory of Equations' which is to be found in our language—a treatise distinguished by originality of thought, great learning, and admirable perspicuity. Nor are these qualities wanting in the work which we are reviewing. . . . Considering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparting accurately and lucidly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation commend this work to the public as by far the best elementary course of mathematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861.

THE RUSSIANS AT HOME: Unpolitical Sketches, showing what Newspapers they read; what Theatres they frequent; and how they Eat, Drink, and Enjoy themselves; with other matter relating chiefly to Literature, Music, and to Places of Historical and Religious Interest in and about Moscow. By SUTHERLAND EDWARDS, Esq. 2nd Edition, with Illustrations. Price 10s. 6d.

"It is a book that we can sincerely recommend, not only to those who are desirous of abundant and reliable information respecting the social economy of the Russian people, but to those who seek an entertaining volume, that may be perused in any part with both profit and amusement."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

"This is not only one of the most amusing books that we have read for a long time, but also the best and most reliable account of Russian life and manners which has hitherto been given to the public."—Spectator.

"The tone is so genial, the descriptions are so vigorously touched, and the author's perfect acquaintance with his subject is so marked throughout, that his sketches are sure to delight any one into whose hands they may fall."—Literary Gazette.

HISTORY of the BRITISH EMPIRE in INDIA, by EDWARD THORNTON, Esq., containing a copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a complete chronological Index of Events. The whole in one closely-printed 8vo. volume, price 12s.

Students who have to pass an examination on the History of India will find Mr. Thornton's the best and cheapest volume to consult, for whilst it is a complete and comprehensive History, the style is lively and interesting, a great contrast with all other Histories of India.

A GAZETTEER of INDIA compiled from Documents at the India-office, and other official returns made in India. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. In one large closely-printed 8vo volume, with Map, price £1. 1s.

THE LIBRARY EDITION of the above Work in four vols. 8vo. with Maps showing the acquisitions of the British at various periods. Notes, and marginal References, may still be had, price £2. 10s.

THE INDIAN ARMY and CIVIL SERVICE LIST for July, 1863. Issued by permission of the Secretary of State for India, 12mo, sewed, 6s., or by post, 6s. 6d.; bound copies, 7s. 6d.; or by post, 8s.

The Indian Army and Civil Service List is issued on the 1st January and 1st July in each year.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY of MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT, Lady Companion to the Princess Charlotte of Wales, with Extracts from her Journals and Anecdote Books. Fourth Edition, 2 vols., 8vo., cloth, £1. 6s.

"Why we should turn to these volumes as among the most interesting of the recent season, will be sufficiently evident as we indicate their contents."—Times.

"Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum.

THE HISTORY of the OPERA, from MONTEVERDE to DONIZETTI. By SUTHERLAND EDWARDS. Second Edition, 2 vols., 8vo., cloth, price £1. 1s.

"Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, Mr. Edwards in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances."—Herald.

"It is one of those treasures of amusing anecdote that may be taken up and laid down at a minute's notice."—Times.

THE REPUBLIC of FOOLS: being the History of the State and People of Abdera in Thrace. Translated from the German of C. M. von Wieland. By the Rev. H. CHRISTMAS. 2 vols., post 8vo., cloth, 18s.

"As a prose satire, 'The History of the Abderites' yields only in breadth of humour, and pungency of wit, to Dean Swift's immortal travels of Captain Lemuel Gulliver, and of works of that class we know of none in any language that can compare with either of the two."—Observer.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English men and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution towards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites; and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to mankind, of the Quixotes, Gullivers, and other human foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to our shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery, inexpressible wisdom, depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of national thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."—London Review.

THE CODE of CRIMINAL PROCEDURE: An Act passed by the Legislative Council of India on the 5th September, 1861. 8vo., cloth, 10s. 6d.

MANUAL of MILITARY LAW for all Ranks of the Army and Militia: together with an Abstract of the Volunteer Acts. By Colonel J. K. PIRON, Assistant Adjutant-General at headquarters, and J. F. COLLIER, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 2nd Revised Edition, pocket-size, 3s. 6d.—By post, 3s. 8d.

"This Manual, which is approved by the Commander-in-Chief, is portable in form, and should be in the hands of all soldiers and riflemen."—Athenæum.

CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS.

STEAM COMMUNICATION between LONDON and INDIA by the MAGNIFICENT FLEET of STEAMERS belonging to the EAST INDIA and LONDON SHIPPING COMPANY (Limited).

The well-known Clipper Auxiliary Steam-ship QUEEN OF THE SOUTH, 2,221 tons, 300-horse power, W. STEWART, Commander, now loading in the Victoria (London) Docks, will leave on the 19th of SEPTEMBER, embarking passengers at and leaving Gravesend on the 21st of SEPTEMBER, for CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS. (This vessel will also call at the Island of MAURITIUS.) No Cargo will be taken for Madras or Mauritius. This magnificent Ship, built expressly for the India trade, has been thoroughly refitted, has first-rate accommodation for passengers, and will carry an experienced Surgeon, also a Stewardess.

The average passage of these steamers has been seventy days to Madras; some of them making the shortest passages on record.

The line will be continued on the 20th of each succeeding month, with the strictest punctuality, by one of this Company's fleet of auxiliary screw steam-ships.

For freight or passage apply to GRINDLAY and Co., 55, Parliament-street, S.W.; the Brokers, ALFRED BRETT and Co., 150, Leadenhall-street, E.C.; or at the Offices of the Company, 9, Mincing-lane, London, E.C., where also applications for appointments as Midshipmen in this service should be made.

RICHARD DREW, Secretary.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!

C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or, indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times. C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Milner, Price, Morlan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post.

23, Cannon-street West, St. Paul's, London; and opposite the Angel, Islington.

SAUCE.—LEA AND PERRINS' WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE.

This delicious condiment, pronounced by Connoisseurs "THE ONLY GOOD SAUCE," is prepared solely by LEA & PERRINS.

The Public are respectfully cautioned against worthless imitations, and should see that LEA & PERRINS' Names are on Wrapper, Label, Bottle, and Stopper.

ASK FOR LEA AND PERRINS' SAUCE.

* * Sold Wholesale and for Export, by the Proprietors, Worcester; Messrs. CROSS and BLACKWELL; Messrs. Barclay and Sons, London; &c., &c.; and by Grocers and Oilmen universally.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Lincture of Quinidine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

Investors will be cautioned against spurious mines.

TEETH.—PATENT 764, AUG., 1855.—As shown at the International Exhibition, Class XVII.—Messrs. LEWIN MOSELY and SONS direct attention to their GUM-COLOURED ENAMELLED BASE FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and their complete system of Painless Dentistry. Teeth from 5s.; Sets, 5, 8, 10, and 15 Guineas.—30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.—Established 1820. For the efficacy and success of this system, vide "Lancet."

CORALIUM SILEX, an entirely new substance for ARTIFICIAL TEETH, which will neither discolour nor decay, remaining firm in the mouth, from one to a complete set, without springs, wires, or any visible attachment. It gives the greatest support to all loose or tender teeth, and answers most perfectly the purposes of mastication and articulation. No painful operation required. Prepared only by MR. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, &c. At home from eleven till four. No connection with any person in the same profession.—No. 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—The greatest and most useful invention of the day, AQUA AMARELLA.—Messrs. JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King-court, Lombard-street, Perfumers to her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age. The Aqua Amarella has none of the properties of dyes; it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea per bottle.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNESIA

has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. When combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Efferescing Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

It is prepared in a state of perfect purity and of uniform strength by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so harmful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the TRUSS (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.

For which a Prize Medal was awarded to the Producer at the International Exhibition, 1862.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in furs, and every other species of insect.

SPORTSMEN will find this an invaluable remedy for destroying Fleas in their Dogs, as also Ladies for their Pet Dogs.

Being the Original Importer of this now invaluable article, which has found so great a sale that it has tempted others to vend a so-called article, the Public are therefore cautioned to observe that the Packets of the Genuine Powder bear the autograph of THOMAS KEATING.

Sold in packets 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, or post free for 14 or 36 postage stamps, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

Disorders of the throat and chest.—Dangerous and complicated as are the diseases of the air passages during many parts of the year, all their afflictions may be removed by these renowned remedies. The Ointment must be well rubbed upon the sides and front part of the neck twice a day, or oftener in diphtheria, sore throat, scarlatina, quinsy, and all maladies assailing this highly sensitive part. In measles, whooping-cough, bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, and asthma, Holloway's Ointment should be rubbed on the chest, and up and down the back with sufficient briskness to ensure its penetration. Holloway's Pills may be reduced to powder, and taken at the same time; they purify the blood, materially contribute to arrest diseased action, and restore health.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

No events of much interest have occurred in India since the date of the last mail.

The incredulity on the subject of the supposed Nana is rapidly increasing. It will turn out, we think, as we at first anticipated, that the prisoner at Ajmere is not the Nana, but still a criminal of considerable importance. Some people think he is perhaps Baba Bhut, the Nana's eldest brother. We do not believe that he is any relation of the Nana. There is a report that the late Nana's family, in the possession of eighty lacs of rupees of property, are now at Jeypore, under the protection of the rajah of that place. This is not very likely. At all events, the Government can put the matter beyond all doubt with very little trouble. The supposed Nana is believed to be on his way to Agra, in custody of thirty-three men of the 16th Bengal Native Cavalry, under the command of Captain Carnel.

Lord and Lady Elgin will leave Simla on the 15th of September, and proceed by easy stages to Sealkote, where they will join their camp. The Viceregal progress through the Punjab in November is to rival or surpass in magnificence anything that British India has yet seen. There is to be a camp of exercise at Lahore and an army of observation to watch the progress of events in Afghanistan, which is at present by no means in a very satisfactory condition.

A crisis is approaching. Ameer Khan, a younger brother of the new Sovereign, is in open rebellion. Afzul Khan, who had raised an army of 25,000 men, is said to have been assassinated.

In reply to an application made to it, the Calcutta Government has determined that uncovenanted officers who were entitled to "accumulated privilege leave" under the old rules when the new rules were issued, will be allowed two or three months' leave in the same manner as if the old rules still remained in force.

Further rules for the examination of officers of the Bengal Police are published in continuation of the Resolution dated 22nd September, 1862. The first article of the Resolution of July 1, 1863, stipulates that it shall not be necessary for district superintendents to pass the old examination: "Every such officer shall be examined by the Deputy Inspector-General of the Division, who shall report whether the officer is qualified by knowledge of his duty, and by proficiency in two native languages."

The transfer of the Government Savings Bank at Calcutta to the Bank of Bengal has been effected. The new arrangement came into operation on the 1st of September.

A General Order by the Commander-in-Chief of the Bengal Army notifies that articles coming from regimental workshops in the Punjab will be gladly received for the forthcoming Exhibition of Arts, Produce, and Manufactures in the Punjab.

There is no limit to the liberality of the Parsees. Some noble donation from them for public purposes is recorded in the papers almost daily. Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bart., has just offered a quarter of a lac of rupees for the erection of a public fountain at Bombay on the site of the Wellesley station. He has also handed to Government one hundred thousand rupees for the erection of a new college at Poona. Mr. Cowasjee Jehanghur (Ready Money), besides contributing so largely for a drinking fountain for the poorer classes of the community at Bombay, has placed at the disposal of the Rev. Mr. Maule seven thousand rupees to pay the cost of an illuminated clock on the tower of St. John's Church, Colaba. He has also offered twenty-five thousand rupees towards completing the church. It is strange that Christians should stand in need of a Parsee's purse to complete their own religious temples. These Parsees, in point of liberality, are above all Hindoo, above all Christian fame.

The Madras Presidency is making a steady progress in material prosperity. The revenue exhibits a regular annual increase. In 1861-62 it exceeded by forty lacs the revenue of the preceding year. But though this general prosperity in the Presidency is very gratifying, we are sorry to learn that cotton cultivation has fallen off to the extent of forty thousand acres. Nevertheless we are told that the supply of cotton promises to be on a larger scale in the Madras Presidency this season than in any former year. Planters were using extraordinary means to send their cotton down to market early; the crop of this season is roughly estimated at 160,000 bales. The demand continued very active, but there were only three or four buyers to any extent, and the want of screwing facilities had been felt as a serious drawback in pushing the cotton forward.

The defective drainage of Madras is at last discovered, like that of Calcutta, to be very injurious to the health of the inhabitants, and the Government has ordered Capt. H. Tulloch, of the Royal Engineers, to prepare a report upon the subject, and submit plans and estimates for the improvement of the present system.

It has been proposed to discover by experiment whether troops would be healthier in barracks at sanatoriums, or in detached cottages or huts, each to contain five tenants. Some huts for this purpose are about to be erected at the hill station of Mount Aboo, and an outlay of 41,000 rupees has been sanctioned by the Bombay Government on this experiment.

The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has objected to any branch of the Eastern Bengal Railway being carried north of the Ganges, either towards Assam or the Darjeeling Road. He suggests that thirty miles extension be made to Jessore.

It is expected that British ladies will rejoice in one result of Sir Robert Montgomery's arrangements on the Thibet frontier. Real Cashmere shawls will be supplied to the London market on such low terms as will astonish and delight our mothers, wives, and sisters.

The Lord Bishop of Calcutta and Sir Charles Trevelyan have initiated a movement for the purpose of raising funds for some public memorial to be presented to the Rev. Dr. Duff on leaving India.

Nearly 2,000 persons have lately died from cholera in Lucknow. The disease is spreading over the neighbouring districts.

A company has been started in Bombay to be called the Western India Hotel Company. The whole of the capital has been subscribed, and Government has made a large grant of land.

CAPTURE OF THE NANA.

[From the Times of India, Aug. 24.]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

SIR,—So many different accounts have appeared relative to the particulars of the capture of the supposed Nana, that it may not be uninteresting to your readers to have a statement, which I enclose, from one engaged in the affair. I may add that, from my own recollections, I consider it a faithful one. The second prisoner taken was the supposed Naroo Punt, and as he was being led up the steps by Major Davidson, I remarked we had only two prisoners instead of three. I returned to the building, and searching it discovered a man sitting on the ground. I conveyed him to the fort, when we found he was the blind man. The capture took place between eight and nine p.m., and the night was unusually dark.

F. BRODIGAN,

Lieutenant, 26th Regt.

Nusseerabad, August 4, 1863.

I accompanied Major Davidson and Lieutenant Brodigan on the night of the 22nd of June, 1863, to the place where the man supposed to be the Nana was concealed. On going down five stone steps we turned to the right, and there was a man standing inside under a sort of verandah in a passage. There was a large water tank in front. Lieutenant Brodigan said, "Here is a man." Major Davidson spoke a few words to another native who was in the verandah, and then turning round to me said, "Have you got the handcuffs ready, Sergeant?" I answered, "Yes, sir," and Major Davidson replied, pointing his finger at the man who was standing near the entrance, "Handcuff that man." I went up to the man and caught hold of both his hands, but not being acquainted with the handcuffs I could not get them on him. Lieutenant Brodigan said to me, "Take him away; never mind the handcuffs." I took hold of both his sleeves down near the wrist in one of my hands, and with my bayonet in the other hand escorted him into the fort and handed him over to the guard.

I then went out to rejoin Major Davidson and Lieutenant Brodigan about 200 yards from the Barrack Gate. I met them escorting the blind priest and the other man, who, I believe, is called Naroo Punt, into barracks. The three prisoners were at once searched, and placed in irons under a guard of the 26th Regiment.

T. D. DALTON, Sergeant, 26th Regiment.

Nusseerabad, 4th August, 1863.

CALCUTTA, July 31.

Two photographic portraits of the supposed Nana have been received by the Government here from Major Davidson, and have been shown to several parties who knew the Nana at Bithoor. One and all, I have heard, say they are not portraits of the women-slayer, nor at all like him. They represent a dark, but not very dark, native, dull-looking, and rather sour-browed, of from fifty to fifty-five years of age, with white hair, mustachios, and whiskers; dressed in chupkun and puggree, and without a particle imposing or Bramminical about him. The features are coarse and common-place, and devoid of all expression, unless it be a slight shade of despondency. The man is seated in an English chair, and, though slight, appears not of more than medium height. There is nothing about him, or his garb, that would cause one to look twice at him if met at large; and if asked who the picture represented, without having been told its history, most people would be inclined to answer it was a portrait of some stupid old gomastah or native of that class. And yet, when the features are looked into with a knowledge that the man is supposed to be the Nana, they seem indicative of low animal care for self, and of an amount of callousness which might lead their possessor to order the sacrifice of hundreds that his own safety might be the more assured.

I have spoken to two or three Mahrattas whose families came to this side of India with the old Peishwa, and who, having lived for some time at Bithoor, knew his adopted son, the Nana, well. These parties had seen the portraits, and they declared they were not at all like the Nana, who was a much younger and altogether more distingué looking man; and they were fully of opinion that no suffering could have reduced him to a semblance of what the portraits represented. The Nana is one of three brothers born near Poona, but all of whom were resident at Bithoor when the rebellion broke out, and at Cawnpore when the slaughter took place. Of these Baba Bhut was the eldest, the Nana second, and Bala Rao the youngest. Baba Bhut was nine or ten years the Nana's senior, from whom he also differed much in personal appearance. Some of the natives say the portraits resemble Baba Bhut, but then the Mahrattas have it that Baba died two years ago, and—in Calcutta! Of the whereabouts of Bala Rao I have heard nothing, but, if alive, he is probably either in Rajpootana, or the Deccan. The native impression is, that the Nana is alive. The phrase with the Cawnporeans and the Mahrattas is, "The Government won't catch the Nana quickly." For my part I believe the three brothers live, and that it has become a point of honour with the native chiefs not to surrender or betray them. I fancy they would be in no great danger in any part of India, unless Gwalior. Scindia and the Nana cannot be friends, for if the latter were in the ascendant, Scindia would assuredly be deposed, if not murdered; and even though other chiefs may shelter the fugitives on the sly, it is very unlikely any of them would now league with them to get up a war against the British. The nearest approach to ripe mischief there has been of the kind was in the Nizam's country, and then it was only tampering with the soldiery, the plotting being as much against the Nizam as against the British. At Saloombar there are doubtless, some bad characters congregated; but it is because the chief is not sure he will not have to fight for the roof over him, and is consequently inclined to encourage fugitives and rebels in order, when the time comes, that they may swell his forces. I may be doing his chieftship wrong in writing thus about him, but as he has got a bad name, it would be informal not to help to hang him. The story of the three hundred horse escorting the supposed Nana is considered an invention, and such it doubtless is. It is further believed that the Nana is dead, though the first story of his death and cremation in the jungles of Nepal is now known to have been false. There is pretty reliable evidence that he was in Benares about two years ago, and raised money there; but there is also a circumstantial tale of his death since then, though where I cannot say. I feel pretty convinced the man taken in Ajmere is not the Nana; though it is not improbable he is Baba Bhut, or some other rebel of note. The blind man's identification is not worth much. He must have been employed to give a semblance of true Brahminical mendicancy to the wanderings of the party, who were not likely to reveal their real names to him. But why should the captive, if not the Nana, refuse to detail his antecedents—to tell where he came from, where he was going to, and who are his family and friends? Simply because he has something to conceal, and probably left his country for his country's good. There are many natives, never rebels, roaming about the country, not exactly fleeing from justice, but constantly changing place to evade it. The supposed Nana may be of this class, though it is not improbable, nay, rather probable, that he is Baba Bhut, the eldest of the brothers who, even if the Nana were dead, would still be a very likely man to be intriguing to again light up the flames of rebellion.

—CALCUTTA, August 6.

The good people of the Bombay Presidency are doubtless convinced by this that Mr. Forjett's chance of knighthood is for the present a rather slender one. Had the Ajmere Nana turned out to be the real Nana it might have been otherwise; but considering that rather ill-used "suspect" is now known not to be the Nana, nor Baba Bhut, nor any other member of the family whose iniquities have made them objects of public hate, the probability is the Bombay police will be "warned," instead of thanked, for their recent zeal. But I am doing Mr. Forjett injustice; for has he not all along professed unbelief of the Ajmere prisoner being the man wanted? Be this as it may, it is evident no reliance can be placed on the statements of his Bithoor spy, who has shown himself quite willing to get an individual hanged as the Nana, who is not the Nana, nor like him, and about whom the only thing suspicious is, that he will not tell where he comes from—that is, his native place—a reticence doubtless arising from a conviction that the less the authorities know of his antecedents the better for himself. There are hundreds of natives similarly circumstanced—men who have fled from home and from justice, and who spend their time wandering about from one place to another, generally under the guise of religious pilgrims, and who, if arrested, will endure anything rather than divulge where they originally started from. From shrine to shrine, nigh the hills when summer heats rage, and on the plains when the cooler season comes round, these vagrants lead a not unpleasant life. And such a purposeful stroller is, I fancy, he of whom the wise men of Ajmere have now got hold.

SIMLA, August 1.

We do not believe that you have got the Nana, nor does Sir Hugh Rose, with whom I was speaking on the subject the other night. The evidence of the sergeant is not worth much. The Nana was never known to have gone so far north as Meerut before the mutiny; in fact he was seldom even seen at Cawnpore, though he used frequently to entertain the society of neighbouring stations at his palace in Bithoor. I saw him a fortnight before the outbreak in Oudh, when he came on a visit to Sir Henry Lawrence at Lucknow, and offered all the assistance in his power, to quench the spreading flame. Sir Henry held a grand durbar in honour of him, and at which were present all the European and native officers in the place. He also addressed the native officers and chiefs in Hindoostani, enjoining loyalty on all, and complimenting the Nana on his. I remember the farce well. I also spent an evening with the Nana at the Ayce Bagh, the garden in which he had taken up his quarters. The story of Gyapershaud is likewise a very doubtful one. What are our political agents about, that they do not call upon the chiefs of Rajpootana for some definite information or explanation on the subject? Surely the assertion that the Nana's family, with 80 lacs of property, is staying at Jeypore, under the protection of the Rajah of that place or Bikaner, is easy enough of proof. And I should say that, if in this one tangible particular Gyapershaud's statement was found right or wrong, the substantial accuracy of the whole might be accepted. It is a mistake to suppose that the Nana ever spoke English, and a gross absurdity to say that, if ignorant of the language before the mutiny, he has acquired a knowledge of it since. Where has he had the opportunity, where the peace of mind, and where was the necessity for his doing so. But I daresay he will be sent to Cawnpore in due course.

LAHORE, Aug. 3.

The Times of India's reports of the Nana, especially those having reference to the confession of the blind man, have acted like a firebrand here, and created the greatest possible sensation; and if only a portion of the statements prove true, disclose anything but a pleasant state of affairs. The fact of the Nana having only recently been actually amongst us, perambulating our bazaars, breathing treason into the minds, possibly, of our very servants, seems almost incredible. And that he should have successfully continued this dangerous game, not only here but in Umritsur, Rawul Pindee, Peshawar, and other places, is the reverse of creditable to the vigilance of the Punjab police. The complicity, too, in these transactions of the Maharajah of Cashmere, while it must be received with caution, demands the most rigid and searching inquiry. Though I never have given the Cashmere Rajah credit for possessing that enthusiastic devotion to the British, which distinguishes many of the chiefs in Northern India, still his conduct during 1857 was above suspicion, and though, as Puttiala, he did not personally head his men in the field against the rebels, he nevertheless sent a force to our assistance. Neither must it be overlooked, that on a subsequent occasion he assisted us in capturing the Bala Rao, who had taken refuge in his dominions. Taking, therefore, all these circumstances into consideration, and looking to the absence of motive or advantage possibly to be derived by treating the Nana as described, it is only right I should inform you that this portion of the blind man's statement, unsupported as it at present is by other corroborative testimony, is not generally credited here. One thing, however, we are assured of (provided, of course, the captured individual be indeed the Nana), that a very dangerous scheme has been successfully nipped in the bud; one that might, if allowed to mature, have terminated in consequences the most serious, and should impress on all the necessity of increased watchfulness. In the Punjab we have a European force, however, whose very name is of itself sufficient to banish the very thought of revolt from the mind of any one but a downright idiot.

RAJPOTANA, Aug. 10.

Captain Carnell, of Ajmere, states that it is not the Nana who is now imprisoned there; and he has offered to take the man up to Agra with merely a guard of a few Sikh sowars. Government, however, left this to the discretion of the Commissioner of Ajmere, and that officer wisely declines to incur any risk of losing the man, Nana or no Nana. By the time you receive this he will be on his way to Agra under an European guard. The Governor-general's agent is expected to start on his tour through the States almost immediately. Certain business, it is said, will detain him a considerable time at Oodepore, and he will also visit Saloombar, from which, by-the-by, all the "pandies" are reported to have departed. The place, however, is so out of the way, and surrounded by jungle, that it is difficult to know what is the real state of the case; and although more than one officer volunteered to go in disguise for the purpose of ascertaining the true state of affairs, none of the offers were accepted.

The formerly all-absorbing subject of the Nana has given place to vague conjectures regarding the approaching military reliefs. Neemuch and Nusseerabad expect to change European corps, to the great delight of those leaving the former place.

NUSSEERABAD, August 12.

After all, the Nana has been sent away without the European escort so much talked of. He left Ajmere yesterday en route for Agra in the custody of 30 of the 16th Bengal Cavalry (native!) under the command of Captain Carnell, who, by the way, firmly believes he is merely taking care of a Brahmin personating the Nana for political purposes.

[From the Indian Press.]

"We understand that Dr. Cheke has been ordered to go to Cawnpore when the Unknown of Ajmere reaches that station, to examine him and give evidence as to his identity or not with the Nana. Until the personal examination has been made, it is impossible to speak with any degree of certainty, but as far as the examination of photographs has gone, we believe the evidence is rather against the identity of the prisoner with the notorious criminal he has been taken for."—Delhi Gazette.

"It is most sincerely to be hoped that the individuals lately captured at Ajmere may prove to be the Nana of Bithoor and his brother Baba Butt, and that it will eventually not turn out that Major Davidson has found a mare's nest. So repeatedly have errors been made regarding the identity of these arch fiends, and so frequently have our hopes been raised that these miscreants were actually about to expiate their crimes on the gallows, that at last we have come to the conclusion of never allowing ourselves to be brought into the belief that they are still alive. Most of the public journals express an idea that the greatest difficulty will be experienced in proving the identity of these villains. Firstly, it is imagined that those natives who, it is known, have associated and been intimate with the Nana's family prior to the outbreak in 1857, would now ignore all knowledge of them, or evade giving straightforward testimony against them; and secondly, that with the exception of Dr. Tressider, now in England, and Captain Mowbray Thompson, few, if any, other Europeans could recognise them in the slightest degree. It is generally supposed that the Nana of Bithoor was a most horrible-looking man, instead of which he had a most pleasing expression of countenance. In 1856 he was excessively stout, about twenty-eight years of age, fair olive complexion, full round face, large eyes, very little moustache, if any, and no whiskers. His ears were pierced, and he wore thin large gold wire rings. His height must have been about five feet ten inches. He may have understood English, but did not speak that language. The Nana's brother, Baba Butt, was a man much older than the Nana, and in 1856 I should say he must have been verging on fifty. He may have been somewhat less, or he may have been a little more; had iron-grey hair, moustache, and had he allowed them to grow, would have had much whisker and beard. His teeth were even and complete in front, his complexion was somewhat fair for a native, and his countenance bore rather a sad expression. His height must have been about five feet ten or eleven inches; he stooped slightly, and was inclined to be bow-legged. He was also a great snuff-taker. He could speak a few words of English, which he said had been taught him by a moonshee, who was then in England petitioning Parliament on his brother's behalf."—Englishman, July 30.

A correspondent of the Harkuru writes that he was assured by a Nepaulesse that, after the final discomfiture of the rebels and their dispersion in the Nepaul Terraie, the Nana and his brother were protected by Jung Bahadoor and allowed to remain at a place called Johannee Kutcherry, about fifteen or twenty miles from the British territory. Here they continued to reside until about eighteen months ago, when the Nana became very ill from an enlargement of the spleen, and was for some time in considerable danger. Pitying his deplorable condition, Jung Bahadoor caused the two brothers to be removed to Khatmandoo, where he gave them a good house to live in, but forbade them ever to go abroad. While at Johannee Kutcherry, the Nana was disguised as a Jogee, and served a small temple. If there be any truth in this statement—and the Nepaulesse had no apparent motive for deceiving our informant—it can hardly be the real Nana who is now in the hands of the police.

Since our last issue we have been favoured with a sight of the Nana's photograph. We know the Nana, and have no hesitation whatever in declaring that the man apprehended at Ajmere is not Nana Dhoondoo Punt of Bithoor. The evidence of Sergeant-major Wilkins, Royal Artillery, was of itself sufficient to make any reasonable person doubt the value of the capture. The Nana has never been in Meerut, and if Sergeant-major Wilkins ever saw any one called Nana, that person was the Chota Nana, as he was called in Cawnpore, the grandson of the Peishwa's commander-in-chief. But we disbelieve the statement made by the sergeant entirely. It is astonishing how a love of notoriety will make people of lively imagination, or weak and garrulous natures lie—for there is no other word for it. The evidence of the informer, Gya Purshaud, would not stand cross examination for five minutes in any Court of Justice—and however much we should be disposed to pity the sorrows of the poor blind man who has turned Queen's evidence, we should have no hesitation in rejecting his evidence in identification of the Nana. The Friend considers that the balance of evidence continues to be in favour of the identity of the Ajmere prisoner with the Nana. The evidence consists of the lively and imaginative deposition of Wilkins, and the erratic rhapsody of Gya Purshaud—to which the Friend is willing to attach the statement of the blind man. The blind man has been three years with the supposed Nana, and declares him to be that person. Did the blind man know him before his companionship of three years with him? Did he know him before he lost his sight? How did he become possessed of his information as to his identity? We knew the Nana formerly, and are satisfied that the captured person is not the Nana. Dhoondoo Punt was a short thickset man, about 5 feet 8 inches in height, with broad and massive features, repulsive looking than otherwise. The photograph represents a long thin supple-looking Mahratia, with a long face, such as the Nana's never could have become with all the wear and tear of travel, anxiety, and self-condemnation, if he suffered from conscience at all, which, as long as his money lasted, is unlikely. From what we remember of the Nana's Court, and from our examination of the photograph received from Major Davidson, we should be disposed to regard the prisoner as the Bhao Sahib, also known as Baba Butt, the foster brother of the Nana. On intimating our suspicions to a gentleman in this station who knew the Nana, and his people at Bithoor, we found that he also had formed the same opinion. We should be glad to hear, from any of our readers who may know anything on the subject, what is supposed to have become of the Bhao Sahib? If he be alive, or if there be no evidence of his death, we should be very much disposed to regard the Ajmere prisoner as the Nana's foster brother. The photograph greatly resembles him, and strange to say, there is a peon in our establishment who faithfully resembles the photograph. We hope to goodness that the magistrate of Meerut will not go hunting Nana here and arrest the man, for he is a very useful servant.—Mofussilite, Aug. 7.

BENGAL.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

The Bengal Medical Retiring Fund announces its inability to grant the usual seven annuities to retiring subscribers this year, and accordingly in November next but six annuities will be declared for the year 1863-64, consequent upon the diminished and steadily diminishing resources of the institution from subscriptions. As regards the assets of the fund and the value of the existing annuities there is a deficiency of Rs. 90,621 13 0, which will be aggravated in next year's accounts, when six annuities shall have been declared, some heavy subscribers shall have ceased to contribute towards the resources of the fund, and the list of surgeons and assistant-surgeons shall have been altered and diminished by the average casualties of the year. Before the stoppage of all fresh admissions to the service consequent upon the transfer of the Government of India to the Crown, the list of assistant-surgeons subscribing to the fund amounted to two hundred and seventy-three, and it now stands at two hundred and thirty-seven, with a prospective diminution every year of about eighteen more by promotions and deaths. It is under these serious circumstances that the management of the Medical Retiring Fund have applied to the Government "for a supplementary grant-in-aid, to enable the fund to continue to grant the prescribed number of seven annuities to medical officers retiring after regulated periods of service." The fund management state that they "have been in expectation that the amalgamation scheme would formally recognise the necessity of such supplemental relief by the Government," and possibly so it will—when it comes; but in the meantime the Fund has drifted into impecuniosity, and will soon be among the shoals and rocks of insolvency. This Government cannot, we think, subsidise the Medical Retiring Fund to the amount of a single rupee without reference to, and permission from, Sir Charles Wood, who will now soon hear that he has ruined another of John Company's monuments, and compelled those dependent upon its solvent working to come as suppliants to his door. It is possible that this state of affairs as regards the Medical Retiring Fund may have the effect of expediting the appearance of the long-expected measure for the medical service.—Englishman, Aug. 10.

CACHAR.

August 3.—I observe you have already a correspondent in Cachar, but as he does not seem to trouble you often with his communications, you will perhaps give a place to this as an additional source of information to such of your readers as may be interested in the progress of this tea-producing province. These must now, I think, form a pretty considerable section of the community, if we take into consideration the number of shareholders in the now numerous tea companies whose sphere of action is Cachar.

This season has been a most unusual one for this province. In ordinary years rain falls here in small quantities in January and February, while in March thunderstorms and North-Westers bring with them heavy showers, which give sufficient moisture to the tea plant, to start it to fresh growth, and to enable planters to commence manufacturing about March 15. This year, however, we had no rain whatever in January, February, or March, and but slight showers in April and May; the consequence being that the tea plant, which had in most cases suffered considerably from the intense heat and dryness of the cold months, did not commence to yield leaf till about the 1st of May. Thus one month and a half of the usual manufacturing season, which at best lasts but seven months, was lost to the planter, and this in a great degree accounts for the short outturn which is complained of in most gardens. Since June 1, however, the weather has been all that could be desired both for leaf and transplanting, and I confidently expect that, with a favourable ending to the season, all moderate estimates will be made; and the new gardens will have something less than the usual proportion of vacancies to complain of.

We are still very much behind hand here in the matter of roads. Such as we do possess have, in most instances when made, been allowed to take care of themselves, so that many of them have got into such a state that a wise traveller in the cold weather usually chooses the side walk in preference to the road. At the present time such a choice is not perhaps open to him, owing to the presence of growing crops, and the poor traveller, forced to the road provided for him, sinks deep into mud at every step. Even these roads are, however, preferable to none at all. In some portions of the province the only pathway is a space of ground about twelve feet broad, left unplanted with rice; but certainly admirably adapted for the growth of that crop, being thoroughly ploughed by the feet of oxen, buffaloes, elephants, and men into a rich tough mud, about eighteen inches deep. This is the state of things all through Hylacandy, a pretty large division of the province, containing upwards of thirty tea factories and about fifty European residents. This district is only about thirty miles long and seven broad, and a scheme for supplying it with roads was submitted to the Lieutenant-Governor on his visit to Cachar last year, and duly approved of by him; it being understood that the planting interest benefited thereby should contribute one-third of the money required. Time was, however, allowed to slip past, and finally the blame that nothing had been done was attempted to be thrown on the planters, because they had not voluntarily and without solicitation come forward with their subscriptions. This is, however, but a lame excuse, as it was known to the authorities here that the money was to be had for the asking, at least the Lieutenant-Governor was so informed by a deputation, in the presence of the Superintendent of the province, and the planters after this very naturally considered that no further action on their part was necessary. But our authorities here thought otherwise. I believe they expected each planter to appear personally with his bag of rupees, and such not being the case no roads were made. This year the Hylacandy planters are again in bad luck. Their roads were not commenced last year. This season they are informed the funds allocated for Cachar are only sufficient to finish such roads as have been already commenced. What, then, becomes of our Lieutenant-Governor's promise that these roads should be made? Is it to be regarded as all moonshine? What of Sir C. Trevelyan's Budget statement, that money was to be had for all works of this description, that he was only prevented from allocating a larger sum towards public works by the fact that the present P.W. establishment could spend no more, within the twelve months of his Budget? Surely a road through a portion of a district in which Europeans are annually expending in permanent improvement of land, somewhere about four lakhs of rupees, thereby increasing the value of landed property by at least double that sum, is a work of necessity, and ought to be pushed forward by Government with all energy and despatch. The total outlay required is only about Rs. 45,000, of which Rs. 30,000 are asked from Government, and the balance contributed by planters. I speak specially of Hylacandy, because it is a striking instance of neglect; but many other "portions of this" rapidly-progressing province are equally destitute of means of communication.

Coolies have just begun to arrive up, under the new Immigration Rules. The batches which I have seen are certainly superior to those formerly sent up, and have evidently had more care taken of them on the way up, for all seemed in pretty good health and ease. Some inconvenience is experienced, owing to the necessity of taking all coolies before a magistrate on their arrival in the province, and the arrangements in reference to Budderpore as a place of disembarkation are still very imperfect, as there is no magistrate there, and all coolies have consequently to go on up to Silchar. In many instances this is equivalent to a lengthening of the voyage by five or six days. All this, however, we expect to have rectified shortly by the placing of a deputy-magistrate at that point, when the inconvenience will be no longer felt. It only now remains to be seen whether these coolies will be as much disposed to run away from the plantations as former ones have been. They cannot now plead their old excuse that they came up in ignorance of the terms of their agreements, as these are twice explained to them by Government officials. Should the scheme work well in this respect, planters will have no cause to regret the extra expense incurred under the new rules in the procuring of men. But all this remains to be seen, the whole system being as yet on its trial.—Hurkaru, Aug. 13.

THE BURNEY CASE.

FETTEGHUR, August 2.—We (Times of India) hear from good authority, and with some surprise, that the commission which was appointed by the High Court of Calcutta to elicit replies from his Excellency Sir Hugh Rose to certain interrogatives, in the matter now at issue between Colonel Burney and Captain Eyre, alias the Burney-cum-Willis affair, has only partially succeeded in its object, as the Commander-in-Chief avers that much to which many of the questions refer was made known to him in strict confidence, and much also was of that nature which is generally denominated "privileged communications."

Now, with regard to the first plea, whilst we justify an honourable silence on points which were made known to a second party on the understanding that they should be kept faithfully from the ears of others, yet when that second party, in virtue of such intelligence, deems it his duty to direct the resignation of office by him to whom the communication related, and that officer thinks it but just to himself to call for the reasons for such resignation being required of him, we hold that all honourable considerations at once cease; and, if not the name of the informant himself, at least the purport of his information should no longer be withheld, and every assistance afforded to rebut any charge that may have been made. Surely his Excellency must see that he showed but poor judgment in receiving confidential statements on a subject that would require his official decision. That Sir Hugh Rose is an able general there can be no doubt; but that he, like all mortals, is prone to err and has erred is likewise true. Occasionally he is hasty, and permits his discretion to be sacrificed to the impulses of the moment. What better proof could be adduced of this than the case under comment? A conflict between a sense of being guilty of a breach of confidence and fear of doing injustice to a brother officer and brave soldier must have been going on in his mind for months; but the former should have succumbed to the latter. The victory would, by all right-thinking men, have been deemed a victory gained by high-mindedness and a good conscience.

Now, with regard to the second reason advanced for refusing to answer several points material to the exoneration of Colonel Burney—"privileged communications." Who has ever succeeded in intelligibly defining this term? Its acceptance with Sir Hugh Rose would appear to be this—the right of one man to stab another in the dark; a method of injuring one's enemy without the possibility of defence. This is neither honourable nor just. If in private life such conduct would be looked upon with abhorrence, with how much greater disdain should it be treated when shown by a high representative of a Government whose motto is honor et justitia? Admitted that under certain circumstances, where the welfare of the public service is concerned, secret communications are sometimes not only admissible, but are positively unavoidable, under no consideration should the slightest word be breathed in secret to the detriment of the party concerned.

All through this unfortunate business it is evident there has been an attempt made to prevent Colonel Burney from presenting all the facts in their true light; but we trust that, in spite of all the difficulties that have been put in his way, he will gain a signal victory, and fully establish his innocence of all the accusations made against him.

THE GREAT ABRAHAM SUIT.

Who remembers the great Abraham case? It is nine years since we first noticed it, and four since we pronounced the decision of the Madras Sudder Court, reversing that of the Judge of Bellary as the most utterly unjust that even an Indian Sudder Court had ever delivered, as "equally opposed to precedent, to natural justice, and to the recognised custom of the empire." That decision, which it took the Madras Sudder Court five years to arrive at, has, we rejoice to say, been reversed by the Privy Council. The highest legal authorities, from whom there is no appeal, have decided that, upon a conversion of a Hindu to Christianity, the Hindu law ceases to have any continuing obligatory force upon the convert. He may renounce the old law by which he was bound, as he has renounced his old religion, or, if he thinks fit, he may abide by the old law, notwithstanding he has renounced the old religion." The Madras Athenæum promises to publish the judgment at length. Meanwhile, these are, in brief, the facts. In 1849, Mathew Abraham, the son of a converted Hindoo, was a rich man in Bellary. He died in 1852, leaving his great property to his widow and two sons. One of them had been educated in England, was a friend of Daniel O'Connell, had fought in the Hungarian war and was an attaché of our legation at Constantinople. No Asiatic, not to say native Christian, ever ran such a career. But the deceased's brother Francis alleged that he had been Mathew's partner, and claimed the property on the ground that he and his brother Mathew were members of an undivided Hindu family, and that the fact of himself, his father, and family being Christians, could not, and did not, make them subject to the English law. The Bellary judge held that the English law was applicable. The Sudder Court, ever wrong on points of law, held that a Christian Hindoo, whose grandfather had ceased to be a Hindoo by religion, was still under Hindoo law,—that is, that he was at once a Hindoo and not a Hindoo—and decided in favour of the brother. Their lordships of the Privy Council held it proved that, from the time of the late Mathew Abraham's marriage, he and his family adhered, in all respects, to the religion, manners, and habits of the East Indians. Therefore, though the lex loci Act did not apply, under the regulation which prescribes that the decision shall be according to equity and good conscience, the property was made over to the widow and children according to English law. Would that a case like that of Hemnauth Bose were brought before the Privy Council, that an end might similarly be put to all doubts on the subject of the rights of conscience of Hindoo youths; as well as of the rights of property in the case of the children of Hindoo converts.—Friend of India, Aug. 13.

CALCUTTA TRIALS.

During the last two days of the Criminal Sessions that have just terminated the Court was occupied with two cases which illustrate the heterogeneous and polyglot composition of the Calcutta community. The first case referred to the social customs of the Jews, and showed what little change they had undergone since the patriarchal times. If a Jewish maiden accept a present from an unmarried man among her acquaintances and co-religionists, it is a token of her willingness to be betrothed to him. It was in this spirit Rebecca accepted the "golden earring of half-shekel weight and two bracelets for her hands of ten-shekel weight of gold," which Abraham's steward presented to her at the well. This gift is called a Koodroosen, or Kudrooben—for on that point reporters differ; and the fact of its having been accepted is attested by two witnesses. So long as this document exists, the damsel cannot be united in wedlock to any other gallant than the one whose love-token she has accepted. Now in this city of Calcutta there dwelleth an Israelite, of the name of Sassoon Ezekiel Judah, whose daughter was sought in marriage by her cousin, Jacob Ezra Judah. But the lover was distasteful to this Maid of Judah, for that he had made grimaces at her in her early youth, and so she could not abide the sight of him. Nor does it appear that Jacob Ezra was violently enamoured of his cousin, the beauteous Mazeltupe. Her principal charm, in his eyes, seems to have been that ascribed by the French poet to a damsel of his own country—elle a cent mille vertus—en lous bien comptés. Though poor in this world's goods, Jacob Ezra was not deficient in guile, and he bethought him of a means of replenishing his coffers and at the same time of taking unto himself a wife of spotless reputation. His cousin, Mazeltupe, he knew, was in the daily habit of going to school in a palkee, accompanied by her ayah, Motee, who was truly a pearl of great price, and a right trustworthy duenna. Finding it impossible to wind his net round the damsel herself, Jacob Ezra got up a little scene that did considerable credit to his dramatic ability. Having procured the attendance of one Ezra Hyam Hakeem, surnamed Bulbul, by reason, doubtless, of the sweetness of his notes—though, as Shakespeare says, now that he has taken to singing by day when every goose is cackling he will be thought no better than the wren—he caused a closed palkee, on the opposite side of which walked one Ezekiel Mooshee Lathoonee, to be brought to the door of a certain house in David Joseph's lane. Ezekiel then opened the door of the palkee on his side, and holding up a small silver casket, valued by the unromantic Bulbul at £2. 8s., he desired that witness to look at it, and afterwards handed it to some one in the palkee. Ezekiel's next act was to draw up an account of the proceeding as if there had been a regular presentation and acceptance of a Koodroosen, and this paper the Bulbul was constrained, on pain of death, to sign as a witness. No further steps, however, appear to have been immediately taken by Jacob Ezra Judah to enforce his claim to the hand of his fair cousin, who remained in happy ignorance of the whole affair until her father's return from Penang. The Bulbul's tongue was then unlocked, and he boldly warbled forth his long-premeditated lay. The irate father of the maiden, whose name had been so shamelessly used by these fellows, took prompt measures to bring the latter to justice, but, through some inconceivable blunder on the part of the magistrate who committed the case for trial, the prisoners were indicted on a charge of forgery. There was clearly no forgery at all, but there was an attempt at fraud and something very like a conspiracy. However, the prosecution broke down through the defect in the indictment, and both Ezra Judah and his active accomplice, Ezekiel Mooshee Lathoonee, were acquitted and discharged.

The second case was a trial for libel and defamation of character, both plaintiff and defendant being of the Armenian race and the journalistic vocation. The plaintiff, Mr. Joseph Aviet Seth, is described as editor or supervisor of the East Indian Journal, while the defendant conducted a rival paper, called Philadelphus, or the Lover of Brothers, as it was rendered by the interpreter, though one would have thought that the Loving Brother was a more correct version of the Greek. Be this as it may, the editor of the latter journal published an atrocious libel, charging his rival with infidelity in conjugal matters, with having accelerated the death of his own wife, and with having been accessory to murder. The plaintiff at once admitted that, as a husband, his conduct had been infamous, and that many years ago a rumour had got abroad that he was somehow answerable for the death of a Syce, who had been found in his house with his throat cut. He does not say, indeed, that this horrible rumour was utterly false and unfounded, but we are willing to assume that it was so, and that Mr. Seth is no more a murderer than ourselves. But we are utterly at a loss to understand how it comes to pass that Mr. Justice Wells should have praised the honesty—shameless effrontery is the better phrase—with which the plaintiff acknowledged his long-continued neglect of his wife and his familiar intercourse with another woman. The defendant was undoubtedly guilty of an abominable libel, and was deservedly sentenced to three months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of five hundred rupees, but Mr. Seth certainly did not succeed in clearing his character of the charge of heartless immorality. Nothing, however, could be better than the summing up and charge to the jury by the learned judge. The comments on editorial rivalries were admirable, and should be laid to heart by every journalist in India, where personalities are still too much in favour. We much fear that this is the last time we shall have an opportunity of alluding to the judicial proceedings of Mr. Justice Wells, who will thus have concluded his Indian career by offering the best possible advice to the directors of public opinion in this country.—Bengal Hurkaru, Aug. 5.

A FARCE AT SIMLA.

There must unquestionably be something in the air of Simla that is injurious to the digestive powers, and consequently detrimental to the peace of society. Not a season ever passes at that otherwise favoured and favourite sanitarium without a series of scandalous disputes that almost justify Mr. Tom Taylor's extravagant sketches of society in India. It was only the other day we had that unseemly fracas between Mrs. Richard Lawrence and her son on the one side, and Captain Hill on the other. And now we have the report of a case tried before the Assistant Commissioner, in which Major Goad, one of the chief disturbers of the Simla peace, figured very prominently. Some little time ago a Mr. Moore wrote a private and confidential letter to Captain Andrews, in which he spoke of Major Goad in anything but complimentary terms. This letter came into the Major's hands through one Coxen, a house agent, who asserted that he had picked it up under the portico of the Assembly Rooms, and that, finding it was abusive of the Major, he gave it up to him as his lawful property. This person had no hesitation in admitting that he had opened and read a letter which he knew was not intended for himself, and endeavoured to justify his conduct in delivering it into Major Goad's hands by the ridiculous pretext that he himself was a servant of that officer, and that the Assembly Rooms, under the portico of which he had picked up the note, also belonged to the Major. In the first instance, Captain Andrews did his best to recover this letter without having recourse to legal measures, but was at length compelled to bring a suit against Coxen, from whom he recovered sixteen rupees damages, and one rupee four annas costs. The matter, however, did not end there, for various letters subsequently appeared in the Himalaya Advertiser, reflecting upon Coxen's conduct, and insinuating that, as he had been capable of appropriating one letter, he might also have taken possession of some others that had been missed by Captain Andrews. Upon this Coxen brought an action for libel against Mr. J. Mahoney, the proprietor of the paper in which the defamatory letters were published. The defendant admitted the libel, but justified it, and proved that Coxen had found various letters and articles belonging to Captain Andrews in the loft of the cottage in the Assembly Rooms compound, in which that officer formerly resided. These articles the plaintiff had done up in a sealed parcel, and entrusted for safe keeping to a Mr. Belchain, formerly a member of the police force. The plaintiff stated that, as Major Goad had purchased the Assembly Rooms and the cottage of Capt. Andrews, he became the lawful owner of everything that was in them at the time of sale, whether or not mentioned in the inventory. For himself, he was only Major Goad's servant, and therefore had no choice but to hand over to his master whatever he believed to be his; but, as it has already been said, he did not give this parcel to Major Goad, neither was he the Major's servant. He was simply a house agent, and in that capacity was permitted to reside rent-free in an untenanted house belonging to that officer. The evidence was so clear and conclusive that the jury, consisting of five intelligent and highly-respectable Europeans, unanimously found "that the defendant was not guilty of libel, and that the plaintiff had become possessed of a letter without being able to account satisfactorily for having the said letter in his possession." The plaintiff's counsel, therefore, gave notice of appeal, and Mr. Murphy, the Assistant-commissioner, reserved his judgment for a few days, at the expiration of which he set aside the finding of the jury, pronounced the defendant guilty of libel, and awarded Coxen one rupee "as compensation for the injury done to his character"—the defendant to pay the costs. What, then, is the use of a jury? Why should the time of five respectable men be taken up with a simulated trial of a prisoner if the judge has power to set aside their verdict in this arbitrary manner, and to decide in face of the clearest evidence? The whole affair is a disgraceful farce, and can have no other effect than to throw great discredit on the administration of justice. For the particulars of this strange case we are indebted to the Delhi Gazette.—Bengal Hurkaru, Aug. 5.

A MUNICIPAL JOB.

The native papers complain of the house-tax being so suddenly raised from 7½ to 10 per cent., before it could possibly be known whether these additional funds would be required for municipal purposes. By this time our prudent brethren have probably discovered that the new prefect of the city and his colleagues are not at all likely to be embarrassed by any amount of riches. Their treasury is as the tub of the daughters of Danaus. The more abundantly the money is poured in, the more rapidly will it rush out again. We have seen how narrowly the ratepayers escaped having to pay 1,200 rupees a month for a health officer, though a perfectly competent officer can be found in Bombay for 350 rupees a month; and we are not disposed to deny that Mr. Brett is entitled to the credit of having checked the justices in their headlong career of profuse expenditure. We regret that he did not yesterday make a more vigorous stand against the chairman's hole-and-corner proposition to despatch Mr. Clark to England at a cost of 5,000 rupees. The meeting was evidently taken by surprise, but it will never do to permit arrangements of this kind to be carried by a tour de force. The idea of sending chief engineers to Europe to purchase machinery is simply preposterous. Mr. Schalch must have laughed in his sleeve when he found such a ready credence accorded to his statement that it was exceedingly difficult to obtain a pumping-machine adapted for Calcutta, as if the fullest specifications were not procurable by return of post, should Mr. Clark happen not to have received the illustrated catalogues of the great London houses. Even more ridiculous was the statement that the quickest mode of getting a steam-roller and a steam stone-crushing machine out from England was by sending Mr. Clark to fetch them. Considerable time, according to the chairman, would be lost by indenting for them on a London firm, so that we infer it is his intention to despatch Mr. Clark by telegraph, for otherwise we are at a loss to understand how he could reach London more quickly than a letter via Marseilles. And if that gentleman, after being several years engaged in draining this town, needs further tuition in his profession, the wisest course would be to appoint another engineer. The whole affair is a palpable job, and one of those pettifogging jobs which municipal and corporate bodies are ever so fond of perpetrating. The matter was all cut and dry before being laid before the meeting, the justices merely being asked to sanction the outlay of five thousand rupees, without being at all consulted as to the advisability of the measure contemplated by the Drainage and Water Committee. But if each committee is to be allowed to follow this precedent, the rate-payers of Calcutta will soon discover to their cost that ten per cent. on their houses will go a very short way towards the gratification of municipal whims and fancies. It is not a little strange that the only dissident was again Mr. Brett, and that not a single native gentleman supported him in his very proper opposition to such useless expenditure.

That gentleman, too, was the only one who had anything to say on the subject of Mr. Beadon's minute, explanatory of the Government action in the matter of the justices of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa. We have already acknowledged our error in charging his Honour with proceeding in an underhand manner, and with entertaining Machiavellian views in enrolling a certain number of those magistrates among the Calcutta justices. But we are not prepared to admit that our suspicions, however unjust they may in this instance have been, were more unnatural or preposterous than the violent opposition that was raised a few years ago in England against the creation of life peerages. However, we rejoice to find that the force of public opinion is at length being recognised in the highest quarters, and that a lieutenant-governor is no longer in a position to deride or defy the statements of the public press.—Bengal Hurkaru, August 5.

AMUSEMENTS AT SIMLA.

SIMLA, July 31.—The Viceroy and Lady Elgin have returned from their temporary sojourn at Sir Hugh Rose's Villa at Mahaseo, to Simla, but of course no receptions take place yet at Government House, and therefore, as you may suppose, there is but little gaiety; beyond an occasional subscription ball, now and then a theatrical performance by our indefatigable amateurs, and here and there private dinners, and small carpet hops, everything is dull, stale, and unprofitable. The weather precludes all out-door amusements, though the clouds have been somewhat more merciful of late, and have kept at a respectable distance, though never so far out of sight as to give us a lengthened view of the genial sun, or even of the distant hills. You will ask what then are our amusements here during the day; well, I confess they are not very exciting—along through the shops, where we are tempted to purchase half-a-dozen things that we do not require; however, the tradespeople don't want their money, or, at least, at the time of purchase, they loflyly declare there is no occasion for immediate payment, though they never by any chance forget to send in their little bills at the end of the month, and then, when too late, the folly of extravagance is often bitterly repented of. The Raquet Court, that at last is open to the public, but in this gloomy weather a covered court is always dark, and it is not very amusing to see Brown give Jones "a hand and seven aces," which is the usual style of play. Billiard tables, there are plenty of them, but, as Paddy would express it, each are worse than the other. The library and reading-room—ah, me, that is a sore subject with all lovers of literature, for, at present, it presents, like Rome, a sad instance of clerical misgovernment. Serious is our Padre, who presides over our library, and strait-laced are his ideas on the subject of profane literature, hence the sensation novels of Miss Braddon, the heretical works of Dr. Colenso, the stirring tales of Whyte, Melville, and G. Lawrence, and the French (and therefore, of course, atheistical and immoral) romance Les Misérables, are rigidly excluded from our mountain Bibliothèque, whilst stories, such as are likely to rouse the pious feelings—which I suppose lie dormant somewhere in the hearts of Simla society—such as puerile imitations of Tom Brown's School-days, interesting missionary travels, and moral inducing revelations of prison life (the latter a sort of enlarged tract) are the mental pabula that the incoming mail brings for the amusement of the gay and frivolous crowd of Simla lovers of light and enlivening literature; a judicious selection truly! Besides, we are on the point of losing our librarian, he having met with an opportunity, as the housemaids would say, of "bettering himself." It will be long before his successor will have made himself acquainted with the position of the books on the shelves; it will be long before he will have become acquainted with the peculiar idiosyncrasies of each frequenter of our only temple devoted to the muses, and, therefore, long before each will feel comfortable and at home.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIMLA, Aug. 6.—Our volunteer corps was inspected a few days back by Lord George Paget, who expressed his satisfaction at its high state of efficiency; the day, however, was most unfavourable for military evolutions, the rain falling without cessation during the whole parade. Lord Elgin, it is reported, leaves this on the 15th of next month; his camp will be formed at Lahore, whilst he will push up north with only a small establishment. The reasons for this movement have as yet been kept strictly private, but public opinion points to Kashmir as the probable termination of his Excellency's tour. A person of the name of Spiers, a pleader, who has lately been brought into our station by Major Goad, to conduct some of that gallant officer's numerous law-suits, has been debarred from practising in the Simla Court by order of the Deputy-Commissioner, on account of his having more than once presented himself there in a state of inebriation. This is the first specimen of the genus pleader that I recollect seeing up here, and he certainly has not created a favourable opinion of his class; however unfair the principle of ex uno disce omnes may be, still, as long as weak human nature exists, it will be accepted by many as an unfailing criterion. Mr. E. G. Moore, whose affairs some months ago were so minutely detailed in the Mofussil papers, has instituted a suit against Major Goad, for defamation of character, and has laid his damages at Rs. 20,000—a high estimate for a character which can hardly have been improved by six months' incarceration in the Simla gaol. Some highly select and exclusive theatricals are just now on the tapis; the piece selected is Sheridan's Rivals, and several of the ladies who this year grace our station will take part in the performance. The court of inquiry into the late fracas between Captain Hill and Ensign Lawrence is still sitting; public feeling is in favour of the former, as it would seem that the latter endeavoured to force his way into the dak bungalow, on account of his father being a Deputy-Commissioner, and Superintendent of Hill Station!

A CASE OF ATTEMPTED SUICIDE, attended with many circumstances of cruelty and barbarity, took place a short time ago in Central India. The details have only just reached us, but we give them, as they have not yet been made public. The woman had been persuaded to consent to the sacrifice, and proceeded after the usual ceremonies to the Pyre, accompanied by her friends and relatives. Before ascending the pile she was asked to prophesy, the gift of prophecy being, as they suppose, conferred upon those who thus immolate themselves. Her prophecy on this occasion had little originality about it, being the oft-repeated one of the termination of British rule in two years' time. When she was on the top of the pile, and the flames began to ascend, her resolution gave way, and, screaming with terror, she leaped to the ground and tried to run away. The attendants, however, tried to cut her down, and she was struck with sticks, and wounded in two places with swords. She managed, however, to escape from these fiends in human shape, and ran down to the river's edge, where she concealed herself under some bushes. Here she was found, and thrown into the river (the Parwati), where she was drowned. It is satisfactory to know that many of those concerned in this infamous outrage have been apprehended, and are now awaiting trial at Goonah, in the neighbourhood of which station the occurrence took place.

MR. JUSTICE WELLS.—The intention, attributed to the native community of Calcutta, of presenting a testimonial to Mr. Justice Wells on his departure for Europe, is highly honourable to both parties. Only a few months ago there was no Englishman in this country more unpopular than that learned judge, and had he then proposed to retire from the bench the announcement would have been hailed with exultation and delight. A fearless and unsparing foe to all that is mean, sordid, and dishonest, he cares not to soften the severity of his strictures by confining himself to pointless generalisations, or by "making things pleasant" to the many. He is not one of those who cry Peace! peace! where there is no peace. No time-server, or respecter of persons, his language in denouncing a wrong is always clear and unmistakable, though it cannot be denied that his very earnestness occasionally leads him beyond the strict limits of judicial conventionalism. Under the influence of a generous impulse, Mr. Justice Wells occasionally borrows somewhat too much of the player's art, and indulges more than good taste can approve in theatrical action and emphasis. This fault, however, is one of manner, and manner only, and may well be forgiven in consideration of the genuine excellence of his decisions. No man has ever more consistently exerted himself to raise the standard of social morality and commercial honour, than this learned judge has done since he first took his seat on the Calcutta bench. For this reason we trust that the Chamber of Commerce and the Trades' Association will not be backward in promoting the movement that has originated with their native fellow citizens. It is, indeed, not a little to the credit of the latter that they have had the good sense and discernment to appreciate the real worth of the man who so boldly denounced the evil practices that were bringing dishonour upon their national character. They have had the sagacity to perceive that, allowing for some little exaggeration of manner and expression, the judgments delivered by Mr. Justice Wells have been characterised by a clear insight into human nature, an unfeigned liberality of sentiment, and an ardent love of truth and fair dealing. We cannot think that the European residents in this city will be less ready to acknowledge their obligations to a just and upright judge, who has never hesitated to lay his finger upon a blot, or to expose every form of fraud, oppression, and wrong-doing. For ourselves, though we may at times have ventured to demur to isolated points in his decisions, we are not the less sensible that the departure of Sir Mordaunt Wells will be a real loss to India, and especially to Bengal, and such we fancy is the opinion of all who have watched his judicial career. It is not, of course, necessary that one joint testimonial of respect and regret should be presented by the two great divisions of the people of Calcutta. The natives will probably prefer to transmit to their descendants the likeness of one of their truest friends and benefactors, while the Europeans will more readily adopt the good old English custom of giving a public dinner, at which all ranks and classes of men can meet in harmony and with kindly feelings towards one another, united by a common sentiment of esteem and respect for the guest of the evening, who is the guest of one and all. It is pleasant, too, in after-life to look back upon such social gatherings, which each individual somehow imagines he was himself mainly instrumental in bringing about. Forsan et hoc olim meminisse juvabit.—Hurkaru.

THE UNATTACHED.—We (Phœnix) congratulate the Unattached officers on the appearance of two orders, one dating from the War-office, the other by the Commander-in-Chief in India, which would seem to indicate that their prospects are not only not as bad as the appearance of Sir Charles Wood's honorary commission despatch led us some time back to deem them, but as bright as ever. The War-office order was published in Wednesday's Gazette, and ran that Ensign Peter Gill, on the Unattached Indian Establishment, was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant on the Indian Establishment, "dated 22nd May, 1863." Are we to consider this promotion a practical reversal of Sir Charles Wood's honorary commission order? At any rate it is the first instance which has met our eye of an Unattached officer on the Indian Establishment being promoted by the Horse Guards, and seems to imply that henceforth no commissions, or commissioned promotions, are to come from any other quarter, and if this be the ruling, Sir Charles Wood will find, probably has discovered by this, that when he took upon himself to create a new military rank, that of honorary commissioned officer, he went beyond his tether. The Commander-in-Chief's orders to which we refer confirms Ensign T. P. Stevens, Unattached, in the acting command of the 32nd Regiment N.I., at Jhansi. Ensign Stevens was promoted to an Unattached commission in 1859.

CHOLERA IN OUDH.—Since our last issue we regret to say there have been three cases of cholera in H.M.'s 48th Regiment; two have proved fatal, and one is under recovery. Sergeant-Major Daunt, of H.M.'s 10th Hussars, who will be long remembered with regret by the officers and men of his regiment, has succumbed to the disease. H.M.'s 107th Regiment is, we are happy to say, free as yet from this dire visitation. Among the European residents of the civil station there have been a few mild cases that have readily yielded to the timely remedies applied. In the native city the progress of the disease seems to have been, in a great measure, arrested; and in more than one Mohulla the decrease is very considerable. Among the deaths of the past few days we have to record that of Nawab Syud Alli Khan, son and heir of the late Nawab Ruffick Ooddowla, who contested last year the trusteeship of the great Hoseinabad endowment with the Nawabs Mosum and Momtaz-Ooddowla, Bahadurs.—Oudh Gazette, Aug. 6.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.—Sir Charles Wodo has ruled in a despatch, dated 10th June, 1863, and published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 8th August, that Inspectors-general of the Medical Service are to be subject to the five years' rule, but an officer holding the rank of Inspector-general who may be removed from his appointment, will be eligible to be re-appointed for a further similar period subject to the operation of clause 8, V. Royal Warrant 13th June, 1860, which limits their time of service to the age of sixty-five years. Deputy Inspectors-general are not to be subject to the five years' rule pending the settlement of the medical amalgamation.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR arrived at Rajmehal on the 5th, and started at the time appointed in the notification. He reached Caragola on Sunday, the 9th, and went on by palkee dawk to Purneah the same evening. Rajmehal is described as having the appearance of a place deserted before its completion; and whatever trade may pass through it, there are no appearances of any in or near it. It is exceedingly dirty and jungly, and the hotel has been given up.—Hurkaru, Aug. 13.

LAHORE, August 10.—I will premise by alluding briefly to Cubul affairs, and to intelligence connected with the frontier, neither of which are in so satisfactory a state as the lovers of peace and order would desire. You have, doubtless, heard of the murder of the brother of Sher Ali, the new sovereign of Afghanistan, a deed that has caused general excitement throughout the country, though not more so than the murder of so important a personage would naturally lead one to expect. Sirdar Afzul Khan has succeeded in raising a force of upwards of 25,000 men, to whom it is said he gives ten rupees a month each; a very high rate of pay for such tag rag and bobtail as usually form the soldiery of native chiefs. Intelligence equally unfavourable has been received from Ghilzie, in the south, where the border tribes are said to be in a very disordered state, and may at any moment break into acts of violence. The yearly relief of troops in this part of India has just been published, though it only affects very slightly the force located in the Punjab. This, no doubt, may be attributed to the unsettled state of affairs before referred to, for it would scarcely be politic, unsettled as things are just now, to have half the army of the province on the move, and hundreds of miles from where its presence may be required at any moment. A large army of exercise will assemble during the cold weather both at Lahore and at Peshawur. The Exhibition building, and all matters connected with it, are becoming matured. The prize list has recently received some large accessions by gifts from native and Europeans. The Kupportullah Rajah gives several prizes averaging Rs. 500, while his wife, Lady Rumber Sing, gives Rs. 200. I think there is no doubt of the thing proving a decided success, as such projects only do when taken up with the ardour and determination with which this has been distinguished. I am glad to notice that the bona fide produce of regimental workshops of corps situated within the Punjab will be allowed to compete for prizes. The Commander-in-Chief has intimated the fact to the army in a General Order.

DACOITS.—The Delhi Gazette reports that a most daring robbery has been committed by a band of dacoits about nine miles from Agra, on the Muttra road. A bullock-train waggon belonging to a native company was attacked, and twenty thousand rupees in cash fell into the hands of the robbers. The danger of forwarding cash in this way without any guard whatever must always be great, but if people are to be found willing to take the risk of loss in order to save the few rupees that they would be called upon to pay if the money were remitted by draft or under a proper guard, they must even take the consequences of their misplaced economy. Our contemporary states that a very favourite mode of remitting cash on the part of the native bankers, "is to sew up a heap of gold-mohurs in coarse canvas, without any other packing, and send them off to take their chance." If this is really their practice, they have only themselves to thank for any mischance that may befall them.—Bengal Hurkaru.

OPPOSITION TO THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The Times of India, which has done such good service in organising public opinion against the injurious monopoly enjoyed by this leviathan company, makes the following important announcement:—"Some disappointment is being expressed that advantage was not taken of the late excitement in Bombay to start a rival company. We violate no confidence, we believe, when we say that arrangements are already far advanced for the establishment of a rival line. The authorities of the presidency have represented, we believe, the absolute necessity of some competition to the Secretary of State. The gentlemen who were telling us so confidently a few months ago that the P. and O. Company had secured the new contract, will learn probably, at no distant date, that it has been given to another, at the express recommendation of the authorities of this presidency. But for the information placed at our disposal on this subject, we should have striven hard to get a company started in Bombay itself." If the Calcutta and Burmah Steam Navigation Company would make arrangements for running their vessels between this and Suez, they would double their capital before a more efficient line of boats could be got into those waters. A few years hence and it will be difficult to get people to believe that the P. and O. Company enjoyed the overland passenger traffic of India for so many years without efficient opposition starting up. A project of opposition got up now would be as safe a speculation as if guaranteed ten per cent. by Government. If the boats to carry passengers were here, and the company felt disinclined to persevere, the P. and O. Company would be likely to offer to buy their fleet at a handsome premium. In fact, it would be almost impossible for the projectors of a speculation of the kind to lose money by it. What has become of the company the Englishman spoke of some short time back? We shall be glad to hear there exists a prospect of its being soon at work.—Phoenix, Aug. 11.

A MUSSULMAN OPPONENT OF BISHOP COLENSO.—Bishop Colenso, besides the exposure of his shallow scholarship by the learned Jews of London, has met a Mussulman antagonist in the person of Syud Ahmud Khan, the principal Sudder Ameen of Ghazee-pore, the introduction to whose remarkable Commentary on the Holy Bible we lately reviewed. The Syud confines himself, in the specimen of his Commentary on the Pentateuch which he has sent us, to a refutation of the Bishop's arithmetical objections to the increase of the numbers of the Israelites and the ages of Judah and Joseph in Egypt. The epigrammatist who so cleverly satirized the bishop's defeat by the heathen Zulus, has a good subject in his encounter by the Mussulman Syud. What would Grotius have said to it?—Friend of India, Aug. 13.

FUTTEHGHUR, August 12.—The heavy rains, of which I spoke in my last, have ceased, and we are now only visited by occasional showers; there still remains some chance, therefore, of the crops recovering themselves from the effects of the late flood. The young officer who has been under arrest for some time at Shahjehanpore for certain indiscretions, has been permitted to resign the service by sale of his commission. I had great hopes that the Commander-in-Chief would have taken a more lenient view of the case; but he seems to be one of those who hold the opinion, that they who are deemed capable and fit to have commissions in her Majesty's army should be made responsible for their conduct and actions. Lieut. Colonel Hinde passed through here yesterday en route for Calcutta, whither he has been summoned to give evidence in favour of the plaintiff in the famous action for defamation of character—Burney v. Eyre. The case comes on for hearing on the 17th inst. It may be expected that some curious disclosures will be made, not over pleasing to the feelings, or beneficial to the reputation, of several concerned in this extraordinary trial. I have not yet heard whether Brigadier Macpherson at Agra has been subpoenaed; but Lieut.-Colonel Willis, Dr. Wright, and Dr. Wall, H.M.'s 38th Foot; Captain Ward, Major of Brigade, from Dinapore; and Major Turner, Deputy Judge Advocate General, Benares Division, have all to attend at the High Court. Those who are at all cognisant of the principal features of the case can have little difficulty in prognosticating in whose favour judgment will be given. Should the present suit be decided in favour of Major-General Burney, it is predicted that several others will follow; at all events, it is pretty certain that an action, in which several persons will be concerned, will at once be instituted for combination. There is a rumour that Mr. Tyrrell, Bengal Civil Service, an assistant to our magistrate and collector, is likely to be nominated assistant secretary to his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces.

FORGERY.—In Wednesday's Englishman there was published the report of an appeal case tried before three Puisne judges, the Hon. S. Seton-Karr, the Hon. Shumboonath Pundit, and the Hon. A. A. Roberts. The first-named judge was in favour of ordering a new trial, on the ground that the evidence adduced did not bear out the charge of forgery on which the prisoner was convicted by Mr. Pierce Taylor, Sessions Judge of East Burdwan. The forgery consisted in adding a foot-note to a genuine order for the refund of stamp-duty, but Mr. Seton-Karr was of opinion that it was only an "irregular" proceeding, inasmuch as it had not the judge's seal and signature attached to it. That the prisoner was guilty of cheating was admitted, but the judge held that the offence did not amount to forgery. Fortunately for the cause of justice, the two other judges were of a different opinion, and correctly maintained that the seal and signature of the judge were not required for a foot-note, but that the act of adding a foot-note to a certificate for refund of the value of a stamp, and thereby authorising a person not named in the certificate—for those who were named had been dead for some time—to receive the money, was indeed a fabrication of an instrument, and, consequently, a forgery. For Mr. Seton-Karr's private satisfaction we would refer him to 2 East, P.L., c. 19, sect. 4, p. 835, where it is clearly laid down that "not only the fabrication of the whole of a written instrument, but a fraudulent insertion, alteration, or even erasure of a letter, in any material part of a true instrument, giving a new operation to it, is a forgery, although it be afterwards executed by another person ignorant of the deceit. And the fraudulent application of a true signature to a false instrument, for which it was not intended, or vice versa, will also be a forgery."—Bengal Hurkaru, Aug. 8.

H.M.'s 77TH REGIMENT.—The projected movement of H.M.'s 77th up the Grand Trunk Road did not take place, owing, we believe, to a difficulty in obtaining carriage. On Wednesday, the head quarters of the Regiment, consisting of the right wing, moved about a mile and a-half in a south-westerly direction from Mhowserai. The left wing followed the next day. A little improvement took place in the health of the regiment during Wednesday and Thursday. Two cases of cholera, we hear, proved amenable to treatment, so it is to be hoped that there is some modification in the virulence of the disease. Yet this appears only to have been a deceptive lull, for three cases of cholera were reported on Thursday night, one of which proved fatal the following morning. Reports from the detachment which went over to Jhoozie inform us that they also are not yet free from the disease. One case of cholera occurred on Thursday and terminated fatally the same day. We understand that it is in contemplation, now that the march up the Grand Trunk Road has been countermanded, to send the regiment up the Line, as we reported some days ago, some fifty or sixty miles, and bring them down by short stages. We understand that the movement of this regiment into camp is condemned by every officer belonging to the regiment, including the medical men. The Commander-in-Chief, in opposition to all protestations, is determined to try his favourite experiment—an experiment which has already cost the regiment about fifty or sixty lives from cholera, fever and other maladies; and so long as the men are exposed to the heavy rains which are usual during the months of August and September, so long will deaths occur from various causes, in addition to cholera, and which would not have occurred had the men remained in their barracks. We do hope that the notice we have taken of the subject so frequently of late will have the effect of altering the determination of the Chief, and result in the housing of the men before their numbers are further thinned.—Allahabad Gazette, Aug. 8.

THE 24TH N.I.—We hear that the 24th N.I. have received intimation that they are to march from Agra next month to proceed to Sealkote, there to form part of the escort of the Viceroy, whose camp will be formed at that place.—Delhi Gazette, Aug. 18.

THE HIGH COURT.—We hear that Sir Mor-daunt Wells proposes to submit to the Chief Justice a revised scale of fees for the better remuneration of the attorneys of the High Court, the present scale in his opinion not being sufficiently remunerative to the profession.—Hindu Patriot.

AFGHANISTAN.—It is evident that matters in Afghanistan are approaching a crisis. Ameen Khan, one of the late Ameer's younger sons, has openly rebelled and is fortifying Candahar, and it is pretty certain that Shareef Khan has resolved to follow his example. Shere Allee Khan will find it more difficult than he supposed to get to Cabool at all.—Delhi Gazette, Aug. 6.

STAFF SALARIES.—The Secretary of State has ruled that henceforth no officer acting in an appointment is to receive more than one-half of the staff salary till he has been acting six months. This rule applies to all cases including staff officers on furlough under rules 9 and 13 of G. O. No. 1,150, dated 16th November, 1854, and is applicable to the three Presidencies, but does not affect any in whose cases full allowances have been actually passed.—Delhi Gazette, Aug. 8.

THE OFFICE OF CONTROLLER OF SALT CHOWKIES, which has all along been held by a senior covenanted civil servant, has at last been finally abolished. A portion of the establishment attached to that office has been retained at present for the purpose of closing the accounts, and of making over charge of the records, &c., to the Inspector-general of Police.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.—Dr. Bonavia, of Lucknow, reports that the natives of Oudh begin to see the usefulness and value of the New Orleans cotton, and are not only willing to sow it, but also to pay for the seed. Mr. J. A. Crawford exhibited, at the last meeting of the Agricultural Society, specimens of cotton grown in the French colony of New Caledonia. The soil of the island, whether from its being naturally rich or from the equable temperature which prevails there, has a wonderful effect on other articles grown there. Indian corn from American seed produces plants which bear nine heads of corn, growing in three clusters of three each.

DR. COTTON.—The Ceylon Examiner states that the Metropolitan of India purposes visiting Ceylon about the end of the year. Dr. Cotton will first proceed to Tinnevely and take Colombo on his way to Bombay, returning to Calcutta by Beyer and Madras.

FUTTEGHUR CHURCH.—A correspondent of the Bombay Times says the steeple to the Futteghur Memorial Church is fast approaching completion. Government contributed Rs. 2,000 to the work, and the rest of the money was raised partly by subscription and partly from the fine levied on the rebellious city. The church is built close to the well in which the Christians who were murdered were thrown, and from designs drawn by Captain Watts, of the Bengal Engineers. The structure is an ornament to the station.

JUBBULPORE, August 3.—It is generally believed here that Colonel E. K. Elliott will succeed Mr. Yule in the Hyderabad residentship—the latter officer proceeding to England, sans doute heart-sick of his office.

CHOLERA is said to be raging in the districts of Behar and Shahabad to a fearful extent. It has also broken out in the Patna gaoi.

MADRAS.

THE BANK OF MADRAS.

At a special meeting of the directors of the Bank of Madras, held on Thursday, the 23rd day of July, 1863, the following resolutions, among others, were adopted:—

1. That the capital of the bank be increased by the issue of seven hundred and fifty new shares of rupees one thousand each.
2. That those be offered to the proprietors at a premium of 50 per cent.; say at rupees 1,500 per share of rupees 1,000—in the proportion of one quarter share to each holder of one original share.
10. That the premium on the shares taken up by the proprietors, as well as any profit realised on unclaimed and forfeited shares, be added to the Reserve Fund.

Without entering into a discussion as to the propriety, or otherwise, of a Joint Stock Banking Company, by a general vote of its shareholders, resolving to increase its capital and rest fund (or rather what in such a case might more appropriately be designated "subscribed reserved fund"), we cannot but consider the course adopted by the directors of the Madras Bank as highly questionable and impolitic. In the first place, the power to increase capital in the mode proposed may be doubted. The section in the Bank Act contains the following proviso:—"Provided always that the capital, &c., shall not exceed (so many) shares of Rs. 1,000 each." In the next place the Madras Bank is a Government Bank, the solvency of which is guaranteed by Government to the extent, we believe, of half its capital, and the Government holds, as a partner, a large amount of shares. Should the resolution in question be approved of by the Government, it is presumed that they will also accept the new shares at the proposed premium of 50 per cent., to be paid for, of course, out of public revenue. But why, for such a purpose as this, are the people to be taxed, and saddled with the payment of 50 per cent. on the shares, so to be taken and held by the Government, when the very same object may be gained by observance of the usual rule, namely, that of issuing new shares at par, to be first offered to the shareholders, and on non-acceptance of any portion by them, then to the public at the market rate. Instead of issuing one share in four, one in two should be issued, according to the amount of capital required.

We can understand the financial policy which induces a Government to apply its surplus funds in reduction of its own liabilities, by purchasing Government stock. The Supreme Government at Calcutta, aware of the benefit secured by such a course, has, for some time past, made very large purchases, chiefly of Four per Cent. paper, at prices ranging from 94 to 96; and, by the last Bank of Bengal returns, it would appear that State funds to the extent of upwards of a million are now invested in Government securities; and it is not improbable that the investments made in Bombay, during the last few days, in the Five and a-Half and Four per Cents. have also been made, through an indirect channel, on the Bank of Bombay account, for Government. But the course adopted by the directors of the Madras Bank tends to a very different result; it entails a most unnecessary and positive loss on the public; it savours of speculation and stock jobbery, and that, too, in the bank's own shares; and we trust that the Government, being a party interested, will, without hesitation, restrain and discountenance such proceedings, and that the shareholders will unanimously withhold their assent.—Times of India, Aug. 18.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ASSAULT.—We see that an officer has been severely assaulted at Koregaum. The Patell of the village stood tamely by and saw the unarmed officer, bound hand and foot, kicked and cuffed, by a gang of cowardly ruffians, and never moved a finger to interfere. One month's imprisonment, and a fine of 50 rupees, have been considered a sufficient punishment for the poltroon. A month's imprisonment, and 50 lashes, on the bare back, every Saturday morning, would have been the sentence we would have passed upon the brute. But, of course, we ought to have no opinion—not having studied the Penal Code.—Deccan Herald, Aug. 17.

SUDDEN DEATH.—We regret to hear of the sudden death at Hyderabad, on the 29th July, of Dr. Allanby, H.M.'s 95th Regiment, from epilepsy. The deceased was buried with military honours on the 30th.—Our Paper, Aug. 7.

RETIREMENTS.—It is rumoured that Colonels Birdwood and Ludlow, of the Engineers, the Secretary and the Deputy-Secretary to Government in the D.P.W., will shortly retire from the Service, accepting the bonus held out by Sir C. Wood. In this contingency, we understand, that Colonels Orr and Boileau will succeed, respectively, to the above appointments. Some three or four other retirements in the corps, by members of the Engineer Retiring Fund, are also spoken of; but we have not learnt the precise particulars.—Athenaeum, July 30.

ALMOST ALL THE NOTABILITIES OF MADRAS are away at Bangalore, the Shevaroy, the Neilgherries, or the Western coast—some on duty, more on recreation, and a few in attendance on the Governor and Commander-in-Chief, whose movements in Mysore are regarded with some interest. The Bishop leaves this in a week or two on a tour to the north of this Presidency (he visited Malabar, Travancore, and Tinnevely last year), and he will probably be away five months.

THE COTTON PRIZE.—Again there is no competition for the cotton prize. Last year the prize Rs. 10,000, was gained without any practical opposition by Messrs. Fisher and Co., of Salem; and the Chamber of Commerce, imagining that the amount of the prize had possibly deterred small planters from competing for it, obtained the consent of the Government to their recommendation that the sum should be divided, and eight prizes be offered, namely, two of Rs. 2,000, three of Rs. 1,000, two of Rs. 500 for the best quality and largest quantity of cotton from country seed grown upon any one estate or holding, and one prize of Rs. 1,500, and a second of Rs. 500 for the best quality and largest quantity of cotton from foreign seed grown in this Presidency, and delivered for shipment before the 1st of July. Government made the amended regulations known far and wide by means of the district gazettes; but only one competitor, Messrs. Fisher and Co., has appeared, and this firm will, I presume, carry off the first prize for country cotton, and the first prize for foreign cotton which Government promise to offer, Rs. 10,000, during each successive season for three years; but with the unsatisfactory results of this and the past year's prizes, it is to be hoped that the Rs. 10,000 of public money designed for next season's prize will be devoted to a better purpose. The supply of cotton promises to be on a larger scale in this Presidency than in any former year. Perhaps, in apprehension of an early decline in prices, planters are using extraordinary means to send their cotton down to market early; but bearing this in mind, the crop of this season is roughly estimated at 160,000 bales. The demand continues to be very active, but there are only three or four buyers to any extent; and the want of screwing facilities has been felt as a serious drawback in pushing the cotton forward. Our roads are unusually full of shipping, and freights incline downwards. The import market is still supplied periodically from Calcutta, the direct imports from England being unusually small this year. Sugar and indigo, two of our chief exports, are scarcely heard of this season, the prospect of both staples being so bad—what with enormous stocks at home, and prices ruling which exhibit little or no margin above the lay-down cost of the articles. So Madras, commercially, is very dull at the present time, and until the much-wished for termination of the American war, there is little prospect of improvement, I fear.

H.M.'s 68TH REGIMENT.—A Madras contemporary announces that H.M.'s 68th Regiment, at present stationed at Rangoon, will be immediately relieved by a regiment to be sent out direct from England. Hitherto the climate of Rangoon has been considered highly dangerous for troops just arrived from England, and the relief has invariably been selected from regiments who have become acclimatised. The medical authorities have, however, reported that "the climate of Rangoon has been now found to admit of European troops being safely sent there direct from Europe," and hence the alteration.—Hurkaru.

HIGH PRICES OF PROVISIONS IN THE DECCAN.—The Deccan Herald bears that Government, at the recommendation of Mr. Hart, Revenue Commissioner Southern Division, have ordered that, owing to the present high prices of provisions, an increase of 20 per cent. to salaries of Rs. 100 and downwards be made from the 1st instant in the establishment of the Revenue Commissioner and of the Poona Collector. The whole question of subordinate salaries will be put on a new footing when Sir C. Trevelyan's re-organisation of establishments begins. There will be fewer men, and they will be better paid.

DRAINAGE OF MADRAS.—We learn from a Madras contemporary that the Government of that Presidency has appointed Captain H. Tulloch, of the Royal Engineers, to prepare, with as little delay as possible, a report on the drainage of Madras generally, and to submit plans and estimates for improving the same. The attention of the Government has for some time past been directed to the defective drainage of that city; and both the Health Officer and the Municipal Commissioners have submitted special reports, urging the necessity of taking immediate steps to improve the existing means of drainage, which are described as execrable. The medical authorities at Madras attribute much of the sickness which annually prevails during the hot season to the noxious vapours emitted from the drains, which are unable to carry off the filth thrown into them, in consequence of their being constructed at "nearly a dead level."

BOMBAY.

BILL FOR RELIEF OF INSOLVENT DEBTORS IN THE PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY.

We observe from the Government Gazette that the Honourable Mr. Frere has placed before the Legislative Council, the "Bill for Relief of Insolvent Debtors in the Presidency of Bombay, and for amending certain points in the Law of Debtor and Creditor," which was referred to in the President's speech, at the opening of the present sittings at Poona, and in the discussions which followed. We have not yet read the Bill itself, but the "statement of objects and reasons" by Mr. Frere, is a lucid and informing piece of writing, and makes out a good case for a Bill, whether the Bill laid before the Council be the right thing or not—a point on which we must reserve judgment till we have considered its contents.

A case, too, seems to be made out for immediate legislation on this subject in some way, for an Insolvency Act must be re-enacted for Sind; in consequence, it appears, of "the insolvency jurisdiction established originally by the Commissioner" having ceased to be exercised since doubts arose as to its legality under the recent changes in the constitution of the courts of the province. The author of the "statement" says, "as an insolvency law requires to be re-enacted for Sind, the opportunity should not be lost of introducing a similar measure in other parts of the Presidency, and hence the present draft of a general law applicable equally to all the districts under the Government of Bombay;" an opinion in which most persons who have considered the subject in its general bearing will be quite disposed to agree. Mr. Frere further states that, "in drafting the Bill, simplicity of procedure and an effective relief of the honest debtor, have been the objects chiefly aimed at," and surely it would be impossible to aim at better objects as regards this or any other Bill that may be introduced into the Council. There has hardly been a greater evil connected with the English administration of justice in India than the introduction of the elaborate forms and pleadings that used to prevail. Sudder judges often made themselves look what judges ought not to be, when they gave elaborate judgments according to English rules, in bygone days when English law itself, admirable no doubt when you got it, was so overlaid with specialities and forms, that when decisions after long delays were given, law was seen to be one thing and justice another. This has been reformed considerably, and we trust the day is not distant when in this country, at all events, it will be "reformed altogether."—Bombay Gazette, Aug. 21.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHURCH CLOCK DONATION.—Mr. Cowasjee Jehangir has (says the Bombay Gazette) placed the sum of seven thousand five hundred rupees at the disposal of the Rev. Mr. Maule, to pay the cost of erecting an illuminated clock on the tower of St. John's Church, Colaba. He has further expressed his willingness to furnish money to the extent of twenty-five thousand rupees towards completing the church. Meanwhile the matter has been referred to Government. We cannot but admire the munificence of Mr. Cowasjee in this, as in so many other of his public benefactions, but we think it is something of a reflection on Christian liberality, to say the least, that a Parsi's liberality should also be needed in such a matter. The offer referred to by our contemporary is not quite correctly stated. It was made in the following shape:—

To the CHIEF SECRETARY to the Government of Bombay.

SIR,—I understand that sufficient funds have been raised lately for the completion of St. John's Church in Colaba, with the exception of the sum required for the steeple. The Church is built, I believe, as a memorial of the English soldiers who fell in the Cabul war; and although native gentlemen have not been invited to subscribe thereto, it occurs to me as possible that Government will not refuse a donation from me for the purpose of erecting the spire.

I am told the steeple will be an important landmark to mariners, and on this ground alone I should gladly defray the cost of its erection, while I cannot but remember also, that many thousands of my own countrymen perished in the disastrous Afghan war.

I think it very desirable also, as there is no public timepiece in Colaba, that an illuminated clock should be placed in the tower; and I beg, therefore, to propose that a clock and spire should be provided, and the cost defrayed jointly by the Government and myself in equal proportions. In making this proposal I assume that the cost of both will not exceed 15,000 rupees (fifteen thousand), of which amount I am willing to subscribe 7,500 rupees (seven thousand five hundred).—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

August 8, 1863. COWASJEE JEHANGIR.

We congratulate the Rev. Mr. Maule very heartily on having at last achieved by his perseverance what his predecessors either never attempted or failed in attempting. Owing to this gentleman's exertions it is understood that the whole 50,000 rupees or 60,000 rupees required to complete the church have been at last obtained. It would be a very gratifying arrangement to the residents of Colaba if Mr. Maule were to be confirmed in the appointment in which he is at present acting. He has established a claim to the chaplaincy of St. John's, and has his labours are very acceptable to the people, the Lord Bishop of Bombay, with whom we suppose the matter rests, could hardly do better than confirm Mr. Maule. We need hardly say that Mr. Maule has had nothing to do with this notice, either directly or indirectly. He is an earnest, energetic, and good man, and the sort of man required in the important charge he fills. We trust he may see the Church completed in his hands, and may have health and strength to minister for many years to the congregation that worships within its walls.—Times of India, Aug. 24.

THE "SALTSETTE," which arrived at Bombay on the morning of the 10th inst., with the Overland Mail of the 18th July, reported having experienced very heavy weather between Bombay and Aden on the homeward voyage, so much so that it took her eleven and a-half days to perform a journey which is usually accomplished in nine or ten at this season of the year. In addition to the death of two second-class passengers—one from apoplexy two days after leaving Bombay, and one from liver complaint while coaling at Aden—Mr. Hacker, chief officer of the vessel, was struck with paralysis, and had to be sent home on arrival at Suez. On her return voyage the Saltsette was again overtaken by misfortune. After a capital run down the Red Sea, she sailed from Aden on the 1st inst., made 280 miles the first day, and there was every prospect of her arriving in Bombay on the evening of the 6th, or the morning of the 7th at latest. Some slight repairs connected with the governor wheel of the engines having been completed, the ship was stopped for the purpose of adjusting it. When the machinery was again set in motion, the engines revolved at a frightful speed, and it at once became evident there was something wrong with the propeller. The engines were once more stopped, and it was then ascertained that the connection between the screw shaft and the propeller was broken, causing the shaft to revolve without the screw. This was off Cape Gardafui, at three o'clock in the afternoon of Monday the 8th, and about one and a-half days' sail from Aden. Fortunately there were spare yards on board, and all hands were immediately set to work to rig them, by means of which they proceeded under sail and arrived in harbour yesterday morning—nearly two days within contract time. This not only speaks well for the sailing qualities of the Saltsette, but also for the energy and determination displayed by all concerned.—Times of India.

A DAK BUNGALOW AT HISSAR.—There is a dak bungalow here for the accommodation (save the mark!) of travellers; and, on circumstances prevented my civil, military, and police friends from displaying their hospitality towards me, I had to take up my abode in the bungalow. It is a pretty good building for one family, but has not a door which will close, and not a chair to its name. A person styled Akashnath made his appearance, and offered to supply me with anything I might fancy. So I ordered "sumptuous and opulent"

He grinned, and said that beef was not procurable, but that mullin churp was; and seeing some moorghees courting my society, and hopping, in their lightness of heart, into the verandah, I thought it would be barbarous to take advantage of their innocence, so I ordered a churp. I asked for tea; the reply was "tea not got." I supplied the want, and called for a teapot, the reply was, "teapot toot gya." I suggested the propriety of a cup to make it in, and was surprised to learn that some wretch of a traveller had smashed all the crockery only a week before! I called for a corkscrew—"corkscrew not got"—and, in despair, I knocked the cork and neck off a bottle of Bass, and drank it out of my Etna. I had to sling a punkah, which kept off the mosquitoes; but there were worse enemies below the bedding than above it; and as for flies!—well, they did not appear until it was time to rise, so I will say nothing about them. When I got up I took a look at the "public room." In two corners, near the roof, I observed some of the plaster removed, and the wall well pitted with something like small pox. On inquiry, I found that not small pox, but small shot fired by some traveller (probably the one who smashed the crockery) at some sparrows had marked the wall! And several of the same interesting specimens of Indian birds, apparently born and bred there, sat perched upon the cornice near the spot. Altogether it is a most comfortless place, surrounded by high grass, suggestive of all sorts of snakes, and with nothing to recommend it. In my despair I wrote to the Post-office Baboo for assistance. He replied that the khunsama was a "demmed reskel," and that everything in profusion was coming from Delhi as soon as the rains would obligingly cease; that he was not to blame, but that the tehseldar had built the doors on contract, and that the rain (which appears to be answerable for every calamity in Hurreenah) had warped the timber!

PARSEE LIBERALITY.—The Bombay Gazette relates that Mr. Sorabjee Pestonjee Framjee, who, like all the Bombay merchants, has earned a large fortune in the cotton trade, has distributed the sum of two lakhs and thirty-five thousand rupees among his friends and clerks.

EXPERIMENTS FOR PRESERVING STONE.—The Government Gazette contains a report from Capt. D. Thomson as to the result of experiments made with Ransome's patent for preserving stone. The solutions were applied to three crumbling tombstones in Malligaum. The silicate of lime appeared to thoroughly fill the pores of the stones. The prepared surfaces were everywhere hard and did not yield to the chisel, whereas the unprepared parts yielded readily.

HUTS v. BARRACKS.—The long disputed question as to whether huts or ordinary barracks are best adapted for the accommodation of troops at Sanatoriums, is likely to be satisfactorily disposed of by the experiment about to be tried at the Hill station of Mount Abo. An outlay of forty-one thousand rupees has been sanctioned by the Bombay Government for the erection of a number of detached cottages or huts, each to contain five men. Increased ventilation, an absence of overcrowding, and comparative privacy, are the chief objects aimed at by Major Arthur, political superintendent of Palanploor, from whose design the works are to be carried out. The experiment, for such it really is, cannot be watched without interest by all who have the welfare of our soldiers at heart, and if the result should prove half as successful as is expected, Sir William Mansfield, under whose auspices it is being tried, will have no cause to regret the prominent part that he has taken in inducing the Government to sanction the experimental outlay.—Hurkaru, Aug. 13.

MORE LIBERALITY.—We are glad to learn that Mr. Cowasjee (Jehanghir) Readymoney has made known his intentions to erect forty ornamental drinking fountains throughout different parts of the Island of Bombay. Drinking fountains are a great desiderata, especially in the hot weather, and will doubtless prove a great boon to the poorer classes of the community.

Military Letters.

INSPECTOR-GENERALSHIP OF HOSPITALS.

No. 115a.—The following copy of a milv. despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. or State for India, No. 214, dated June 10, is published:—

India Office, London, June 10.

Military.—No. 214.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord.—Para. 1. In a letter [No. 43, dated March 5] lately received from the Govt. of Madras, the inquiry is made whether any limit is to be placed to the tenure of the office of insp. gen. of hospitals.

2. The Govt. of Madras point out that, under para. 8 of the Royal Warrant of Jan. 13, 1860, insp. gens. and dep. insp. gens. are placed on the retired list on attaining the age of 65 years.

3. With reference to the G.O. by the Gov. gen., No. 964 July 31, 1857, they observe that, if an officer is allowed now to hold the office of insp. gen. until retirement, the interests of other medical officers must be injuriously affected; while, on the other hand, it does not appear to them how an inspector general of hospitals, with substantive rank under the warrant, but of short service, can revert to other duties to qualify for the highest rates of pension, as provided by para. 9 of the G.O. by the Gov. gen.

4. They are of opinion, however, that the interests of the public service will be best promoted by limiting the tenure of the appt. of insp. gen. to 5 years.

5. Under the instructions conveyed in the despatch from the Court of Directors, No. 92 of June 10, 1857, the tenure of office by the Director gen. and Insp. gen. was limited to five years.

6. The several Inspector-generals, under the operation of the Royal Warrant of 13th January, 1860, hold the offices styled under the former organisation "Director-general" and "Inspector-general," and I consider that the rule limiting their tenure of office to five years should be made still applicable to these officers.

7. An officer holding the rank of Inspector-General, who may be removed from his appointment under the rule, will be eligible, at the discretion of the Government, for employment for a further similar period, subject always to the operation of clause 8 of the Royal Warrant of 13th January, 1860.

8. The deputy Inspector-generals of Her Majesty's Indian service represent the superintending Surgeons of the former organisation; and I do not consider it necessary, pending the settlement of the question of the amalgamation of the British and Indian medical services, to apply any limit beyond that laid down in clause 8 of the Royal Warrant to the tenure of appointment by these officers, superintending surgeons, under the former organisation, not having been subjected to any rule of this nature.

9. With regard to the difficulty suggested by the Government of Madras as to the manner in which an officer of the rank of inspector-general, but of short service, can revert to other duties to qualify for the higher rates of pension, I believe such occasions will be rare.

10. The circumstance of such officers having been preferred to their seniors in the service for promotion would probably induce the Government to re-employ them on a vacancy occurring in a higher position; in the meantime, if not in a position to retire from the service, they must remain unemployed.—I have, &c., (Signed) C. Wood.

Deputation Allowances.

Financial Dept., Fort William, July 25.—No. 3,390.

—Resolution.—The Hon. the President in Council observes that, under the financial resolution of May 13, 1862, covenanted officers who entered the general department of account before that date are allowed to retain their privileges, and, therefore, when such covenanted officers are appointed to act for other officers in the department, they are entitled to draw deputation allowances on the same terms as those allowed to covenanted officers in other branches of the service.

But this rule cannot be held to apply to covenanted officers entering the financial department after that date, nor does it seem proper to preserve a separate rule for calculating the acting allowances of uncovenanted officers in the department, as by the resolution above-mentioned all distinction between the covenanted and uncovenanted service was abolished.

In considering what would be a suitable standard to introduce under these circumstances, his Honor in Council observes that, as the acting allowance rules of the covenanted service are based upon a simple consistent principle, they may with advantage be taken as the basis of the rules which shall be applicable to all the officers of the financial department other than those specially noticed in the 1st paragraph.

His Honor in Council desires accordingly that the following rules be observed in future:—

1st.—No officer will receive any deputation allowance for officiating for another officer in the same class as himself.

2nd.—An officer appointed to officiate for another officer in a higher class than his own will draw, from the date of his taking charge, irrespective of any saving from the salary of the appointment in which he officiates, the full salary of his own appointment, with an additional allowance at the rate of 20 per cent. on the mean between the minimum and maximum salary of the class to which the permanent incumbent belongs, provided the total allowance to be so drawn shall not exceed the minimum salary of the higher class in which the officer is appointed to officiate.

3rd.—When the officer thus appointed to act is in the receipt of the maximum salary of his own grade he will receive no additional allowance on his first appointment to act, inasmuch as the maximum salary of any class is always the same as the minimum of that immediately above it; but he will be eligible, whilst officiating, to the yearly increase of salary allowed to those permanently appointed to the higher grade.

The above rules will also apply to officers not permanently belonging to the department but who may be appointed to officiate temporarily in appointments in the department, such, for instance, as clerks in offices of pay, audit, or account, who, though not in the classified grades, are frequently appointed to act during the absence on leave of classified officers in the lower grades of the account and audit departments.

Police Dept., Fort William, Aug. 5.—No. 3,567.—

The present rules regarding deputation allowances to officers of police having been found to be unsuitable, his Honour the President in Council resolves that Resolutions Nos. 628g and 20g, dated Sept. 30, 1862, and Jan. 8, 1863, be rescinded.

His Honour in Council is also pleased to determine, that, in accordance with the principle of the Order No. 8,390, dated July 25, 1863, in the Financial Department, there shall be one uniform rate of acting allowances for covenanted and uncovenanted officers of police, and that no acting allowances shall be granted to officers of police officiating for other officers in another grade of the same class as their own.

Abolition of the Thuggee Department.

No. 547.—H.E. the Viceroy and Governor general having resolved that the Thuggee Department shall be abolished as a special agency in British territory, and that the duties of the department shall be transferred to the police in British territories, the Hon. the Lieut. Governor has issued the necessary instructions to the police department.

But his Honour cannot give effect to the orders of the Supreme Government, closing the operations of the Thuggee Department as a special agency in the Punjab, without placing on record his high appreciation of the services rendered by the officers of that department, in hunting down and eradicating a class of offenders whose atrocities were the terror of the country in the time of Sikh rule, and caused alarm to the public safety even during the early days of British supremacy in the Punjab.

Since the commencement of the operations of the Thuggee department in the Punjab, 1,243 cases of murder by Thugs have been recorded. The number of associates in crime denounced by approvers is 1,839. Of this number, 729 have been arrested and sentenced to imprisonment or death. The remainder have been released on security, or have died.

Nearly all the most notorious Thugs, leaders of bands, or influential men, have been brought to justice, and the few who are still at large will be hunted down by the regular police; for, although the special Thuggee agency is abolished, it is not to be supposed that the efforts of Government to put down this crime will be one whit relaxed.

For the very satisfactory results thus enumerated the Lieut. Governor ascribes great praise to the unwearied exertion of the several officers who have so energetically presided over the department.

The late Mr. H. Brereton, c.s., was the first to attempt to cope systematically with the crime of Thuggee and Dacoities in the Punjab. He was followed by Colonels Sleeman, Graham, Herry R. Lawrence, and Major McAndrew. To the valuable services rendered by these officers and their subordinates the Punjab province is indebted for its riddance of the worst class of murderers, and for the present general safety from systematic violent crime.

The Oude Claims of Indian Officers.

INDIAN OFFICE, SEPT. 16.

The Secretary of State for India in Council has received a despatch from the Government of India in the Legislative department, dated 3rd of August, No. 12, 1863, containing the following notification:—
 Foreign Dept., No. 136, dated the 12th of May, 1863.
 —Notice is hereby given to the parties named (Capt. Frith, Mr. Grant, Major Darrel, Major Webber, Capt. Edwardes, Mr. Clarke, and Mr. Prendergast), or their heirs or representatives, that a commission for the investigation of the claims preferred by them against the late native Government of Oudh, will sit at Lucknow as soon as possible after the 1st of Feb., 1864, before which they should produce such evidence as may exist in support of their claims.

E. C. BAYLEY,

Officiating Secretary to the Government of India.

RELIGIOUS INTERFERENCE.

THE case of the missionary capture of Hemnath Bhoose, the Hindu Christian, created a sensation throughout British India that has not even yet quite subsided; but if those Englishmen who love perfect freedom, political and religious, were shocked at Dr. Duff's interference with a Hindu father's desire to teach his son to adhere to the religion of his ancestors, and to keep him free from the contagion of a foreign creed, they ought, in strict fairness, to be equally ready to condemn the late proceedings of "a certain consul at Bombay," who, it seems, according to the local Saturday Review, arrested a German, and, with the aid of the police, forcibly carried him on board a ship to save his soul from perdition, because he had been persuaded to adopt the creed of Islam. It is true that we have little reason to believe in the man's sincerity or disinterestedness. Perhaps his poverty and not his will consented, for the Moulvies are said to have promised him a bribe of three hundred rupees, if he would openly embrace Mahomedanism. Be this as it may, a man's secret or supposed motive in professing a new religion is not a question for "certain consuls" or police detectives to decide, and if the German Mahomedan were to take his case into a court of law, he might make pretty sure of obtaining some redress for a gross interference with his individual liberty of thought and action.

POLYGAMY IN INDIA.

It appears that there are considerable differences of opinion amongst the editors of newspapers in India respecting the prudence or propriety of attempting to legislate at once against so old a native usage as that of polygamy. That polygamy retards civilisation and degrades the gentler sex is, of course, very freely admitted by all Europeans in India and by a few natives; but the question is, whether it would be safe or advisable to pass an immediate law against it in the present state of the native mind, as yet, generally speaking, totally unprepared for so strong a measure, so vast a change. It is true that some few educated Hindoos in Bengal—partly, perhaps, to please the Sahibs—partly, perhaps, at their instigation—have actually petitioned for such a law, and the Honourable Rajah Deonarain Singh, a Hindu member of the Legislative Council, has expressed his readiness to propose officially the abolition of polygamy; but it is not what the educated or enlightened few may think upon the subject, but what the vast multitude, as yet ignorant and prejudiced, may be likely to feel at the proposal of so sudden and important a revolution in their social and domestic habits, that our British Indian statesmen have to take into their careful consideration. After the frightful mutiny of 1857, no one can pretend to be ignorant of the remarkably suspicious and sensitive temperament of the people of India on all matters connected in any way with their religion; and the old rights and customs of Kulin Brahmins are regarded as peculiarly sacred. A law against polygamy in India would stigmatise as illegitimate millions of children now regarded as of honourable birth. The question of Indian polygamy is not a new one. It was brought before the Legislative Council only a few years ago, when it was decided that there were insuperable difficulties in the way of any immediate action towards the suppression of an institution so closely connected with the religion of the people, unless the laws of inheritance were first set aside, which could not be done in a day.

THE RIVAL ORIENTAL STEAM SHIP COMPANIES.

THE Peninsular and Oriental Company have this week launched a new iron vessel from the Blackwall yard of Messrs. Money Wigram, and Son. Only ten days before this company had launched two other new ships—the Golconda and the Baroda. This looks like prosperity. There is evidently a rapidly-increasing demand for accommodation for passengers by steam ships between England and India. The traffic and intercourse of all sorts between these distant regions is something marvellous, but it is trifling indeed to what it may fairly be expected to amount to a few years hence, when the unbounded resources of our vast and magnificent Oriental empire shall be more fully developed. The time, perhaps, is not far distant when the wearisome long voyage round the Cape in sailing vessels will be almost wholly abandoned by passengers, and when even large and heavy cargoes or investments will be transported at a comparatively moderate cost by the overland route. Something cheaper than coal will be discovered to feed the motive power, and improved arrangements of all sorts will secure greater speed, and comfort, and economy.

It was not to be expected, while the Peninsular and Oriental Company enjoyed a complete monopoly, and could always fill their ships, let the scale of passage charges be what they might, that they would exhibit any extraordinary desire to minimize their demands upon the public purse. It was scarcely possible at one time to make those charges what are called prohibitory charges, with respect to first-class accommodations, especially for the homeward passages; and it was hardly in human nature for the Company voluntarily to resign any of the pecuniary advantages of their great commercial enterprise. The Indian community were, indeed, irritated and indignant, though it is somewhat questionable whether they had any strict right to be so. The company very carefully looked to its own interests. They were entitled to take as much as they could get, and it cannot be denied that the Indian community have for many years past benefited exceedingly from the exertions and enterprise of the Peninsular and Oriental Company. This benefit can only be adequately conceived by reflecting upon the unspeakable inconvenience which would be the result of a sudden and total withdrawal of their vessels from the Indian line. We repeat that the company had a clear right, that is a clear legal right to charge what they pleased—that they had a legal right to look only to their own profits. But a man may have a legal right to do many things that may yet reflect some discredit on him, and make him very unpopular, and we think it was, to say the least of it, a most ungenerous proceeding on the part of the Company, while enjoying magnificent profits, to fix such charges upon the accommodations they offered as to make them but a painful mockery to all but the extremely well-to-do. A little more patriotism and humanity would have made them less indifferent to the claims upon their consideration of the hundreds upon hundreds of their long-exiled countrymen—poor gentry, and worn-out officers—physically sick, or home sick—who sighed in vain for the means of a comfortable and speedy return to their native land. They will now, we suppose, very soon be compelled to lower their scale of charges, for their French rivals, the Messageries Impériales, observing the hard terms and the want of consideration of the English company, have thrown open to military and naval officers, French and English, travelling on their lines to and from Europe, India, and China, first class passages on board their steamers at a deduction of 30 per cent. from the rates paid by civilians, and to non-commissioned officers and private soldiers passages are available at a deduction of fifty per cent. on the rates paid by non military travellers of a similar class in society, always providing that the officers and soldiers are travelling on their own account and not on service. Now, this is fair and considerate; and we are pretty sure that the apparent sacrifice on the part of the French company will be a real profit to them; for, in the first place, it will make them popular, and in the second place, it will help to fill their ships; and the many passengers at a lower charge will be more advantageous to them than the few passengers at a higher charge. The worn-out British hero who has gained more honour than money on the plains or hills of India, will be thankful to these French speculators who, from whatever motive—mixed or pure—have given him the opportunity to return speedily and comfortably to his native land. The saving of a few weeks' time in the passage may possibly enable him once more to embrace some dear relative or friend, whom he could never have seen again in this world had he arrived but a day or two later. Perhaps he may save his own life, and greatly lengthen its lease by being rapidly whirled from a hot climate to a cold one, refreshing his physical frame almost at once with his native air, and enlivening his intellect and his heart with an early sight of the friends of his youth, and the scenes of his happiest days. We are not disposed to believe that the Peninsular and Oriental Company will allow themselves to be surpassed by a foreign company in the advantages now offered to our countrymen in India.

BOOKS.

Thacker's Post-Office Directory for Bengal, the North-West Provinces, Oude, the Punjab, and British Burmah for 1863. Calcutta: Thacker, Spink, and Co.

This is the book about which such a hubbub was raised by the very irritable Mr. Roussac, who commenced a civil action in the High Court against the proprietors for having repeated some of the matter in his own Calcutta Directory; as if directories ought to be purely original compositions in all cases, instead of being, like great dictionaries, laborious compilations in the first instance, and comparatively easy ones for ever after. If Dr. Johnson were still alive, and had not outlived his copyright, he would hardly be so mad as to consider the English language as his own private property, and prosecute all who had put the same English words into new dictionaries. If Mr. Roussac had given the names of the officers and men of any particular Regiment before Messrs. Thacker and Company had done the same he would fancy that the latter had been guilty of a felonious plagiarism, a gross infringement of copyright. The judge of the High Court conscientiously devoted his holidays to a careful and most laborious collation of the rival works, and found nothing in Thacker's Directory identical with the matter in Roussac's that was not the common property of all directory compilers. The new and additional information in Thacker's Directory, and the superior arrangement of the contents, and the greater portability and cheapness of the volume, made it very preferable to its rival, which is a peculiarly ponderous tome, being swollen into a preposterous size, with useless, ill-digested, and irrelevant matter, that few would wish to pay for when they can get a book of the same nature at a moderate price and size, containing all the necessary information that is sought for in such publications. Mr. Roussac has gained nothing by his litigiousness, and his attempt to monopolize common property, and deprive competitors of a fair field. A verdict was given in favour of the defendants, and Mr. Roussac had to pay the costs, which amounted to about five thousand rupees.

ITALIAN EMBASSY TO CHINA, JAPAN, AND SIAM.

The recent policy of England, France, and America, in establishing intercommunication with the extreme East, has largely increased our knowledge of lands to which we have hitherto been strangers, and which were entirely ignorant of Western civilisation. The blood shed by the martyrs of the Christian faith—whether Roman Catholic or Protestant—forced the Governments of the countries to which they belonged to place those missionaries under the protection of the national flag, and to teach the barbarians of the far East that the pioneers of the Cross would be avenged whenever they were made the victims of treachery. In this great enterprise—the greatest of our times, when we consider the results which it involves—England has always borne a prominent part. She has been one of the foremost to show the way of truth and justice to the heathen. At the beginning the task was, indeed, a hard one; but the perseverance of the Anglo-Saxon race has in the end prevailed, and we have now the proud satisfaction of seeing Italy—a nation as yet scarcely constituted—preparing to send a diplomatic mission to China, Japan, and Siam. Besides the commercial interests which the Italian Government has to defend in those distant lands—for many Italian ships sail every year from Genoa, Naples, and other ports, bound to China—a more noble duty devolves on the Ministers of Victor Emmanuel, in common with other Christian Powers—the duty of protecting the numerous missionaries who have settled there. The Roman Catholics contribute to the missions in the East an annually augmenting subsidy. In 1862 the money sent from Rome and other parts of the Peninsula for this purpose reached nearly £500,000 sterling. In this amount the sums offered by private individuals are not included, and they may fairly be set down at another half million. No doubt a part of this is collected in France and Spain, through the medium of Rome; but the greater portion, we believe, comes out of Italian pockets. Nor is this all. More than two-thirds of the Roman Catholic missionaries are Italians; the others are either Spanish or French. And yet France, according to her usual custom, monopolises the direction of the missions, and gets the greater part of the profit resulting from the spread of European civilisation in the East. It was especially through the influence of the Italian missionary Abbons, at the court of Burmah, that France and England saw their religious teachers respected in that country, and the spread of the Gospel neither opposed nor hampered by the Government of the Burman Emperor. Indeed, the influence of this Italian priest was so great that our Government thanked him officially for the protection he had gratuitously secured to the lives and property of Englishmen.

LAUNCH OF THE P. & O. COMPANY'S SHIP DELHI.

On Wednesday last the Delhi was launched from the Blackwall yard of the Messrs. Money Wigram and Sons, for the Peninsular and Oriental Company. Only ten days ago the Golconda was launched, from the yard of the Thames Shipbuilding Company, and the Baroda, from the yard of the Millwall Company, both ships for the Peninsular and Oriental Company. This activity in the Thames' yards shows alike the prosperous condition of the mercantile marine and the high repute which the Thames is gaining both for ships and steam-engines. Never, probably, in the lifetime of those now living has so full and profitable employment existed for ships of all classes and conditions, and never, certainly, have the hands of shipbuilders and engineers been so full. Of some of the yards and engine shops it is said that full employment, chiefly for Australia, has recently been offered for three or four years, and as the reward of good workmanship and material, the London shipbuilding and engineering trades not only command a preference, but what is equally important, they readily command relatively higher prices. In ship-building and engine-building quality now-a-days is most of all in request; the cheap shipbuilding and cheap engine-building that followed the repeal of the navigation laws not having been found to answer even the most close economists.

Messrs. Money Wigram and Sons' Delhi was launched at the flood tide. The sight was a fine one. The day being unusually fine and more than the average number of pleasure-seekers about Brunswick Pier, a dense crowd was formed in eager expectation, reminding one of the good old times when ships of much less than 2,000 tons were thought marvels. From the yard and the shipping in the vicinity bunting was displayed in great profusion, while in front and flanking the yard lines of boats were formed thronged with the impatient and adventurous who wished a nearer view. Those again traversing the river in the Watermen steam boats, immediately before the launch, crowded to the landward side and gently laid the steam boats over. Shortly after three o'clock the dog-shores were knocked away, and the Delhi, before many minutes, was in tow to the East India Dock. The dimensions of the ship are as follows:—Length, 205 feet; breadth, 38 feet; depth, 27 feet; burden, 2,000 tons. In the construction there is no peculiarity beyond the somewhat important one that the iron Delhi has been built by wooden shipwrights, and that hereafter the firm of Messrs. Money Wigram and Sons are to be counted among the iron shipbuilders of the country. Messrs. Wigram's wooden shipwrights, appreciating the change that had taken place in their occupation, waited on the firm and asked to be allowed to try their hands in the place of the boiler makers, who are the usual builders of iron ships. The request was considerately complied with, first in the construction of a beacon for the Trinity Corporation, next in the construction of the Diligente for Brazils, an iron vessel for the Ganges, and the fine Dover passage-boats Breeze and Wave for the Chatham and Dover Railway; and, last of all, in the construction of the Delhi. With the result owners, surveyors, builders, and workmen are all satisfied. The Delhi is pronounced a faultless piece of workmanship, and yet the work of wooden shipwrights.

After the launch luncheon was served in the Artichoke to a numerous party, among whom were Rear-Admiral Hall, K.C.B.; Isaac Watts, K.C.B. (late chief constructor of the navy); J. Anderson, Esq., M.P.; J. Haddo, Esq.; J. Ritchie, Esq.; H. C. Plowden, Esq.; Capt. and Mrs. Stiffe, of Persian Gulf Telegraph celebrity, &c. The Messrs. Wigram were highly complimented by the directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Company present for the expedition with which the ship had been built and for her strength and beauty. Other complimentary toasts followed, prominent among which was "The Health of Miss Hall," who launched the Delhi.

SCINDE RAILWAY (INDUS STEAM FLOTTILLA, PUNJAB AND DELHI RAILWAYS) COMPANY.

The fifteenth report of the Scinde Railway Company, including the Punjab and Delhi Railways, and the Indus Steam Flotilla, for presentation at the ensuing half-yearly meeting of proprietors, has just been issued. It is a voluminous document, containing separate reports of each project, with some interesting matter on the trade of Scinde for the official year of 1862-63, by Mr. Dalzell, collector of customs at Kurrachee. It appears that the revenue account for the six months ending 31st December, 1862, after deducting working expenses and maintenance, shows a net return of £7,141. 6s. 10d. The receipts per mile were about £360. 0s. 3d., and the expenditure £292; leaving a sum of £98. 0s. 3d. per mile to be carried to the credit of the net revenue account, in part liquidation of the interest advanced by Government. The train miles run were 115,353, and the gross earnings per train mile 6s. 6½d., the total receipts being 51 per cent. greater than those of the previous half-year, and 154 per cent. more than those of the corresponding half-year of 1861. The estimated revenue return for the half-year ending June 30th last shows a steady increase in the net receipts, and a diminution in the working expenses. The Government consulting engineer for railways to the Bombay Government has stated that he believes there are fair grounds for hoping that, within two years of the present time, the Scinde railway may return 5 per cent., plus an annually-increasing contribution towards the repayment of the guaranteed interest allowed up to that date by the State to the shareholders. The value of the cotton exported for the past year from the province of the Punjab is given at about £1,119,402, although, says the report, prior to 1862, a bale of cotton in transit was rarely seen upon the Indus. The wool exported during the past year amounted to £180,000, whereas four or five years ago the quantity received from the border countries of Central Asia was almost insignificant. The Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the execution of a survey of the country from Kotree to Mooltan, with a view to connect the Scinde and Punjab lines by a railway between those places, of the same weight and gauge. This will afford to Northern India and the Punjab access without break to Kurrachee, and supply the link wanting in the chain of railway communication between the opposite shores of the peninsula, placing Calcutta, in the Bay of Bengal, in railway connection with Kurrachee, on the Arabian Sea. The revenue return to the 31st December last for the Indus Steam Flotilla Company shows, after defraying expenses, a clear surplus of £3,574. On the Punjab Railway, the entire line from Umritsur to Sher Shah Ghat, 252 miles in length, will, it is expected, be opened for traffic during the ensuing year. The cost of constructing a railway over this section—from near Sher Shah, through Jellapore, to the confluence of the Sutlej and Chenaub rivers, a distance of 53 miles—is estimated at about £7,000 per mile. The debentures issued by the authority of an extraordinary general meeting held last June have all been applied for, and £500,000 paid to the credit of the Secretary of State for India.

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY.

An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of this company was held on Thursday, at the London Tavern, for the purpose of considering and determining as to the necessity of removing John Bourne, Esq., the managing director, from his office, pursuant to the power given to a general meeting of shareholders by the 28th clause of the articles of association; also, as to the expediency of removing that gentleman from the office of an ordinary director; and, in the event of such removal being determined upon, the appointing another director in his stead.

Lieut.-Colonel John Grimes occupied the chair, and opened the proceedings by stating the grounds on which the board of directors recommended the dismissal of their managing director. He said that Mr. Bourne had been guilty of the greatest extravagance, in expending the funds of the company by buying a carriage and horses, pianoforte, furniture, and in the extensive way in which he had ordered his house to be fitted up. He described the whole of the acts of Mr. Bourne with reference to the company, with a view to show extreme mismanagement, and represented the plan of the steam train as an utter failure. There were also several other charges detailed at great length, not the least of which was the publishing a pamphlet reflecting on the directors, and calculated to injure the company. He concluded by assuring the proprietors that it would be impossible for the board to work with Mr. Bourne, and that, unless he resigned or was dismissed, the whole of the directors would resign.

Mr. John Besemeres, the deputy-chairman, went through the balance-sheet, explaining the different items, and defended himself at considerable length against some implied charges against him in Mr. Bourne's pamphlet, and concluded by saying that to continue Mr. Bourne in the position he then occupied would be ruinous to the company.

Considerable impatience was expressed during the time Mr. Besemeres was addressing the meeting, the shareholders continually expressing themselves satisfied with his explanation.

Mr. Bourne contended that a public meeting was not a competent tribunal to try the question, as it would be impossible to lay the facts before them in a proper manner, and suggested that a committee should be appointed to judge between him and the directors. (Cries of "No, no.") He said he was ready to answer any question, to give any explanation, and was not moved by any personal motives, but had really the interests of the company at heart.

A Shareholder: Can you give us the cause of the failure?

Mr. Bourne said the principal cause was that they spent too much in ships. The Thomas Brassey ought not to have been purchased, and the Jumna should not have been built. The navigation of the Sutlej should not have been abandoned, as it was the line which would prove the most paying. Another cause of failure was the working the Ganges with two barges in tow instead of four, the receipts from the two barges being quite insufficient to pay working expenses. He had given orders for four barges to make the trip, but his orders had been countermanded, and this had been the case to a very great extent whilst he was in India—in fact, to such an extent, that he considered he was not responsible for the blunders made in the management.

The Chairman explained that the Ganges was unable to tow two large barges up the river in a satisfactory manner, and if four had been sent they would all have become a total wreck, and in confirmation read a letter from the commander of the vessel.

A Shareholder asked Mr. Bourne why he had sold his shares in the company.

Mr. Bourne said because he saw that the company was doomed.

Another Shareholder: I wish I had known that—(laughter). Mr. Bourne has now had seven years' trial, and has failed, and should now resign.

A very warm controversy then took place, which ended in a motion being proposed that Mr. Bourne should be called upon to resign. Several gentlemen also addressed Mr. Bourne personally, and begged him for the good of the company to resign. One gentleman described himself as a poor country curate, and said he had invested all his savings in the company, and he and his family would be utterly ruined if it failed and was wound up.

Mr. Cottrell, on the part of Mr. Bourne, said it was a question of character with that gentleman, as he had been accused of incapacity amongst other things, and he required investigation—(cries of "No, no," "Waste of time," "It would be ruinous"). If the case had been first of all put to Mr. Bourne as it had been put at that meeting, he would have responded to it in a proper manner; but now Mr. Bourne was determined not to resign unless the whole of the charges made against him by the directors were withdrawn.

The Chairman said the directors would feel happy to do this, and thanked Mr. Bourne for having acceded to the wish of the shareholders.

Mr. Cottrell and the solicitor of the company having consulted, then drew up a resolution accepting the resignation of Mr. Bourne, and withdrawing all charges made against him, which was carried unanimously; and the meeting separated, after a vote of thanks to the chairman and directors.

TELEGRAPH TO INDIA COMPANY.

An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of this company was held yesterday (Friday) at the London Tavern; Sir Macdonald Stephenson in the chair.

The report, which was taken as read, stated that the directors had the satisfaction of saying that all outstanding engagements had now been liquidated, and that they were still engaged in negotiating for the disposal of the remaining property and assets of the company. The directors recommended that a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, free of Income-tax, be paid to the shareholders for the half-year ending June 30, which would absorb £1,135 out of the amount received from Messrs. Glass, Elliot, and Co., leaving a balance of £115. An accident occurred on the Malta and Alexandria line, which interrupted the traffic for a few weeks, but the cable had been thoroughly repaired, and continues to work most satisfactorily. The directors had received the concession for the construction of the El Arish line referred to in the last report, and a new company had been registered, under the title of the Syrian Telegraph Company, by which it can be carried out whenever it was considered advisable to do so.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said, since the last meeting the board had been actively engaged in realising the assets of the company, and the company was now clear of all debts and engagements, and after the payment of a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum there would still be a balance in hand. The temporary stoppage to the Malta and Alexandria cable had been attended with a corresponding loss to Messrs. Glass and Elliot, but that firm, notwithstanding the loss incurred, paid the interest. The board was taking steps for securing the remainder of the assets, and they were now in a position to await the results of the Persian Gulf experimental line, without incurring any loss. The directors would use every exertion to attend to the interests of the shareholders.

A slight discussion then took place, and in answer to questions it was stated that part of the remaining assets consisted of a house at Aden, which the directors were endeavouring to sell to the Government. The directors could not tell the value of the submerged cable, but they would be happy to enter into arrangements with Messrs. Glass and Elliot for its recovery, but no offer had yet been made. When the shareholders entered into the company it was expected that the line could be recovered; and if that expectation had been realised, there would, in all probability, have been a dividend of 50 or 60 per cent. for the outlay. Mr. Latimer Clark, an electrician of great experience, had been sent out, and he reported that the cable could not be repaired. Things might have been worse, as they had a land line, which returned 5 per cent. upon the outlay. Traffic arrangements were pending with the Viceroy of Egypt, but it was not thought advisable to enter into the details of those arrangements at present.

The report was then adopted.

A dividend, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, was next declared, and a vote of thanks to the chairman closed the proceedings.

MISCELLANEOUS.

APPOINTMENT.—(Downing-street, Sept. 17).—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B., to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Island of Mauritius and its dependencies.

THE ORDER OF THE BATH.—(War-office, Fall-mall, Sept. 15).—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Colonel Henry Yule, late of the Royal (Bengal) Engineers, and late Secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department, to be an ordinary member of the Civil Division of the Third Class, or Companions, of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

THE WILL OF LORD CLYDE.—The will of Field-Marshal the Right Hon. Colin Campbell, Lord Clyde, G.C.B., K.S.I., D.C.L., was proved in her Majesty's Court of Probate on the 7th inst. The executors and trustees are thus described:—"Major-General Henry Eyre, 98th, now commanding governor, Chatham; Lieutenant-Colonel Archibald Alison, C.B., formerly my military secretary while commander-in-chief in India, and now assistant adjutant-general, head-quarters, London; Colonel William Montagu Scott M'Murdo, C.B., aide-de-camp to the Queen; and Lieutenant-General Duncan Alexander Cameron, C.B., 42nd, now commanding her Majesty's troops in New Zealand." The will and two codicils are dated May 23, 1863, and a third codicil July 11 last, signed "Clyde, F.M." There are many legacies to officers and personal friends. To Sir William Mansfield he leaves the sword presented to him by the City of London, together with the document conferring upon him the freedom of the City, and that Sir William (whom he wished to have appointed as an executor had not his official duties prevented him from acting) should be consulted as to what papers (if any) should be made public; and, should any memoir of himself (Lord Clyde) appear, which he would rather did not, it should be limited to Hart's "Army List," and be simply the recital of the services of a plain soldier. His lordship's personal property was sworn under £70,000. To his sister, Miss Alicia Campbell, his lordship leaves an annuity of £1,000, and divides his real estate and the residue of his personal estate between her and General Eyre, leaving also to the general and his family many specific bequests.—Illustrated News.

BUST OF LORD CLYDE.—Mr. G. G. Adams has completed his model for a bust in marble of the late Lord Clyde, and the work is in every respect worthy the reputation of this eminent sculptor. There are in the same studio, posthumous busts of Lord Seaton, Archbishop Sumner, and other departed worthies, manifesting a special capacity in Mr. Adams for recalling the most expressive moments in the lives of men of thought and action, with no other aid to memory than casts of the features after they were fixed in death. But this portrait of Colin Campbell has the advantage of having been moulded from the living subject, and it is a likeness specially characterised by animation. The sculptor has remodelled the bust, from one taken a few years ago; and, in doing so he has carefully revised his work, bringing the well-known face more closely to the period of waning strength, but not of waning spirit. The furrows on the spacious brow are deeper, the head is less erect, but the forward gaze is just as fixed and penetrating as of yore. Artistically, the way of dealing with the subject is unexceptionable. We might, indeed, have been shown the brave old warrior clad to the throat in uniform, with his galaxy of medals on his breast; and we should not have quarrelled with this form of representation. But Mr. Adams has chosen, with perfect warrant, to give the unclothed neck and chest; and his mode of carrying out the more sculptural plan of design is praiseworthy for its simplicity. The square termination of the bust agrees in character with the massive head and the straight, onward look; while a certain consonance is even apparent in the inscription of the monosyllable "Clyde" on the plain surface of the base.

TROOPS FOR JAPAN.—It is rumoured, and we believe with truth, that the state of affairs in Japan has determined the Government to increase the force in China by one regiment, which will be available for the protection of British subjects in the dominions of the Tycoon. The 31st Regiment was sent home inconsiderately, just at the moment they were wanted for this purpose, through a not very enlightened observance of the letter of his instructions from home by General Brown. The 31st will now we believe be replaced by one of the battalions that lately sailed for India. Whichever of them can be first made available will be sent on to China, instead of landing in India. Either the second battalion of the 20th or the 21st would have this duty allotted to it, as the 2nd battalion, 19th, and the 36th sailed long after, and the 2nd battalion, 25th, were to land at Ceylon to enable the 50th to go on to New Zealand. Between the change thus rendered necessary and the diversion of the 50th from Madras, the Indian establishment will be left two battalions short of its proper proportions. Our new system of Indian reliefs renders any reduction of this kind undesirable, and accordingly two regiments from England will, in all likelihood, be at once sent out. The two first on the roster are the 55th, at Portsmouth, and the 76th, at Aldershot; and most probably these two corps will be placed under orders for Madras within a few days from the present time.

ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE.
THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE AND THE ISLE OF MAN SCHOOLS.—The Manx schools were represented at the late competitive examinations for the Indian Civil Service by Mr. Reginald D. Starkey, who won his appointment over the heads of the Marlborough and Eton men. The number of vacancies was sixty, and the number of candidates over 200. The value of these appointments is about £800 per annum at the commencement, and they increase steadily till they reach £1,000 per annum, and in some cases more. The duties attached to them are those of magistrates, superintendents of departments, commissioners, &c. Some of the young men who have gone out since the system of competitive examinations was introduced are already judges and secretaries of state for the different presidencies.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for 30,000,000 rupees (£300,000) in bills on India took place on Wednesday last at the Bank of England. Annexed are the official particulars:—The proportions allotted were, to Calcutta, 16,350,000 rupees; to Bombay, 12,000,000 rupees; and to Madras, 1,650,000 rupees. The minimum price was declared to be 1s. 11½d. per rupee on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 11d. on Bombay, being a reduction of ½d. in the case of Madras. The applications within the limits amounted to 223 lacs. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 6 per cent., on Bombay at 2s.—about 87 per cent. All above these prices, and all tenders on Madras, will receive in full.

THE TRANSFER OF THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—We are happy to announce that the negotiations for the transfer of the Straits Settlements have nearly terminated. The last stumbling-block is the amount expended on the fortifications at Singapore, ordered by the Indian Government. The sum is, we believe, £20,000, and it is expected that this will be allowed by Sir Charles Wood.—London and China Telegraph.

UNEXPECTED GOOD FORTUNE.—The Oswestry Advertiser says:—"The old romance of a rich uncle in India leaving a fabulous fortune has just become a pleasing reality to a Mr. George Legg, carpenter, Madeley. The uncle, Mr. Johnson, an East Indian merchant, has bequeathed £18,000 to this fortunate nephew, besides three sums of £10,000 and one of £5,000 to other relatives, and £500 a-year to his widow.

ELPHINSTONE COLLEGE.—The offer of Mr. Cowasjee Jehangear to contribute the munificent sum of Rs. 1,00,000 (one lakh) towards the erection of buildings for the University of Bombay forms the subject of an official correspondence published in the last Gazettes. We learn from a letter of the Hon. H. L. Anderson, Chief Secretary to the Government of Bombay, addressed to E. C. Bayley, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, that, Cowasjee's Jehangear's offer being accepted, the Bombay Government will contribute the remainder of the sum necessary for the buildings, and grant a site in the new town on the esplanade. No subscription from any other private person will be received for this object. The noble gift of Mr. Cowasjee Jehangear is publicly accepted and acknowledged by his Excellency the Governor on the above conditions, and the notification in the Gazette expresses "the admiration with which the Government has received Mr. Cowasjee Jehangear's munificent offer." The Home Government concurs in the expression of admiration with which the Government of Bombay has received this very liberal gift; but in recognising the acceptance of it stipulates that "no designation of the building should be sanctioned which would in any way interfere with the present appellation of the college as a memorial of the respect and admiration entertained by the Government and community of Bombay for the late Mr. Mountstuart Elphinstone." In fewer words, the proposed new structure will bear the name of the "Elphinstone College."

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA in COUNCIL HEREBY GIVES NOTICE, that holders of INDIA FOUR PER CENT. DEBENTURES, who have assented to their conversion into "India Four per Cent. Stock," are required to SURRENDER their DEBENTURES at the Chief Cashier's Office, Bank of England, on or before the 1st of October next, and to state at the same time the names, addresses, and quality of the parties in whose favour the Stock is to be registered.

The Stock will be created on the 8th of October, and will be transferable after that date.

Holders of "India Four per Cent. Stock" who are registered in the books of the Bank of England on the 8th of October next, and who desire to hold "Stock Certificates to bearer with Coupons attached," in lieu of Stock registered in their names, may do so by transferring their Stock to "The Secretary of State in Council of India" on or after the 8th of October next, when they will receive "Stock Certificates to bearer" in lieu thereof.

Debentures which are to be paid off on or after the 8th of October next must be left at the Chief Cashier's Office, Bank of England, for examination three days previous to payment being made.

Parties leaving their Debentures on or before the 5th of October can receive payment of the same on the 8th of October.

Receipts will be given for the Debentures deposited.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!

C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or, indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times, C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Milner, Price, Mordan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post.

23, Cannon-street West, St. Paul's, London; and opposite the Angel, Islington.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS. STEAM COMMUNICATION between LONDON and INDIA by the MAGNIFICENT FLEET of STEAMERS belonging to the EAST INDIA and LONDON SHIPPING COMPANY (Limited).

The well-known Clipper Auxiliary Steam-ship QUEEN OF THE SOUTH, 2,321 tons, 300-horse power, W. STEWART, Commander, now loading in the Victoria (London) Docks, will leave on the 19th of SEPTEMBER, embarking passengers at and leaving Gravesend on the 21st of SEPTEMBER, for CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS. (This vessel will also call at the Island of MAURITIUS). No Cargo will be taken for Madras or Mauritius. This magnificent Ship, built expressly for the India trade, has been thoroughly refitted, has first-rate accommodation for passengers, and will carry an experienced Surgeon, also a Stewardess.

The average passage of these steamers has been seventy days to Madras; some of them making the shortest passages on record.

The line will be continued on the 20th of each succeeding month, with the strictest punctuality, by one of this Company's fleet of auxiliary screw steam-ships.

For freight or passage apply to GRINDLAY and Co., 55, Parliament-street, S.W.; the Broker, ALFRED BREIT and Co., 150, Leadenhall-street, E.C.; or at the Offices of the Company, 9, Minning-lane, London, E.C., where also applications for appointments as Midshipmen in this service should be made.

CROSSER & BLACKWELL, Purveyors to the Queen, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON.

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer. They will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

TENDER & DECAYED TEETH STOPPED with ANODYNE CEMENT, which instantly allays the most violent pain, and fills up cavities, however large, and answers where every other kind of stopping has failed. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta and Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France. 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from 11 till 4. No connection with any person practising in the same profession.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—The Manufacturing Dentist, being the actual maker throughout, can with certainty insure comfort and satisfaction even where others have failed, and at a much lower charge. Mr. R. BRADSHAW, for several years Manufacturing Dentist to the Profession, 20, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street (Circus).

N.B.—Mr. BRADSHAW begs to say that no charge whatever is made by him unless satisfaction is given.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer,

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGE'S) SARSAPARILLA is appreciated for its Purity, and admitted superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alternative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incidental to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after sickness is invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c. subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's' Sarsaparilla myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE of QUINIDINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

IMPORTANT TO OFFICERS.—Have all your BOTTLED ALES, WINES, &c., PACKED IN SEYMER'S REFRIGERANT STRAW ENVELOPES, which entirely prevent Heating, Fermentation, and Breakage; will use repeatedly as Wine Coolers, prevent all litter on board ship or in quarters, and save 20 per cent. in space and freight. Supplied by all Wine Merchants at 9d. per dozen, and wholesale by THOMAS WHITEHEAD, 37, Eastcheap, London, E.C.

THE OCCHIOMBRA, or TRANSPARENT VENTILATING EYE and SUN SHADE, excludes wind and dust, and modifies the light, keeping the eye perfectly cool; it can be worn over spectacles, and is easily removed when required.

Patented, J. CALKIN, Sole Agent. Wholesale and Retail, JOHN WEISS and SON, 63, Strand, London. Price, in case, 5s. 6d.; post free, 6s. 6d.

A. MOLLARD'S SULPHUR SOAP and CREAM, for ordinary Toilet purposes, and BAREGE SULPHUR CREAM for Baths; all free from any disagreeable odour, nicely perfumed; highly patronised and strongly recommended by the more eminent physicians (see testimonials) to keep the skin and body in perfect health. Tablets of Soap from Nos. 1 to 5, according to the degree of sulphur; Nos. 3, 4, 5, are used most successfully for curing local or cutaneous erupts and rheumatisms.

Sold at the depot, Rupert-street, Coventry-street, London, W., and at all respectable Chemists. Pamphlets and testimonials sent on application.

COUGHS, ASTHMA, and INCIPENT CONSUMPTION ARE EFFECTUALLY CURED BY

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—JUDGED BY THE IMMENSE DEMAND,

this UNIVERSAL REMEDY now stands the first in public favour and confidence; this result has been acquired by the test of fifty years' experience. These Lozenges may be found on sale in every British Colony, and throughout India and China they have been highly esteemed wherever introduced. For COUGHS, ASTHMA, and all affections of the Throat and Chest, they are the most agreeable and efficacious remedy.

Prepared and sold in Boxes, Tins, and Bottles of various sizes by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's Church-yard, London. Sold retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the World.

N.B.—To prevent spurious imitations, please to observe that the words "KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES" are engraved on the Government Stamp of each Box, without which none are genuine.

BLAIR'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC PILLS.

—This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the Gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated, by unobscured testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part. Sold at 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, by all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—FEAR NOT—Though surrounded by circumstances disadvantageous to health, these remedies, properly applied, will cut short fevers, influenza, inflammation, diphtheria, and a host of other complaints always lurking about to seize on the weak, forlorn, or unwary. The superiority of Holloway's medicines over others for subduing disease has been so widely and fully proved, that it is only necessary to ask the afflicted to give them a trial, and if the instructions folded round them be followed, no disappointment will ever ensue nor dangerous consequence result. In hoarseness and ulcerated sore throat the Ointment should frequently be rubbed on the neck and top of the chest; it will arrest the increasing inflammation, allay disquietude, and gradually cure.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 19th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

At the London office of the Messageries Impériales the report from Calcutta that the passage rates of their steamers had been reduced has been contradicted; but it is possible that the office in Calcutta may have favoured the Indian community with such a boon for the home voyager without consulting the London office, and perhaps with the sanction of the head office at Paris. We find no contradiction in the Calcutta papers just received of the announcement in the papers of the mail before of the details of the great changes in the passage rates, but there is an advertisement from the French Company dated Calcutta, August 20th, which offers for the convenience of persons visiting the Neilgherry Hills return tickets to Madras and back, available for three months, at a reduction of 25 per cent. on the present rate. This at least looks as if the company was in an obliging mood. It is said that the Messageries Impériales will have a fleet of nearly sixty steamers next year, and will then be the largest mail packet company in the world.

The Calcutta papers teem with the details of the great Burney case, which has been tried at great length in the High Court. We are able to state that the case is decided. Damages, Rs. 2,000, with costs.

The Sikh pioneers sent to Ceylon will give some trouble yet, we fear, to the Government, though it is hardly so much the fault of the men as of the authorities who sent them there in a state of complete ignorance as to what duties were expected from them. The poor fellows little expected to be treated like convicts, and made to take cool work on the roads. They thought that some honourable soldierly duties were to be assigned them, and were astonished, and humiliated, and vexed when they found they were to break stones on the road. No wonder, then, that ninety-five of them at Kandy deserted in a body. They took up their quarters in a mosque there. A strong body of armed police, with a party of the 50th Regiment, were sent to apprehend them, which, after some struggle, in which a few Sikhs were slightly wounded, they succeeded in doing. They were taken before the civil authorities, who took their case into merciful consideration, and inflicted no punishment on them. They took advantage of some discrepancy in the evidence against them, and gave them an acquittal. It appears that these poor soldiers have been altogether unworthily treated, and for trifling offences have been flogged and put in the stocks. When these men return to their native country they will give their friends by no means a flattering account of British justice.

We are glad to learn that the Bengal Government has given up the experiment of turning Sikh soldiers into Ceylon coolies, and the second party of Sikhs intended for Ceylon, and lately encamped on the Maidaun at Calcutta, have received notice that they may return to their homes, on reaching which each man is to receive a gratuity of a month's pay. The Sikh Pioneers at Ceylon are to be immediately recalled.

It is gazetted in India that the enterprising African travellers, Captains Speke and Grant, have had their furloughs extended, with full pay, until July 1, 1864, on account of their great services rendered to geographical science. Sir Charles Wood concludes his despatch to the Bengal Government as follows:—"I have caused to be conveyed to Captains Speke and Grant the expression of my gratification at the successful result of their joint enterprise, as well as the energy and skill displayed by them in carrying on investigations in the hitherto unexplored regions into which they have penetrated."

The Bengal Government administers a severe rebuke to the Oodeypore Council of Regency for failing to administer justice to the people, and for embezzling the property of the State to the amount of 20 lakhs of rupees. Power is conferred on the Political Agent at Oodeypore to rectify the maladministration. He has therefore been invested with the powers of a Sessions Judge, Superintendent of Police, and of a Civil Judge in revenue and civil suits, such powers to be exercised until the Maharajah comes of age.

Mr. Goculdas Tejpal or Tezpal, of Bombay, about whom there was a scandalous report in the Bombay papers some time back, and for which the Government called upon him for an explanation, as he held the office of justice of the peace, has lately contributed Rs. 90,000 for building a hospital at Mandavie in Cutch. This donation is to be added to a long list of charitable and public offerings, amounting to Rs. 75,000, so that we must credit him with charities and public gifts of different kinds to the tune of Rs. 165,000. This is pretty fair for one man. The merchant princes of Bombay seem to surpass the whole world in the munificence of their public charities. In our last number we recorded the gift of Mr. Cowasjee Jehangheer of 7,000 rupees towards the cost of an illuminated clock for a Christian temple (St. John's Church, in Colaba,) and of a quarter of a lac towards the completion of the sacred edifice, besides a lac of rupees for the erection of forty ornamental drinking-fountains for the poor. The same gentleman lately gave 50,000 rupees towards the erection of buildings for a civil engineering college at Poona. We gave a paragraph last week about Mr. Soabjee Pestonjee Framjee, a Bombay merchant, who has distributed two lacs and thirty thousand rupees amongst his friends and clerks; and now we have to add that Mr. Jewraz Balloo has given 40,000 rupees for an English School, and Mr. Cahanjee Khetsey a like sum for a Sanscrit School. The Bombay papers from day to day teem with announcements of such demonstrations of public spirit and liberality. Nothing equal to it, considering the size of this land, has ever been heard of in any other country. Such wealth, turned to so noble a purpose, in so comparatively small a community, is something marvellous.

We are sorry to hear that the Mutlah river locality is suspected of being somewhat insalubrious. Three captains of ships and thirteen sailors had come up from Canningtown to Calcutta suffering from fever of a very invidious and dangerous type. A little while before the ship Bengal, lying in the port of Canningtown, was left with only one man on board.

The cholera has nearly left Benares, but not before three thousand of the inhabitants had succumbed to its power. The disease was also on the decrease at Lucknow, though at the village of Mohan, on the old Cawnpore-road, 400 villagers had died of it in ten days.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE NANA!

BOMBAY, Sept. 9.

The Ajmere prisoner has been finally proved not to be the Nana Sahib.

Mr. J. CONNOR, barrister and proprietor of the Bombay Gazette, has been appointed Coroner at Bombay, in place of Dr. Reid, who has resigned the office.

"TAKE A THORNY SHRUB," said the Emir Abdel-Kadir to me one day, "and water it for a whole year with rose water, and you will find still nothing but thorns. But take a date tree and leave it without water, without cultivation, and it still will produce dates. From the Arab point of view the nobles are this date tree and the common people that thorny shrub. In the East great faith is placed in the power of blood and in the virtue of races. The aristocracy is regarded not only as a social necessity, but as an absolute law of nature. No one ever dreams of revolting against the truism which is accepted by all with a placid resignation. The head is the head and the tail the tail, is what the lowest of the Arab shepherds would say."

THE REPUTED NANA—HIS EXAMINATION.

Cawnpore, August 23.

The man supposed to be the rebel Nana Dhoondia Punt was brought into this station a prisoner yesterday morning, and is now lodged in the station jail. He was brought in by Captain Carnell with a guard of three Sikhs. His arrival caused considerable commotion in the city at first, for it was generally believed that the coming prisoner was veritably the Nana. But in a very few hours after he left the railway station that excitement had quite subsided. Hundreds of people to whom the person of the Nana was well known, had seen the prisoner, and all declared that he was not the man. Among these are people who had been daily with the Nana, and some of them in constant attendance upon him at Bithoor and elsewhere for years before his flight. It might be expected, of course, that such persons would (most of them) deny his identity, even falsely; but the tacit evidence of an entire population, as expressed in the marked and speedy cessation of their anxiety about, or further interest in, the man, is matter of great importance. It is, nevertheless, still possible, however improbable, that circumstantial evidence added to that of his blind companion, who has turned informer, may yet prove him to be the Nana. Numbers of well-attested cases familiar to the physiological student may serve to explain away difficulties arising from his non-recognition even by men who must necessarily remember well the features, complexion, voice, attitudes, and general contour of the arch rebel, as they knew him before 1857 at Bithoor. But six anxious years of travel, flight, exposure, change of climate, of habits, and of diet, superadded to sickness, mortification, and despair—perhaps even remorse—cannot have failed to work considerable physical changes in the Nana, wherever he may be now. Instances are not rare of the really honest repudiation, by affectionate wives and mothers, of their husbands and children after long and distant voyages or travel. Cases are recorded where brothers and sisters, meeting after many years of adventure, have even married in perfect ignorance of each other's identity. It will be admitted, by the lawyer at least, that circumstances such as those which must have attended the life of the Nana since his flight would render his non-identification, by witnesses who judge from his present appearance alone, a matter of comparative insignificance in the face of a chain of facts connecting the changed man with the person he has been suspected to be—those facts and circumstances accounting more or less for the change itself. Whether such evidence is forthcoming is to be seen. But to return to this prisoner more particularly. His appearance indisputably declares his high caste Maharatta origin. He is much darker than the Nana was, but not unlike what the fugitive life the Nana must have led would make, in six years, of a (formerly) delicately-nurtured fair Maharatta Brahmin. These are my impressions, and they may, of course, be wrong. But his height does not correspond with the description of the Nana, nor does his apparent age.

A careful study of the man at the cutcherry yesterday during his examination convinced me, not only that he knows this place, but that he was anxiously observant of faces around him, as if in search of persons whom he recognised, and who might perhaps recognise him. The same curious scrutiny on his part was observable as he passed through the station on his way from the railway to the jail. He is no stranger to Cawnpore; but that does not prove him to be the Nana. Indeed, he admits that he was here and at Bithoor several years ago, when the Nana was there.

It is worthy of note that the personal appearance of the man is undergoing a slow and gradual, but plain change. I have seen three or four photographs of him taken at different periods, and though all bear some resemblance to him, no one is the likeness of the man as I saw him yesterday. He grows fairer, though more haggard than these photographs represent him. May not the one be from his being less exposed, and the other from his imprisonment, and consciousness of the fearful position he occupies, if the Nana?

On the opening of the cutcherry, the magistrate (H. Monckton, Esq., C.S.) at once had the prisoner brought before him, charged with being the rebel Nana Dhoondia Punt. He denies that he is so, and declares that he is a Brahmin who has been a faqueer nearly all his life; that his name is Appa Ram, son of Damoodhur, born in a village on the banks of an obscure river in the Deccan; and that while he was yet a child his father was murdered there. He says he had two brothers. On the death of his father, he (then twelve years old) with his brothers adopted the vagrant life of a faqueer. His brothers, he says, he has never seen nor heard of since they set out after their father's death. He states that a few years ago he visited the village where he was born, and was then recognised by three or four persons living there, whom he names; but they are all dead now. (How does he know of their death?) The village itself, too, he declares, has now ceased to exist, having been washed away, and entirely destroyed by an encroachment of the river; and its inhabitants are now undiscoverable, being, as he says, absorbed in the population of the surrounding country. (A rather suspicious and certainly unsatisfactory tale.) Dr. Cheke and Dr. Jones assisted the magistrate during the first day's (yesterday's) proceedings, which bore solely on the point of his personal appearance. Dr. Cheke was formerly civil surgeon of Cawnpore; Dr. Jones is so now. In his office as civil surgeon Dr. Cheke attended professionally upon the Nana, but does not recognise the prisoner in any way. His person does not show the expected marks or traces said to have been left by surgical treatment for certain minor diseases. In fact, Dr. Cheke is very strongly of opinion that the prisoner is not the Nana. With the assistance of the medical officers above-named, the magistrate drew up a most minute description of the prisoner's person, and with that the first day's proceedings closed, to be resumed to-morrow (Monday) morning.

At present it is the belief of the authorities here that the prisoner is not the Nana; that so far from there being, as yet, evidence against him proving him to have been a rebel of note, or even a rebel at all, there has not been produced against him evidence sufficient to justify, legally, his continued imprisonment for any long period. The prisoner is confined in a separate ward of the jail, apart from all other prisoners. Inside the jail is an additional guard of twelve men, who are quartered in tents immediately adjoining the cell, or room, where the prisoner lies. The guard is under an European inspector, who remains on duty, in a room close by, night and day. Inside the prisoner's cell a sentinel walks on duty day and night, while one or two others are posted outside. The prisoner seldom speaks, but sits or lies on his rug, for hours together, almost motionless, and seemingly quite at his ease. He eats nothing, refusing all solid food of every description, even from the highest caste men. He lives on milk alone, drinking one seer in the morning and one in the evening. During the day he is fettered only on the legs, but at night he is closely handcuffed. He seems to care nothing about the curiosity of people who go to see him as he lies in jail, and appears, on the whole, to have little fear as to the result of the case.

THE ALLEGED CAPTURE OF THE NANA SAHIB.

The manager of our press was for many years Fouzdar of the cantonment of Poona, and his experience is quite equal to his sagacity. We have, for some time, tried to glean his opinions with respect to this business; but smiting the rock at Meribah was simple work in comparison to getting an idea out of him. By dint, however, of extraordinary importunity, we have managed to elicit this much;—and it will be perceived, that he rejects, with the scorn of a Field or a Forrester, the vulgar idea of a pursuit like that which we have been asked to believe. We give the conversation exactly as it took place at our office-door:—

Do you think Forjett will be knighted?—Yes—when you are!

There was a keen glitter in his eyes, when he said this, like that of sword-blades when they tremble together on the first touch of "engaging"—and, of course, we looked to him for an explanation. But a hard dry smile was the only reply vouchsafed; and a few complacent shakes of the knee, which was nursed on the other one.

Come, old fellow, no mystery with us, you know;—you may as well tell us all about it as not.

He laughed.—"You got that fine book from Chesson, with the Nana's portrait:—what more do you want?"—Knowledge.

Apply to the police or the Government Minutes!—And he laughed again in his quiet way.

You know something?—I do.

Who have you seen?—The Nana's widow!

A new idea at once seized us; and we mentally exclaimed—

A long good night to Marmion!

But to the point promptly, without dialogue, which is in this age, we believe, only readable in the columns of the Dispatch; and that, too, when it takes its place between a council for the defence and a witness for the prosecution, in cases which we need not indicate. Our very worthy and esteemed manager showed us clearly that if the Nana were really dead his family would bear about them the usual tokens of mourning. He demonstrated that the proud females belonging to the Rajah of Bhitor would not submit to the degradations attendant upon Hindu widowhood, unless they had received some substantial token that their lord was gone towards the Invisible and the Unknown. The weeds of woe, as respects Hindus, are not like those which Hamlet's tailor made for him. And even if the ladies were credulous, their relatives would not permit them to degrade themselves, except upon substantial proof. Eureka! will, we fancy, now exclaim, "All who have been led away by this shameless imposture;" and—"to the deuce with the detectives!"—will, in a few days, be the conversation at every mess-table in camp, when that which we are about to state is duly weighed and considered. What our managing proprietor communicated is in substance this; and we think it is really the only simple and safe suggestion which has yet been made:—"Ask the sarkar (he said) to send for the wives or widows of the Nana, and ascertain if they have undergone the usual process of head-shaving; and if they have not, let it be accurately determined if they continue to wear the marriage-string of black beads round their necks!"—Deccan Herald, Aug. 7.

We (Deccan Herald) frequently think that if the Nana Sahib really has been captured, that the most terrible punishment which could be inflicted upon him would be to compel him to take a passing glimpse at the old Mahratta capital and its environs. He would find the scene of Bajerao's last reverse studded with a succession of buildings, eclipsing the finest of the palaces of his ancestors. On the Yellowlee hill, round which the dark battalions of Bombay gathered on the morning when he menaced the Residency, he would discover the slaves of a higher civilisation laying out the boundaries of a new viceregal residence. But punishments of this character are, mercifully, held in reserve by an intelligence that only turns over the leaves of life so that, from our perusal of them, good may arise. The Nana Sahib, if he were to be placed at liberty in our midst, would be confounded at the success of the city of Poona under a foreign yoke. He would be delighted with the general improvements, in fact; and a few of the first things that he would do would consist of registering his name for eligible spaces of vacant ground, engaging one of the best architects of the place, and entering his name as a subscriber to the Deccan Herald for a twelve-month! That he would follow this very admirable line of action cannot, we think, for a moment, be doubted; and we daresay that even our friend, Mr. Forjett, would say, if he were dwelling in our midst, "Never mind the reward, so long as you are all happy!" We are quite at one with the great criminal reformers of the age; and if we had the Nana Sahib in a cage, one of our first proclamations would be addressed to the Spurgeon class of clergymen, asking them who would go in and take charge of him. No expense would, of course, be spared—oranges and gingerbread nuts twice a day, and the run of the teeth, along the wires! This would indeed be a chance for the missionaries of all persuasions. But we are afraid that they do not care about engaging tough subjects. We may also mention that the most remarkable features of the new Indian-Imperial policy, connected with the capture of the reputed Nana Sahib, are the reasons urged by the Englishman for his immediate extinction. Our contemporary is supposed to represent the enlightened classes of Bengal; and the luminous reasoning of the Calcutta journalist will, we fancy, rather astonish even the greatest griffin amongst us. Our contemporary thinks that the captive ought to be disposed of as quietly as possible, so that the Cawnpore business may not be reopened. But his arguments adduced in favour of a quiet disappearance are too rich to be overlooked. "We see no occasion," says the so-called leading journal of Bengal, "for exciting prurient imaginations by reopening up the horrible story of Cawnpore; nor do we see the necessity for holding a solemn court for trying the miscreant for crimes too revolting for discussion, or even for anything beyond the barest allusion. We want to hear as little as possible of that tragedy, and wish it could be consigned to oblivion. The Nana inherited all the personal property of the late Peishwa under the protection of the British Government, to whom he has been a traitor and a rebel, and he has been more or less mixed up in intriguing and conspiring against the British supremacy ever since the first revolt of the Sepoys. Let him, therefore, be tried for rebellion, and, if found guilty, be hung for high treason." Of course; all quietly—a kind of star-chamber trial, and an Inquisition execution, so that the sensibilities of the age may not be offended. We, however, fancy that the Calcutta press share this opinion amongst themselves. We want no quiet gibbeting of innocent, or even guilty, men; and we demand that the punishment of the miscreant who planned the massacre at Cawnpore should be as public as the crime was. Our contemporary may rest assured that the same heavens which shed light on the slaughter, will not withhold their splendour when incarnate cruelty gibbers out the last gasps of life, under the pressure of the running noose, which degrades even the sacred carcass of a Brahmin into common offal.

BENGAL.

THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE AND THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT.

A case has just occurred which will bring to a settlement the question how far the Duke of Cambridge's power of interference, so far as regards British troops serving in India, extends, or whether it does exist at all, or is to continue. Dr. Franklin, surgeon in medical charge of a Hussar regiment serving in the Upper Provinces, was selected by the Inspector-General of Hospitals to assume charge of the hospital-ship Bentinck; his services were placed at the disposal of Government by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, and he came down to Calcutta and joined his appointment. But no sooner had his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge heard of Dr. Franklin's nomination to the Bentinck than he wrote out, cancelling the appointment, and ordering that no regimental surgeon should in future be available for such transfer; and that Dr. Franklin was immediately to rejoin his regiment. So far so good, and all appeared going on well. Another medical officer was appointed to the Bentinck, and Dr. Franklin was on the point of starting for the Upper Provinces, when an order arrived for him to stand fast, the local Government having "failed to perceive" the Duke of Cambridge's right and legitimate power to interfere in the matter. We have always understood that the power of the Commander-in-Chief, concurring with the Indian Government, was supreme in such matters as that now under consideration; and we were therefore surprised at the Duke of Cambridge's interference when we announced its action. We sincerely hope that the Government of India will get the better in this disputed matter, as nothing could be worse than the establishment of a precedent which should give the home Commander-in-Chief a right of interference and dictation in the minor medical or other arrangements carried out in India, and deprive the Indian Commander-in-Chief of the power to place officers at the disposal of this Government, for the purpose of filling appointments for which they may be specially qualified. If the Duke of Cambridge can direct Indian appointments now, it is not very improbable that he will change them ere long; and if he is now to dictate what the Indian Government and Commander-in-Chief are not to do, his next step will in all probability be to dictate to them what they are to do. His Royal Highness is competent to order any medical or other officer to India, or home from India, and to send him anywhere he pleases; but we maintain that the medical arrangements of the Government of India and the Commander-in-Chief in India are beyond his legitimate jurisdiction. The question will, however, now be decided.—Englishman, August 18.

THE BURNEY CASE.

The Burney case has occupied all the past week in Calcutta. Colonel Burney, lately Brigadier at Dinapore, has brought an action against Captain Eyre, who was adjutant of her Majesty's 38th at the same station, and seeks £5,000 damages, under the following circumstances:—On the 10th February, 1862, after a ball at Dinapore, Brigadier Burney wrote a letter to Mrs. Willis, remarking on the ladies' dresses and on the name of Colonel Gordon's wife, and offering to pay half of the rent if he were allowed two rooms in the house for his office. Mrs. Willis's husband, Colonel Willis, was absent at Darjeeling, with a detachment of her Majesty's 38th, which he commanded; and, as his wife was unaccustomed to manage the servants and household affairs, the Colonel left Rs. 1,000 with Adjutant Eyre to supply her with what she wanted. On receiving this improper letter Mrs. Willis at once replied in a cold manner, and in a state of great agitation sent for Mr. Eyre, who with Col. Gordon, a distant relative of Mrs. Willis, and a married man, waited on the Brigadier in the evening, and in an authoritative tone ordered him not to address Mrs. Willis again. On this occasion Mr. Eyre told the Brigadier his conduct was that of a coward, and the Brigadier, protesting his great regret but his innocence of all evil intention, gave up Mrs. Willis's reply, which was subsequently destroyed, but a statement of which Colonel Willis gave from memory in Court. A fortnight after, Mrs. Willis again sent for Mr. Eyre to inform him that the Brigadier had, contrary to promise, been spreading reports in connection with her name. Mr. Eyre at once went to Colonel Burney, found him in bed, taxed him with his base and cowardly conduct, and was entertained in reply to remember that he, the Brigadier, was an old man and ought not to be beaten. Colonel Willis was informed of this; he appealed to General Campbell, commanding the Benares division, who, by the Commander-in-Chief's orders, held a court of inquiry, at which Mr. Eyre's statement was read, and generally corroborated by Colonel Gordon. Thereupon the Brigadier was asked to resign or stand a court martial, and he resigned. He then petitioned for a searching inquiry, which was not given him, and brought a civil action in the High Court based on Mr. Eyre's official statement as to the occasion on which the latter called him a coward, and the subsequent occasion when he asserted that the Brigadier asked him not to strike him. The case went to trial before Sir M. Wells on the two counts of libel and slander, and occupied the whole of this week. Judgment has been deferred for a week. The examination of General Campbell and Sir Hugh Rose was taken by commission, and that of Captain Eyre and Colonel Gordon de bene esse previous to their departure for England. The extraordinary confessions of Colonel Turner as to the duties of a Deputy Judge Advocate-general, added to such cases as Colonel Crawley's, will probably hasten some reform in military law and procedure. The case is very much one of a balance of probabilities as to the veracity of the plaintiff or defendant. It is to be regretted that the state of the law in India does not allow the case to go before a jury.—Friend of India.

COLONEL PRIESTLEY AGAIN.

Colonel Priestley, of H.M.'s 42nd Highlanders, seems determined to keep his name before the public, by fair means or foul. We have all read in our schoolboy days of the vain, egotistical fool who threw himself into Mount Æna in the hope that his contemporaries would believe he had been transplanted to the abodes of the gods. Nor have we forgotten how another dullard of the same stamp thought to win imperishable fame by firing the temple of Diana at Ephesus. This is the type to which Colonel Priestley appears anxious to belong. Despairing of ever gaining a distinguished reputation as a commander, he has contented himself with notoriety instead of renown. For a time his escapade at the Calcutta United Service Club spread his name abroad, far and wide, though the trumpet of Fame may have given forth a cracked and uncertain sound. But that brief period of delight was only too soon replaced by the nominal stillness and obscurity with which envious fortune had hedged in his path through life. Il n'y a rien qui brûle aussi vite que les fourriers secs, and Colonel Priestley's laurels have some time past reached the stage of the sere and yellow leaf. It is not, therefore, very surprising that he should lately have broken out in a fresh place. A month or so ago, as we learn from the Mofussilite, he paraded his regiment for church service during a heavy downfall of rain, through which he marched his men to church, where, of course, they had to sit out the service in their wet clothes. The natural consequence was, that on the following day there was an unusual number of admissions to the hospital. The surgeon of the regiment thereupon very properly remonstrated with the Colonel for exposing the men to such an unnecessary risk, and the merited rebuke seems to have been accepted patiently enough. But what action do our readers imagine was taken upon this medical remonstrance? It may seem almost incredible, but our Meerut contemporary positively asserts that the men have been strictly prohibited from attending divine service at all. The subsequent Sundays have been fine and free from wet, but the soldiers have not been permitted to enter the house of prayer. Such conduct far exceeds the tolerably wide license allowed for the caprices of commanding officers, and if it be allowed to pass unnoticed and unproved, it cannot do otherwise than exercise a very injurious effect on the discipline of that gallant and distinguished corps. It is not a question of eccentricity, or of mere deficiency in taste and good feeling. The welfare of a noble regiment is at stake, a matter of far too serious moment to be lightly trifled with. Colonel Priestley has proved himself quite unfitted for command, or to be entrusted with any grave responsibility. The sooner, therefore, he is removed, to make way for a better man, the more will it tend to the comfort and discipline of the Black Watch, and to the general interests of the service.—Bengal Hurkaru, August 18.

EXTORTIONS OF THE AMLAH.

Our Hare-street contemporary has done good yeoman service in drawing public attention to the extortions of the Amlah attached to our Law Courts. Some years ago Mr. Wilson, the magistrate of Moradabad, brought upon himself no small amount of odium by his fearless exposure of similar abuses in the Agra Courts, but truth at length prevailed, and he gained the respect of every honest man in the Upper Provinces. We trust that Mr. William Taylor will prove equally successful in the resolute stand he is now making against the corruption of the subordinate officers of the Mofussil Courts and the prejudices and imbecility of the native judges. The "squeezing" system is, indeed, one of the greatest curses of the East, where it has flourished from the most remote antiquity. "A gift in the hand," says an ancient writer, who, though both a king and a Jew, had singularly large views on the subject of mankind, "perverteth the judgment of the wise." It may be that in the case noticed by our contemporary, there was no positive perversion of judgment, but, if so, such a happy result must have been due to chance rather than to the wisdom and integrity of the native judge. Appearances, however, are most unfavourable to the exercise of charity, and should Abdool Azeez succeed in obtaining damages from Mr. Tayler, it will be vain to look for any purification of the course of justice as administered in the interior. For who will undertake to cleanse that Augean stable if his only reward is the annoyance of a law-suit terminating in a pecuniary mulct? But it is not merely in the Law Courts that this pernicious system of "squeezing" prevails. It flourishes also among those who are engaged in mercantile pursuits, and it has been publicly stated by an otherwise honourable and high-minded English gentleman that even European merchants of "credit and renown" are in the habit of taking dustoor. It exists, we fear, in every public department and in every walk of life in this country. On the railways it is carried out to a most disgraceful extent among the native officials. A gentleman was waiting the other day at a small station for the arrival of the train, when a native came upon the platform with an enormous basket of mangoes. "What!" exclaimed the native station-master, "do you expect to take that great basket with you?" The poor fellow respectfully answered in the affirmative, and produced his receipt for payment of carriage. "It is too late," answered the official in a harsh tone of authority. "It cannot go to-day—it must wait till to-morrow. You ought to have sent it here yesterday." The peasant humbly observed that the fruit would not keep till the morrow, and that the train was not even yet in sight. The Baboo refused to hear him and walked slowly away. Presently the fruit-dealer slid up to him, and said something in a very low voice. He then returned to his basket, picked out exactly two dozen and a-half of fine fruit, and carried them to the station-master. A few minutes more, and the train arrived, the basket was placed in the van, and away sped both the peasant and his mangoes. On another occasion a poor man tendered his fare in small copper coins, which were indignantly refused, and he was told to bring his money in a more convenient form. In vain he pleaded want of time to procure change, naively adding that he did not possess another piece, or he would willingly offer it to his Honour. This confession of abject poverty was fatal. He was told that a small offering was expected in such cases, and unless he could comply with the dustoor, he would not be allowed to proceed. So the train passed on, and the poor man had to content himself with admiring the velocity at which it travelled. These two cases illustrate what is done at every small station on every railway throughout the country. They do more than this, for they illustrate the all-pervading corruption, the rottenness at the core, which checks all progress in India and counteracts every measure adopted for the improvement of the country and the regeneration of its inhabitants. Corruption, apathy, and self-conceit are the infames scopuli on which the people of India have been wrecked from time immemorial, and to extricate them from which seems well-nigh a hopeless task.—Bengal Hurkaru, August 8.

THE TELEGRAPH.

The telegraph of India would be a disgrace to gorillas, although the taking of money by them for a service they cannot perform would be pardoned in animals without their moral sense developed. As we believe the directors and conductors of telegraph business in India claim to have some sense of right and wrong, and admit that they have some moral responsibility, we ask them what they mean by taking money for telegrams which they do not transmit at once to their destination? The telegraph was designed to send information on human affairs, as if by a flash, so that people in Agra, for instance, could convey the knowledge of events in an instant to the people of Mussoorie. Were this really done, we might often be aware of an Agra occurrence in Mussoorie before the intelligence could be sent by a messenger from one house to another in Agra itself. Yet how have we been treated? Overlooking disgraceful verbal blunders for the present, telegrams despatched from Agra on the 24th to Mussoorie arrived here on the 27th, hours after the arrival of the Delhi Gazette containing the identical items! This was not what we had bargained for. We applied for the telegrams on the clear understanding that they should reach days before, and not hours after the same intelligence could come by the regular post! We must make the cost good to the Delhi Gazette, of course, but surely we have a clear right to a refund from Government for all the telegrams that have crawled hither this month since the 22nd. Colonel Douglas cannot surely object to order that we shall be thus held scatheless.

We have had five telegrams from Agra since the 22nd of July, and these are the details of the performance:—

The first took twenty-six hours in transit.

The second took thirty hours and a-half in transit.

The third took seventy-five hours in transit.

The fourth took seventy-seven hours in transit.

The fifth took forty-six hours in transit.

And yet from Agra to Mussoorie the distance is not quite 240 miles! No doubt the "clever" plan of repeating at Allighur—again at Delhi—again at Meerut—again at Roorkee—and finally at Hurdwar, must occupy needlessly five or six hours. If the Indian telegraph cannot transmit 250 miles at one flash, then we fear it is a very poor affair indeed. If it is necessary, owing to the feebleness of the instruments, or the folly of the managers, to repeat a message every fifty miles, the sooner Lord Elgin and Mr. Drummond cause a radical reform of the general and particular arrangements of the department the better for the public interest. The telegraph department is a disgrace to the Government of India.

POSTSCRIPT.—On the back of our telegram of the 21st a subscriber to the Delhi Gazette thus writes:—"What is the use of this? As usual, I got this telegram, and a later one in the Delhi Gazette, two hours since."—The Hills.

ENGLISH PLANTERS IN INDIA.

"Three-fourths of all the money which the most successful settler expends on his land goes for ever into the possession of his native workmen. The 'settler' labours, in a word, more for their benefit than for his own. We are not soft enough to maintain that the settler gives his money away in charity; it is the necessity of his condition that he cannot attain to his own advantage, except through the help of natives paid for the same. It is thus really mostly for the benefit of the aborigines that settlers prosecute their arduous calling; and every true friend of the natives has accordingly welcomed and assisted the 'settler' as the pioneer of improvement, and the direct benefactor of the people whom he entertains."

So writes The Hills, a little journal published at Mussoorie, in the planter's interest. It is from no love of paradox, nor from any wish to depreciate the settler, that we affirm, in reply to the writer of this passage, that the advantages derived by the people of India from the presence of the planter are far from being as important as he supposes. So settled is the belief that India is to derive immense advantages from the enterprise of English planters, that it is almost dangerous to venture upon an investigation of its grounds. And yet nothing can be more superficial than popular impressions upon the point. If we inquire at all closely into the subject, it will appear that almost all the direct advantages of this enterprise are claimed by the planter himself, and that the indirect ones the country may hope to reap therefrom are by no means of the magnitude popularly assigned them. It seems to be overlooked that there is a very wide difference between the successful cultivation of a new article of export upon the waste lands of a country, and the successful cultivation of the same article upon the lands already under cultivation. Tea and coffee planting upon the waste mountain slopes of India will have an altogether different effect upon the country, from the successful cultivation of the same products in the plains. The successful growth of a new export in the cultivated lands of a country enhances the value of its whole area; not so the growth of a new export upon its wastes. In the former case, the export displaces less remunerative crops; and, contracting the acreage under food, will raise the value of all descriptions of produce together, to the indefinite advantage of the agriculturist. In the case of hill wastes, however, brought under cultivation with products that cannot be grown in the plain, it seems certain that the agriculturist must lose all that the labouring class gain. In other words, the demand for labour upon the hill plantations makes labour dearer in the plains. The labourer will gain by this, of course; but it will be at the expense of the ryot, who will find the cost of cultivation proportionately enhanced of every staple in which he has to compete with other lands. Thus the chief advantage the tea and coffee planter's presence brings with it is counterbalanced by the injury it inflicts on the cultivator of the plains. The cultivation of tea and coffee in the hills makes the cost of producing cotton and linseed in the plains greater than before; and by so much, places the producer at a disadvantage in competing with the agriculture of other lands. It is important to remember that this is not the case of a land suffering under a surplussage of labour, but of a land in which the dearth of labour is already severely felt. We trust that no one will suppose that we repine at the labourer's good fortune. We are simply pointing out considerations in connection with European planting that have been, we think, overlooked.

In the next place, the planter in nineteen cases out of twenty will be an "absentee landlord," drawing a large revenue, as time wears on, from India, and spending it in England. This, of itself, is a very important consideration, hardly counterbalanced by the fact that the plantations will pass eventually by purchase into native hands, since the purchase money of these estates, their capitalised value, will find its way, sooner or later, to Europe. The money paid by the planter for the fee simple of the land is too trifling in amount to be worth estimating in this inquiry. What, then, are the advantages which India is to derive from a cultivation and an increased trade, the profits of which go to enrich, not her own children, but aliens? No doubt it will be replied that the mere presence of a body of Europeans in the country engaged in such pursuits will exercise a very beneficial influence upon the education and the future of the people. We are disposed to allow full weight to this consideration; but are afraid that the history of colonization in all parts of the world is far from encouraging the anticipations formed on this head. To come nearer home, what have the indigo planters done for Bengal during the half century of their fortune-making therein? What could be more demoralising to both races than the nature of the relations subsisting between them at its close? And as to securing good government for the people, the planters were willing enough to have allowed the old state of matters to have remained until doomsday, so long as their own powers remained intact. Take, again, the case of the Assam and Cachar plantations lately before the Legislature; what could be more painful than the facts brought to light concerning the mode of securing labour for those plantations, and treating it when there?—Times of India.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES IN CALCUTTA.

The worst results which were predicted by the adversaries of the adoption of the principal of "limited liability" into English law seem to have been achieved in the Anglo Indian metropolis; and of all the cities in the world, it might have been foretold that Calcutta would offer the most disadvantageous sphere for the working of this kind of partnership. No company of the character can, as a rule, be expected to work well, unless both directors and shareholders exercise a conscientious and watchful supervision over its management and its finances. At home, notwithstanding that instances of scandalous breaches of trust on the part of directors, and culpable negligence on the part of shareholders, are not unfrequently revealed in the Bankruptcy Court, yet it is probable, on the whole, that a body of directors and shareholders embarked in a joint-stock company will exercise sufficient vigilance in protecting their own interests; for this reason, that the pursuits of the majority of men in England, and the advantages of a good climate, leave them sufficiently free to bestow some spare time and labour on speculations of this nature. But in India the case is different. As a general rule, there is no idle or unoccupied public among Europeans in the whole country; the hands and brains of business men are fully occupied with their own avocations; no country in the world offers so little leisure; and no climate in the world can make a man more indisposed to plunge himself into other work than that which claims the chief investment of his energies. In spite of all this, however, it was to be expected that when once the system of joint-stock companies (limited) was set fairly afloat, just such a rage would set in, for it as has set in; and that the thing would be pushed to as ridiculous an extreme as the famous Mississippi bubble. In a large commercial community like Calcutta, in a country where everybody in a general way contrives to save money, to make a fortune as rapidly as possible, and then quit the country, there is necessarily a large amount of uninvested capital, and a feverish eagerness to catch hold of every opportunity of increasing it. Capital being the primum mobile in such undertakings, the ingenious artificers of joint-stock companies found in Calcutta one of the most fertile fields possible for their inventions.

In the first place, there are always people possessing thriving or non-thriving businesses, who want to retire and go home, and to get rid of their stock-in-trade and the good will of their houses, at a handsome profit and with no risk as to payment; and for such purpose no machinery can be more favourable than a joint-stock company. In the next place, there are always businesses wanting capital; and would-be-traders who have no business and no capital to commence with. In any case, the most convenient form of accomplishing the end desired is either to convert the business into a company, or to start a business with the aid of a company. In the latter way it is surprising what results are daily achieved by men without capital or qualifications. If A., without anything in the world but his debts, and no particular character, desired to embark in business on his own account, he would find it very difficult to get B. C. D., &c., to provide him with the necessary capital; but by the aid of a joint-stock company, the thing becomes simple in the extreme, and B. C. D., &c., will not only buy up, at a price immeasurably beyond its intrinsic value, a business of questionable solvency for the benefit of A., but take on themselves all the risk of the speculation, and put A. beyond all the chance of failure, by giving him a fixed salary as manager or secretary.

Such appears to have been the success of Mr. Roussac, as evidenced by the recent trial reported in the Englishman, and commented on in its leading articles. Mr. Roussac was, as the learned judge remarked, not only not a capitalist, but in debt to various firms to a considerable amount. Mr. Roussac nevertheless succeeded in getting up the Bengal Printing Company (Limited), and in being appointed secretary at 500 rupees a month, with the virtually uncontrolled management of the affairs of the company. Mr. Roussac made ducks and drakes of the company's money, and took the company's money out of the till, and used the company's till precisely as suited his own convenience. He borrowed of the company to pay old debts of his own, then borrowed for the company at 12 per cent., and managed the loans and the finances of the company precisely as suited his convenience, without the slightest interference from the directors. When audit day came it was necessary, however, to present a fair balance-sheet to the auditors and the shareholders; and a printed balance-sheet was craftily "cooked" and published for the benefit of the shareholders; while another balance sheet was reserved for the eyes of the initiated. But the point connected with the case, which is chiefly significant of the blind infatuation of the Calcutta public, is, that notwithstanding these disclosures of the unsound management and insolvent state of the company, the shares of the Bengal Printing Company are still quoted at a premium.

Another curious example is afforded by the druggist shop of Scott, Thompson, and Co., which also, under the magic touch of the limited principle, has sprung up into the dignity of a company; the old proprietors selling off their old stock-in-trade to the new company at so pretty a figure, that we hear of the item of quinine alone was set down at a lac of rupees. The investing public rushed with such avidity into the affair of Scott, Thompson, and Co. to become partners in keeping an apothecary's shop, that shares were quoted at a premium of 200 to 210 rupees per share. Yet, strange to say, their secretary advertised on 25th July that a quorum of members could not be got together to confirm the articles of association, and until this can be done the company has no legal existence. But the present mania in Calcutta seems to be one which neither exposure nor warning can moderate in the slightest degree. The affairs of a company may be shown to be desperate; the management radically bad; dividends to be made out of the capital, or not made at all; and yet its shares still continue at a premium. Speculators still rush forward and claim to become tailors, hatters, bootmakers, or saddlers in partnership, and trust, we suppose, to Providence to supply industry, knowledge of the trade, and habits of business, if they throw but a handful of capital into the till. Most of the companies, however, owe the premiums at which their shares are quoted to the manœuvring and jobbery of persons who never intend to look at the various speculations in any other light than a method of playing "hanky-panky" with the money of the indolent and gullible public. Having cunningly introduced a pasteboard and buckram company, every dodge, honest and dishonest, is set to work to get the shares to a premium; upon which their temporary holders foist the scrip off upon others, and then direct all their energies to the creation of another company, about which their sole consideration is how it may best impose upon the public. In the columns of the Calcutta press, most notorious for the promptitude and vigour of their strictures against native fraud and cunning, are now constantly to be read scornful, satirical, and sometimes humorous strictures on the present aspect of speculations in that city. Anglo-Indian commercial delinquencies are exposed, it is true, but with a lighter and more delicate touch than the failings of our Indian fellow-subjects meet with. Nevertheless, even from them we glean sufficient to know that such a state of things is likely to operate most injuriously, as an example and training, on the native mind and commercial spirit.—Times of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A COSTLY FRUIT.—His Majesty of Ava has just paid for 1,000 doorian fruit brought from Moulmein the astonishing sum of Rs. 6,000. This fruit, which is an abomination to Europeans, is intended for the use of the ladies of his court. The demand for the fruit at Moulmein has been so great that the price has risen from one anna to Rs. 8 each.

THE KING OF DELHI—There is a probability of a marriage between one of the sons of the late titular King of Delhi, now a state prisoner at Rangoon, and the daughter of an old Mussulman in the town. As it is impossible to prevent the perpetuation of the family the prisoners ought to be removed to England, like the late Rajah of Coorg and the Ranee Chunda of Lahore. The latter, the mother of the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, who so long intrigued against us, both before her incarceration in Chunar and after her escape to Nepal, is under the charge of a lady long well known for her management of a native female school in Calcutta. The "interesting" prisoners kept on subsistence allowance in Rangoon might in England become useful and harmless members of society.

THE OFFICERS OF THE DACOITY COMMISSIONERS in the provinces of Bengal and Behar, together with their office establishments, have at last been finally abolished, and the officers holding those appointments have been admitted in the new police establishment. Mr. Reiley, the commissioner for the suppression of dacoity in Lower Bengal, has been appointed the head of the detective force lately raised under Mr. Carnac, inspector-general of police.

SIMLA, August 22.—The Commander-in-Chief is thinking of going into Cashmere about the end of September, taking Captains Burne and Moore, respectively private secretary and head quarters staff interpreter, with him. He will thence visit Peshawur, and join the camp of exercise at Lahore in the latter end of December. This camp will consist of four troops of horse artillery, four batteries of field artillery, two regiments of Hussars (20th and 21st), five regiments of British infantry, and six regiments of native infantry, in all about 47 guns and 11,000 men. The Rifle Brigade from Delhi are to form the Governor General's escort during his ensuing tour through the Punjab. The Court of Inquiry on the dak bungalow squabble has ended its labours, and the proceedings are now in the hands of the Judge Advocate General, and will soon be laid before the Commander-in-Chief. At first it was intended that the Court should record its opinion on the case; but after the inquiry had been proceeded with for some days, Colonel Lawrence, the father of, and who is assisting, the plaintiff in the matter, solicited and obtained the sanction of his Excellency to the Court's doing no more than simply recording the evidence on both sides, leaving it to the Commander-in-Chief to decide upon the merits of the same. The affair has created a great scandal, and is the talk of the station. The newspaper versions are nearly correct, and both Captain Hill and Ensign Lawrence have their backers. There can, however, be no doubt that Captain Hill was the original offender. Had he not, in the first instance, violated the dak bungalow rules, no row would have ensued. And it is not admissible that Ensign Lawrence, in asking for the room, so deported himself in the presence of his mother and three other ladies as to justify the assault on him by Captain Hill. You will see that this will be the upshot of the present investigation, and, in all probability, a court-martial the painful result. No one doubts that Sir Hugh Rose will act with as much justice as severity in a case of this scandalous kind; and I do think that the whole affair calls for an example. His Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief, has just issued cards for a ball on Wednesday evening next, the 26th instant. The hospitalities of Sir Hugh Rose have been princely throughout the season. I shall send you a full account of the ball.—Times of India, August 31.

BURMAH.—We have received Rangoon and Moulmain papers to the 8th and 5th August respectively. The Prince of Thonzai had yielded to the solicitations of the envoy sent by his father, and had left Rangoon in the king's steamer for Mandalay. Considerable doubt is felt as to whether the king will act up to his promises of forgiveness; and the prince is much blamed for crediting such equivocal assurances. It is stated in the Rangoon Times that the prince was forcibly seized and carried on board the steamer, which left almost immediately afterwards. If this turns out to be the case, which is not very likely, the reception he will meet with on his arrival may be safely prophesied. Considerable sickness prevailed in the town of Rangoon; small-pox and dysentery has been committing frightful ravages among the poorer class of the natives. The recall of Dr. Williams, the agent of the British Government at Mandalay, was considered tolerably certain, the Chief Commissioner having expressed himself as anything but satisfied with him as a Political Agent. It is asserted that Dr. Williams turned teetotaler upon the Royal edict being issued that no intoxicating liquors were to be allowed to pass the frontier line. At any rate he does not appear to have offered any opposition to the order being carried out, through indirect contravention of the late Treaty. Drunkenness is said to be every year on the increase among the Burmese, and it is proposed to memorialise the Government to impose a much heavier duty upon native spirits. The mission controversy, which has never altogether subsided, has been renewed with redoubled energy in the columns of the local press. The Rev. Mr. Cross is now charged by the Rev. Mr. Mason with publishing his grievances in American papers with a view to create a favourable impression as to the part he has acted, to the disadvantage of his opponent. From Moulmain we learn that Major Fraser's appointment of Secretary to the Public Works Department has been cancelled at his own request, and that that gentleman will continue to carry on the works in course of construction at the Alguada Reef and Cocos Island. The exploration of the Salween River by Lieutenants Watson and Sconce, determined upon by the Government of India, has given rise to much discussion. The great importance and necessity for the survey is admitted; but it is urged that the party should be supplemented by others conversant with the country to be travelled through. Mr. O'Reilly and Dr. Brandis are named as being specially qualified for the work.—Hurkaru.

ENSIGN DWYER.—The charge against Ensign P. Dwyer, barrackmaster at Dum Dum and Barrackpore, has been entirely withdrawn, and that officer has consequently been released from arrest. We understand that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief wrote upon the subject in a very kind and considerate spirit, and Ensign Dwyer comes forth from the furnace of tribulation without a hair of his head being singed.

OPIMUM RULES IN BURMAH.—The Rangoon Times is loud in denouncing the opium and Abkaree rules which are fast demoralising British Burma, like all other parts of our Eastern Empire. The hitherto abstemious Burman looks now for his dram on a wet day, and craves after spirituous liquors and opium as much as his brother unfortunates of other countries. "The Burman prefers opium to spirits, imitating the Chinese in this vice, and the lamentably fallacious apology, offered in the Budget speech of Sir Charles Trevelyan, is another reason why Government should at once by a noble effort disconnect itself with the miserable opium monopoly." The evil lies in the unchecked increase of licensed dram and drug shops, that the Abkaree collectors may obtain the praise of Government for the addition they have made to the revenue. Wherever there are municipalities and honorary magistrates they should be associated with the magistrate in licensing shops.—Friend of India.

SIKH PIONEERS.—A letter from Ceylon in the Mofussile gives a sad account of the "Sikh Pioneers" who have been sent to that colony. A corps of military labourers used to exist in Ceylon, who made roads, but owing to better pay and easier work being available on the coffee plantations it was impossible to keep up their number. A bright idea struck the Colonial Secretary, who wrote to the Punjab Government, requesting the enlistment of a "Pioneer Corps" with regular officers. 1,000 men were enlisted, and 500 landed in Ceylon, in regular uniform and under an officer. On arrival they were marched to a barrack, guards were mounted, and on asking for their arms they were marched up country in five divisions. They were then ordered to break stones and repair the roads, which they respectfully but firmly refused to do, stating that they were engaged as soldiers, and would do soldiers' work, but that they were not coolies. On refusal to work they were put on half rations of the worst quality. The first division held out several days, but being told to work or starve, they gave in. They again struck, but starvation and flogging made them submissive, and they are again at work. The second division has struck and will not work. They are on half rations, have had no pay for 3½ months, have sold their clothes and lotahs for food, and are now starving. They are all high caste men, and many have been soldiers. Major Skinner, their commander, talks of "coercing or starving" these poor men who have been so cruelly deceived. One of their number has died of starvation, his comrades who brought his body in to complain had all their rations stopped. In spite of their sufferings their orderly behaviour is the admiration of every one. The magistrate who inspected them a short time ago appealed to Government in their behalf, but only got a "fearful wiggling" for his pains. Great fault must rest with some one in India, as these men would never have signed any agreement binding them to work as coolies, as they say, "If you had wanted coolies, surely there were lots to be had. You need not engage men of our class: were we reduced to this, we could get employment in our own country." Major Macmullen, who raised the force, must have put all right by this time. This is only another example of the folly of India sacrificing her precious labour.

GUNNER LANGFORD.—The Kurrachee papers are "inundated," as were the Calcutta papers of late, with one huge subject, namely, the "Foujdardar." The following item we take, however, from the Sindian, whose information has been somewhat obscure in two points, one of which is rather amusing, being the very converse of what the gunner named was accused of:—"We are happy to see in the general orders, that Gunner Langford has been allowed to take his discharge by purchase. This man, it will be recollected, was tried by court-martial in Meerut nearly two years ago, for writing to the Mofussile, calling upon the men of the Company's army to elect for local service. The proof of the authorship of the article was obtained in a most disgraceful way, by Colonel Huish, who broke open Langford's desk. Langford was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment. While in confinement, he wrote a volume of poems, several of them of much merit. We believe that about three years ago he applied for leave to buy his discharge, but was refused. Had he been granted the privilege he has now obtained, another scandal would have been spared the service, as well as much suffering to a man of fine feeling and remarkable talent." Gunner Longford was condemned for inciting the men not to elect for local service. Whether this charge is true or not remains yet to be decided. As for the "volume of poems" written in prison, the gunner only wrote a very few, which he had to bury in the earth for some days, in order to keep them from the vigilant eyes of Colonel Huish, who "wanted" them. Two of them have appeared in this journal. As to the disgraceful way in which the desk was entered, Col. Huish can be "Colonel Crawleyized" in his turn, as soon as the Mhow affair is over—probably next Christmas twelve months!—Delhi Gazette.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday, Aug. 18, the body of a middle-aged European, named Alfred James Risley, an assistant to Mr. Lawrence Smith, the wharfinger, at Boree Bunder, of the G.I.P. Railway, was taken out of a tank, which is partially covered over, and nearly opposite the station-master's quarters at Byculla. From information received on the spot it appears that the deceased and Mr. Smith had been spending the previous evening with Mr. Devlin, the station-master at Byculla, and left at about half-past ten p.m. to catch the up train which was then about to leave Byculla for Boree Bunder. After crossing the line the deceased jumped on to a low parapet wall, on the other side of which lay the tank, thinking, no doubt, the night being dark, that it was the platform of the station. He fell over immediately into the tank, and Mr. Smith, who was at the time a little in front of him, hearing a fall, looked round, and, missing his companion, held the lantern over the tank, but could not see him. A rope was procured and let down, but all efforts throughout the night to obtain the body were unavailing. It is supposed that the body had got underneath that portion of the tank which is covered over. After dragging for several hours, the next morning the deceased was taken out, and his body presented a sad sight. His face exhibited marks of injury, apparently caused by being dashed against the rocks in the tank. The following is the verdict of the coroner's jury:—"Accidental death; but the jury are of opinion that there is a want of proper precaution on the part of the railway company to prevent such accidents, and they recommend that the parapet-wall alluded to in the evidence be heightened to, say, six feet along the whole length of the tank."

SCINDHIA.—It is remarked by everyone that Scindhia, during his late visit to Cawnpore, took great pains to feed the Brahmins of Bithoor, and impress them with his sympathy for the misfortunes of the Bithoor family, the Nana and the rest. He spent 80,000 rupees in alms, and visited and did homage in all the Hindoo temples at Bithoor, where he remained for several days. The natives, more than ourselves, look upon all this as very ominous, and no doubt admire, at the same time, our simplicity and toleration.

BAREILLY, August 10.—It is rumoured here, in the bazaar, that a break between the British Government and Sir Jung Bahadour, K.C.B., impends. Why? deponent sayeth not. It is also believed here that a Manchester Company has been formed to work the 20,000 acres of waste lands held at present by Messrs. Menzies and Saunders in Mohumdee. Numerous appointments ranging from Rs. 100 up to Rs. 500 are expected to be open under the new company, and I believe a few applicants are already preparing. The next object of attraction is the Lucknow and Cawnpore Railway, the first sod of which is expected to be turned in October next.

MAHARAJAH OF GWALIOR.—Either the Gwalior Maharajah, who has had such an abundance of benefits heaped upon him by the British Government since the mutinies, in token of gratitude for his somewhat equivocal adhesion to their interests, is greatly and persistently belied by writers in the north west, or else he need to be closely looked after, as a wolf in sheep's clothing. Ugly rumours regarding him are constantly becoming current.

MADRAS.

THE NEILGHERY HILLS.

The salubrity or non-salubrity of the Neilgherry Hills has latterly been much questioned, and the opinions of medical officers have differed considerably. A report has just been submitted to the Madras Government by the senior medical officer at Ootacamund, from which we are enabled to gather some reliable data as to the points in dispute. The number of deaths among Europeans during 1862 was fifty-nine, of whom thirty-three were males and twenty-six females. The causes of death were chiefly dysentery, fever, and pneumonia. Of the first there were eight cases, of the second forty-two, and the third three. The mortality among the natives during 1862 was less than 1861, but the report states that this result was owing "not so much to any amelioration in the sanitary condition of the natives as from the difficulty of obtaining accurate information." The uselessness of entrusting the police with the preparation of the mortuary returns is strongly urged by Dr. Stewart, who recommends the Government to adopt measures for obtaining more accurate returns in future. He writes:—

I am quite of opinion that many more deaths have taken place than are shown in this return, and I have now only to urge the great necessity of making it compulsory on all classes to report when any death or birth takes place. It is also most essential that a census of the population should annually be made to enable one to form a correct estimate of the number of inhabitants.

Fevers of a low type have been much more prevalent of late years, and are attributed to the absence of all drainage. With regard to the present condition of Ootacamund, we extract from the report the opinion expressed by Dr. Stewart.

It would be very sad indeed were it to be said that this beautiful climate of Ootacamund was no longer pure, invigorating, and a desirable place of residence. But unless the measures I have endeavoured to explain as being necessary are very soon acted upon and made law, I believe that Ootacamund will be productive of serious disease, and that fevers of the worst form, small-pox, and other malignant disorders will have their origin in that beautiful Sanitarium! then no longer a place of refuge to the sick. From nearly four years' experience I can confidently say that the fever of late years has assumed a formidable type, and the state of Ootacamund has correspondingly increased in filth and in its number of inhabitants.

Surely the Madras Government, after this special report, will make an effort to restore the character which Ootacamund at one time enjoyed of being one of the most healthy hill stations in the Madras presidency.

DOES MADRAS PAY?

Some months ago the Friend of India kept up a perpetual fire at Madras, her Governor, and everybody and everything connected with her. Our merchants were described as spiritless beings, our ryotwary system was derided, and, in short, the Madras Presidency was said to be a dead weight on the revenues of India. Luckily for us, we are better acquainted with the resources of this portion of the empire than is the Friend of India; and although we refuted, at the time when they appeared, several of the statements put forward by him, we did not deem it advisable to strip him and his Presidency of the feathers which he had placed on their own heads. Now, however, it is time to do so; for, though he is not quite so rash in his statements regarding Madras as he was a short time back, yet he never lets slip an opportunity of showing his spite against this, the most prosperous portion of the empire. We have received a Parliamentary return which supplies us with all the information we require for the purpose of instituting a comparison between the revenues of Madras and Bengal; and we doubt not that the figures therein contained will carry conviction to the mind of our most stubborn opponent. Before proceeding with the comparison, we must beg our readers to remember, that, as the geography books have it, Bengal is acknowledged to be the most fertile province of India. The waters of the Ganges and its numerous tributaries render the rich soil of that district capable of producing most abundant crops; while, owing to its containing the Central Government, in addition to its own local government, more attention is bestowed on the improvement of its roads, canals, and other internal means of communication, than on those in any other part of India. Madras, on the contrary, though covering a much wider area than Bengal, is not nearly so well favoured either by nature or by the Government. Vast tracts in this Presidency are mere waste, which we cannot hope to see cultivated for years to come; and it is only in the deltas formed by our puny rivers that the natural productiveness of the land is at all equal to that of Bengal. Yet, in spite of the adverse circumstances under which Madras labours, we are in a position to show that she can hold up her head with Bengal; and we trust that for the future the papers of the Northern Presidency will be good enough to allow us credit for what we have already achieved, and that no feelings of jealousy will actuate them when discussing Madras affairs. If it were not for the numerous taunts and upbraidings we have received at the hands of our Bengal contemporaries, we should not attempt to disparage the position to which it is stated Bengal has attained. But, for our own justification, we are compelled to administer this rebuke, and to put forward the claims of Madras to be considered as one of the best paying Presidencies in India.

In the returns for 1861-62, which we have before us, £3,914,156 are put down to the credit of Bengal as the net receipts from opium. Madras is, we are sorry to say, prohibited from entering into this lucrative business, so that the receipts under the above head from this Presidency are nil. We shall, therefore, in making our comparison, leave out the item we have just mentioned, as also a large portion of the revenue derived from salt, since the Bengalees do not pay one-half the amount credited to their account on that score. The receipts from salt were £2,078,677, but as a large portion of this sum must have been paid by the people of the North-West Provinces and of the districts surrounding Bengal, we are justified in putting down the salt receipts at one million or less. A glance at the two tables we give below will be sufficient to convince most people that Madras is not very far behind the favoured Presidency in the amount contributed to the Exchequer:—

BENGAL.		Net Receipts.
Land revenue	...	£4,115,625
Sayer and miscellaneous	...	32,687
Abkaree	...	5,10,941
Tributes, &c.	...	30
Total	...	£4,660,283
MADRAS.
Land revenue	...	£4,082,069
Sayer and miscellaneous	...	69,253
Abkaree	...	3,33,466
Tributes, &c.	...	3,44,643
Total	...	£4,829,431

When we come to assessed taxes, we confess that Bengal beats Madras; the amount returned by the former is £6,18,006, by the latter £2,78,892. This disparity is accountable to a certain extent to the great facilities for trade which exist in Bengal, which is the natural outlet for the whole of the productions of Northern India and the immense tracts of country to the south of that Presidency. A similar disparity exists between the amounts returned under the head of customs: Bengal yielded £1,248,501, and Madras £2,26,356. We shall be greatly obliged if the Friend of India will tell us the exact portion of this sum paid by Bengal Proper, and the portion which must be deducted on account of the goods destined for the use of the inhabitants of the North-West Provinces, the tributary states, and other districts not under the authority of the Bengal Secretariat. The return from salt in Madras was £8,68,323, a sum fully equal to that paid by the Bengalees, while the cost of collection was £1,08,845, whereas the cost of collection for the £2,078,677 returned by Bengal, was £4,75,048, or nearly double the Madras rate. Under the headings stamps, law, marine, public works, we are far below Bengal, but from miscellaneous sources, Madras returned £277,510 against £47,968 by Bengal. Turning to the cost of collection, the two Presidencies are pretty evenly balanced. The sums shown in the above table were collected in Bengal at a cost of 7.052 per cent.; in Madras at 10.048 per cent. The collection of assessed taxes in Bengal was 9.581 per cent.; in Madras 4.362 per cent.; of customs 4.734 per cent. in Bengal, and 7.077 in Madras. The stamp receipts in the Northern Presidency cost 4.092 per cent. collecting; the salt 7.975 per cent.; in Madras the charges were 3.815 per cent. for stamps, and 3.782 per cent. for salt.

The above facts cannot be gainsaid; and we trust our Bengal contemporaries will duly digest them. When we turn to the charges incurred by each Presidency, we find Madras debited with much larger sums than she has any right to pay. The military expenditure is put down at £3,941,563, but it is not shown what portion of that sum ought to be charged to the Government of India. We pay for the defence of the Provinces over the Bay; although the revenue derived from those provinces is not credited to our account. In all fairness the military charges incurred in Pegu and Burmah should be debited to the Government of India, for Madras has nothing to do with the general administration of those districts. In consequence of Bengal having to pay no military charges, and that she is credited with the opium revenue, which is really paid by the Chinese, together with salt and custom revenues, that come out of the pockets of other people, she is put down as returning a surplus of upwards of eight millions to the Government of India. Madras, on the other hand, is, by a piece of legerdemain, shown up as not being able to pay its own expenses. There is a deficit of rather more than forty thousand rupees. We know, however, from what we have mentioned above, the absurdity of saying that Madras does not pay its way. If we had to draw up the tables of account for the two Presidencies, we could show clearly that the actual revenue derived from the pockets of the Madrasees is as large as, if not larger than, that paid by the Bengalees. Too much juggling is displayed in the arrangements of the tables before us to please any impartial person, so we have taken the trouble to show what are the actual sums derived from both Presidencies. When Bengal is called upon to bear her fair share of military charges, when she does not lay claim to customs duties paid by other consumers, to salt revenue drawn from the adjoining districts, and to the proceeds from opium, she will not show a better balance-sheet than Madras. We hope that the Friend of India will set us right if we have stated the case of Madras versus Bengal unfairly; and that, if he find us to be correct in our assertions, he will put an end to his sneers and jeers, which he is so fond of indulging in at the expense of Madras.—Athenaeum and Statesman, August 14.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEUT. S. SIMPSON.—We regret to announce the death, at the Presidency, of Lieut. S. Simpson, of the European Veterans, Deputy Commissary, Commissariat Department, which melancholy event occurred yesterday. His remains will be interred at 8 A.M. this day, at St. Andrew's Burial Ground, with the usual military honours.—Madras Times, Aug. 26.

THE LORD BISHOP OF MADRAS leaves the Presidency on the 10th Sept., on a pastoral tour to Cuddapah, Nellore, and Pulicat. His lordship is expected to return to Madras on or about the 28th proximo.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON.—The stay of Sir William Denison in Bangalore did not create the least sensation, although it is a long while since Mysore has been visited by a real live Governor. His Excellency is not a very lively specimen of the article, and with a care for his health and appearance, for a sun-burnt Governor would be an anomaly, he never stirred out after eight o'clock in the morning, which might be very proper in Madras, or your red-hot Agra, but in the splendid climate of Bangalore—especially at this period of the year—is being unnecessarily careful. I had, consequently, with the rest of the public, no opportunity of having a good “dekho” at him, until he went to church on a Sunday morning, and then I found Sir William was not like his brothers, tall and stately, but was a stout, respectable, elderly gentleman, something like a confidential banker's clerk, or a well-to-do country attorney. He has, however, the peculiar look about the eyes of his late brother, the Lord Bishop of Salisbury, and which the engraving after Pickersgill conveys a very good idea of Sir William's rule in Madras, cannot be said to have added to his reputation. This must not, however, I think, be attributed so much to the want of ability on his part, but rather to fetters imposed on him by the Secretary at home. When in Tasmania and New South Wales, Sir William was much liked, and generally esteemed a model Governor. Then, however, he had free Englishmen to deal with, and it is not impossible that his Yorkshire predilections do not dispose him very favourably towards the cringing race he has now to deal with. At all events, he has done nothing yet at all to come up with expectation. He has now left Bangalore for Thurnool, to decide a vexed question about police between himself and Sir Hope Grant, the Commander-in-Chief of Madras. The latter was also at the Mysore festivities, and met with a fall from his horse, which fractured a rib or two, but did not otherwise injure him, and he is now convalescent.—Delhi Gazette.

CAPTAIN GRIFFIN.—The Hurkaru directs attention to the case of Captain Griffin, of H.M.'s 3rd Madras European Infantry, who was cashiered by a court-martial at Allahabad, on the charge of signing the name of a Captain Erskine, who represented himself as a wounded officer in 1859, to an order for stores on Mr. Carr. The charge was so absurd that the late Dr. Buist, Captain Griffin's counsel, refused to call witnesses for the defence. It seems to have been afterwards proved that the accusation was false, and Captain Griffin, we believe, received a gratuity from Government, but was not restored to the service. The case is one of those strange freaks in which court's-martial occasionally indulge. The mere fact of a gratuity having been given to Mr. Griffin is a confession by both the Calcutta and Westminster authorities of injustice, which a new court of inquiry ought to have been summoned to remedy.

THE RESIDENT OF TRAVANCORE AND COCHIN has been directed by the local Government, with the sanction of the Government of India, to propose to the rajahs of those States the discontinuance of the restrictions to trade now existing between British and native territory. In short, it is proposed that the native States shall be placed on precisely the same footing as though they were under British rule, for the British tariff is to be adopted, British duties are to be levied, and produce is to be imported and exported on the same terms as now apply to merely British ports. Doubtless the two native Governments will agree to these proposals, which are not made without their having expressed a desire for such great changes. British manufactures will then be freely imported through Ponanni, Cochin, and Alleppy, into the interior, and an increased trade should be done in pepper, cardamoms, oil, yarn, &c. The change will work a great improvement in the position and prospects of the trade of British Cochin, and will, doubtless, induce the establishment of European merchants at Alleppy. With the exception of the commercial agent of the Travancore Government, and a missionary, I believe no European has yet settled there. Pepper and cardamoms are to be had in abundance and coconut oil and coir-yarn may also be obtained with as little difficulty, and probably now at less cost, than at Cochin.

LOSS OF A BRIDGE.—In Malabar the gigantic bridge across the Irrity river, erected in 1859 at a cost of nearly Rs. 33,000, has been carried away by the freshes. The current was so strong that it forced away the timber work with ease, leaving the stone piers standing. Two other bridges, one at Badagberry and one between Cannanore and Calicut, were also carried away, as also many works of less importance. Thirty men were drowned crossing the Wynaad.

THE MINT.—We hear that upon Colonel Orr's appointment to the Government Secretariat in the Public Works Department he will be succeeded in the Madras Mint by Colonel Carpendale, who is now chief engineer in Mysore.

BOMBAY.

MAJOR-GENERAL LAWRENCE.

Our readers will probably recollect that some little time ago an officer, Lieutenant Haig, was attacked by a small party of dacoits while travelling by the Government bullock train along the Indore road. Upon this the Bombay Saturday Review made a virulent attack upon the Governor-General's agent in Rajpootana, Major-General Lawrence, most unreasonably, seeing that he has nothing in the world to do with the part of the country where the dacoity took place, which is in Central India, and under the Central India agency. Lieutenant Haig was attacked within forty or fifty miles of Indore, and if the editor has a map of India in his study he may see how far this spot is from the boundaries of Rajpootana. The reason why we did not notice this unjust attack and discreditable display of ignorance on the part of a public writer, is, that as we do not see the paper referred to we were not aware of what had been written on the subject till we received a letter, from which the following is an extract, addressed first to the Review, pointing out the absurdity and injustice of the strictures. It will be necessary to explain that not content with assailing General Lawrence for the feebleness of his rule, he goes on to rate him for "nepotism," and getting his sons-in-law into the agency. Now "nepotism," as it is called, when it operates injuriously for the public service, is undoubtedly a fit subject for a tirade against any public man; but no one can find fault with an officer in a position such as General Lawrence holds, for providing for his relatives and connections in his own department, provided the same relatives and connections are fit to hold the offices to which they are appointed, more especially if the family connections took place after they had been some years in the said department.

With this preface we annex the extract from the letter, glad to aid in defending honest men and good officers from the attacks of ignorance and prejudice:—

George Lawrence's antecedents should have spared him from an inconsiderate sneer about himself and his sons-in-law. He was with MacNaghten in his death throes, he stood by Eldred Pottinger against capitulation, was almost singlehanded in the midst of the Sikh army at Peshawur in 1848, and, when their prisoner, won respect and almost reverence by his stout bearing and honest speech. Amidst the disasters of 1857, without a British bayonet for hundreds of square miles, mutiny and disaffection raging amongst our native troops and garrisons, Rajpootana never slept from his grasp. Few had a harder task in those hard times than George Lawrence in Rajpootana. "Two of his sons-in-law are political agents," they are so. One was in charge of the turbulent estates of the Rajah of Ulwar during his minority, and performed a difficult task with character and ability, which the Government of India have not been slow to recognise. The other is political agent of Harowtee, and has served a long apprenticeship to his position. The son of a poor clergyman, without other interest than that which resolution and honesty of purpose command, he has worked his way through the ranks of the Bombay army. That such a man should be General Lawrence's son-in-law shows the temper of both.

Now, glance at the map of Central India and the entangled territories of Nawabs, Rajahs, and Thakors, between Gwalior and Indore. For some three hundred miles the road runs through a country miserably populated, here and there a village with its patch of cultivation, dense forests on either side, miles in depth, with many a fastness and cavern, never penetrated save by Thugs and wild beasts—and both not unfrequently have levied black mail on travellers! Not all the army of India posted along this road could render the passage of travellers and goods secure. The marauders are Thugs and Dacoits, without settled habitation, wandering and scattered as is their wont. Disciplined troops could not follow them; civilisation is driving them out of the British territories, slowly but surely, for there every village can be numbered. Many a denizen of the wilds of Guzerat has left those hunting grounds for Central India. Tough British troops have ever failed to reach them, not so the approvers of the Thuggee Department, and probably at this moment Major Hervey's trackers are on the heels of the ruffians who attacked Lieutenant Haig on the confines of Guzerat. The Governor-General's agent of Central India, Major Meade, with a ready and watchful wisdom is doing the work of an army; but if Italy with all her glory is slow in regeneration, what must be the task of winning to order and honour the barbarians who hold the dark forests of Central India?

Turn to the History of Central India in Malcolm's pages, and with wonderment you will pause to think that, within a few years of the scenes of bloodshed and disorder he described, the attack of an unattended Englishman in a cart at night can excite surprise. This, too, the solitary instance amongst hundreds of travellers along the road during the year. Not seven years ago, in Outram's early rule in Oude, no Englishman, unarmed and unattended, was safe outside the gates of the residency at Lucknow after dark! British rule, however, is treading out disorder. Fifteen or twenty years ago, travelling in Guzerat, as the writer of this has reason to remember, was less free from danger than at the present day in Central India. Much of this improvement is, no doubt, due to the influence and watchfulness of the press.

—Delhi Gazette, August 13.

SIR GEORGE CLERK.

Though Sir George Clerk's second tenure of office as Governor of Bombay was a thorough failure, we are very glad to see the Home Government have granted him a pension of a thousand pounds per annum, "to mark the sense entertained of the character of his services during the period of upwards of forty years."

Perhaps no Indian statesman has had greater experience, or seen such varied service, as Sir George Clerk. Beginning his Indian career in the judicial line in Bengal, he was soon transferred to the political department, where he served successively as assistant to the secretary in the secret and political department, to the resident at Nagpore and at Delhi; was officiating political agent at Rajpootana, political agent in the protracted Sikh states, envoy at Lahore, lieutenant-governor of the North-west Provinces, governor of Bombay, commissioner for settling the boundaries at the Cape after our Kafir wars, secretary to the Board of Control, under secretary of state for India, and lastly, a second time governor of Bombay. Yet, with all this extended and varied experience in India from the year 1816 to 1847, it is rather puzzling to know on what the reputation he possessed at the old India-house and of the Board of Control was founded. His name was first known outside the sacred circle of the "heaven-born" order to which he belonged by his adroit management of the Border States after the terrible reverses in Afghanistan; and for the courage he displayed, during the period of suspense between the horrors of the disastrous retreat through the Kyber, and the advance of Pollock's army of retribution, when a state of fright prevailed in high quarters from the Governor-General (Ellenborough, who threw the responsibility of Pollock's advance on himself) downwards. It was very much owing to Clerk's management, energy, and address, that Pollock's army never wanted for supplies. This was a valuable service unquestionably, for which he deserves great praise as well as the honours which certainly came thick and fast for it—Envoy to Lahore, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-west Provinces, and the Governorship of Bombay. During his first period of office in Bombay, he made considerable stir amongst us, though little remained to show for it all; and after some eighteen months' resistance he retired, ostensibly on the plea of ill-health, but according to the more plain-speaking gossip of the time, in disgust at the treatment he received from some of the "heaven-born" members of his council. Sir George Clerk possessed, according to general report, great knowledge of native character, and native ways, and to this knowledge, certainly most valuable in an Indian public servant, may be attributed his great success as a diplomatist. Statesmanship is quite another affair, he has left no mark or record that can entitle him to such rank. We remember being particularly struck alike by the confidence of his tone, and the emptiness of his suggestions, on the principal Indian topics on which he was examined before Committees of both Houses of Parliament in 1852-3, prior to the renewal of the East India Company's Charter in 1854. He blundered on several, but his account of the Bombay revenue settlements, for a man who had been Governor of Bombay, was humiliating in the extreme. Evidently he had never given himself the trouble thoroughly to understand them. His views, such as they were (and for a man of so much Indian experience, they were as poor as need be), were all in favour of the pet north-west settlement, which the mutinies carried away like a flood. Many of our readers must remember the extraordinary educational despatch of Lord Ellenborough to the Court of Directors during his two months' tenure of office in the early part of 1858 at the India Board, with Sir George Clerk's still more astonishing memorandum appended to it. Sir George Clerk devoutly believed, if he believed anything, that the Government system of education was a huge attempt to convert the natives, and that the mutinies resulted in consequence!

The second appointment of Sir George Clerk to the Government of Bombay has always been a marvel to many—a marvel as to his being offered it, and equally so as to his accepting it. Sir Charles Wood must have found him troublesome without being helpful, wanted him out of the way, and so offered him the vacant appointment. But it was a mistake on the part of Sir George to risk such Indian reputation as he had, by coming out again with his stereotyped antiquated ideas to battle with a new order of things, in an enfeebled state of health; the result might have been foreseen: after a two years' do-nothing struggle his health at last gave way, and he ingloriously quitted the scene. Still, though we cannot recognise in the character of Sir George Clerk any services of a character entitling him to rank with the Munros, Metcalfes, and Elphinstones of bygone days; we do think that the varied services of forty years, in offices of high trust, where he has acquitted himself creditably and honourably, well entitle him to the reward which, in his retirement, the State has deemed fit to bestow on him.—Bombay Gazette.

THE RAILWAY AT JUBBULPORE.

Some two or three years ago, when Lord Canning extended his triumphal progress into Central India, he pitched his camp over against Jubbulpore, and, for a moment forgetting the great cares of State, he inquired where was the railway station to be. He was conducted to a large plain of paddy-fields to the north of the native city, and his guide said, "Behold, my lord, here is the ground unencumbered by human habitation and unfenced by narrow limits." His lordship inquired how far off was the European cantonment, and he was answered "four miles." His Lordship further inquired, "Could not the line be taken through cantonments, and thus serve a double purpose?" "Impossible, my lord," was the reply; "the engineers have declared the difficulties insurmountable, and this being so, there is nothing for it but to do the next best thing—to go north of the city." The retort of Lord Canning was characteristic of the man: "The government of India," said he, "will never sanction the proposition of putting a great central station, the magazine, in fact, of two great railways at a distance of four miles from the European garrison, with a native city and a commanding range of hills between." This prompt decision commanded silence, and, in time, a board of the Wise Men of the East was assembled at Jubbulpore to report on the practicability or otherwise of carrying out Lord Canning's order. The board fully admitted the soundness of the order, but, with the bugbear of the "engineering difficulties" in their minds, they made a compromise by coming into the military cantonments by a branch railway—a sort of entrance by the back-door. This did not satisfy the powers that be, and as a last effort the engineer who laid out and built the great Central Station at Allahabad, was sent down to investigate and report on the whole. This gentleman set to work immediately and reported that, so far from there being any engineering difficulties in the way of carrying out Lord Canning's proposition, it was all plain sailing, and, moreover, presented many advantageous features; among the rest that the railway passing between the civil and the military cantonments would act like the heart and lungs of the human body, and circulate air and life through the now hampered, ill-designed hamlet of Jubbulpore. This intelligence seems to have caused a sensation at head-quarters, for the works north of the old city were quickly suspended, pending further orders. Then came a lull of a couple of months, and now, at length, the decision of Government, I have on the best authority, reversing Lord Canning's views and adopting the distant site with the native city and hills between it and the English garrison. This decision of the present Viceroy cannot be said to be based on engineering difficulties, which are now shown to have existed only in the minds of timid engineers, but probably on the fact, which weighs with the Government of late years, that Lord Canning's line would be the more costly of the two.

BANK OF BOMBAY.

The annual general meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Bombay was held in the office of the Bank, Rampart-row, on Monday, August 24, John A. Baumbach, Esq., occupying the chair. The secretary, Mr. Blair, read the following report of the directors:—

"DIRECTORS' REPORT.

"The directors have the pleasure to submit to the proprietors a statement of the affairs of the bank made up to the 30th June last, showing the gross profits for the last half-year to be Rs. 7,44,932-0-7. From this sum the current expenses of the establishment and the income-tax payable on the profits, amounting together to Rs. 1,49,281-11-9 have to be deducted, leaving a balance of Rs. 5,95,650-4-10, out of which the directors have declared a dividend of 10 per cent. and given a bonus of Rs. 30 per share, being at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum on the capital of the bank. The unappropriated balance of Rs. 1,77,650-4-10 has been carried to the credit of the reserve fund.

"No losses have been sustained during the past year. The directors have much satisfaction in congratulating the proprietors on such a large division of profits as 16 per cent., but at the same time they consider it their duty to caution the proprietors against entertaining the expectation that such large dividends can be regularly maintained.

"They would explain that a very important item in the profits was a gain on sale of Government securities held by the bank. Discount on advances were also on the average considerably higher than usual.

"Within the last six months other three branches of the bank have been established, viz., at Sholapoor, Dharwar, and Kurrachee, and the directors have reason to be satisfied with the progress that they and also those previously established have made.

"The directors, however, have to report that Government has not yet made over the treasuries to the bank at those places where branches have been established. They have repeatedly addressed the Local Government on the subject, and have also communicated with the Supreme Government at Calcutta and with the Secretary of State for India, but as yet no definite or satisfactory answer has been received.

"The directors are daily expecting to receive a reply from the Supreme Government, and they hope that, on the receipt of it, the arrangements which were made with the bank will be carried out without delay.

"With regard to the Bill for the re-incorporation of the bank, the proprietors are aware that during the last session it was introduced into the Legislative Council of Bombay, and that it was passed in the month of March last. The Act was then forwarded to Calcutta for the confirmation and assent of the Governor-General, but the directors regret to say that up to the present time nothing further has been heard of it."

THE CRAWLEY CASE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

SIR,—In common with many army officers I have watched the action of the English public on the "Crawley case" with a mingled feeling of indignation and contempt. I know little of Lieutenant-colonel Crawley, but that little is to his honour. His regiment was at Bangalore on the outbreak of the Punjab war, and he obtained leave, when he hurried up to Scinde to join the Bombay column advancing to Mooltan. He was present at the siege, as well as at the battle, of Goojerat, and with the column sent in pursuit of Shere Sing as far as the Jhelum; going the full length his leave of absence allowed. He left an impression on those with whom he acted that he was an excellent officer—decisive and firm, generous and gentleman-like. He would hardly remember the name of the writer, who was then a young subaltern, and who is now moved by no feelings of partial friendship for one who scarcely knows his name.

That the action of the English public on this case is unjust, is clear to all who really understand army matters. Even among officers of experience, few can fully appreciate—for few have had to undergo the terrible ordeal imposed on this most unfortunate officer. When a "crack" regiment falls, which it seldom does, the disorganisation is greater, the remodelling more difficult, than in ordinary cases, because the path is barred with clannish elements, and the opposition pointed with conceit and insolence. The Inniskilling Dragoons are the wreck of our finest cavalry regiment. The atmosphere of India seems to have exerted on this regiment a more than usually pernicious influence. No sooner are the officers of a very "crack" corps landed in this country, than they are found to be divided into two prominent parties—the old English and the new Indian elements. The former adopt a supercilious tone, and treat with contempt the latter, who are destined to grow with time, and eventually to replace the other. That the former, who have lost their own interest in the regiment, force back and destroy the pride and esprit that would otherwise be taken in the corps by those who appreciate their position and the career it opens before them. The fall of the regiment is in proportion to the strength of this feeling; and if there are other elements at work, the whole quickly resolves itself into a kind of moral boiling spring of a volcanic country, which may be seen in pools bubbling up in every degree of violence, the atmosphere filled with the steamy exhalations, and the soil heated with the burning fire below. Such was the theatre on which a hard fate thrust Lieut.-Colonel Crawley. Some men would have recoiled and left a community where they saw such trouble before them. Others would have accepted the position and selected the coolest spot. But, unfortunately for Col. Crawley, he was among the firm, vigorous, and conscientious minority who would attempt to fuse the antagonist elements by the force of his own will, and reduce to order the dangerous and explosive materials. Have the English public any conception of the task? Do they know what it is to be socially an outcast? to have every man's back turned upon them; every man's tongue against them? to have the seat on each side vacant at the dinner table, and insolent and offensive scraps of conversation spoken at them? I have seen a man live through this for years, and live it down; but he was a lonely individual, wrapped up in pride and disliking society. Col. Crawley is a good officer; the Inniskilling Dragoons is allowed to be a bad regiment. It is natural the two should clash; but what is the presumption? Who was right—the commanding officer in his attempt to reorganize the regiment, or the regiment in its attempt to crush the commanding officer? With all the evidence before them, the most celebrated officers in India and Colonel Crawley's chiefs have decided that he was right. With no evidence at all before them, stuffed with ridiculous fables, ignorant of the army, and even ignorant of the country, the British public have concluded that Colonel Crawley has acted a criminal part which ought to consign him to the gallows. The English public have placed themselves in a most contemptible position—the mere tools of a few spiteful and designing men. This generous nation, so full of a spirit of fair play, is like a great bull dog: if you shake anything and hound it on, the animal springs, worries, and tears. It is a pleasant reflection for those who gain honour in a dangerous war to know how precarious is their tenure. When absent on duty in a distant clime, with a few bitter enemies at home, a "sensation" press, and a "sensation"-loving people, may demolish in a month the character it has taken a quarter of a century to establish. Those who have not watched this case, and others as bad, could scarcely believe that this could be done so effectually that the metropolis was prepared to pursue to the death one who had no opportunity of saying a word in his defence, and who was engaged in a far-off land in the country's service, while his enemies were shooting their poisoned shafts. Is the voice of the people becoming in England, as in America, the decree of Heaven? Are there any individual and independent opinions to be heard above the roar? Does all England really think it fair that a man universally condemned before he had been heard should be taken from the scene of the supposed crime, to be judged in a city avowedly prepared to tear him in pieces? Indeed, it is difficult to tell whether the man selected to be lionized or the victim is in the most unenviable position. It is almost unendurable to be fondled and slobbered on by the exaggerated and maudlin sentiment, while at any rate unjust and bitter abuse excites a wholesome feeling of annoyance and indignation. Nor is it easy to tell which is in the most dangerous position. The over-praised hero meets a recoil as unjust as the admiration was absurd, and he is then treated as if he placed himself on the pedestal. The drunken mob has seized on him and elevated him to their shoulders with cheers and cries, while from the outskirts come a rotten egg, a handful of mud, and a voice, which says, "What business have you up there?" Then the very people who had thrust him up drop him with even less ceremony, and trample on him in the dirt. Colonel Crawley is the man who "baked" Serg.-major Lilley in a bomb-proof oven. "How very dreadful!" "Only think of it—the fiend!—a bomb-proof oven!" If a dozen of the needlewomen of a Regent-street dressmaker had the accommodation, the exercise, the food, and the attendance of the Mhow prisoner during his martyrdom they would consider themselves well off. Arrest with a non-commissioned officer simply means relieving from duty and confining him to his own quarters. Close arrest is the exclusion of cronies from dining, smoking, and drinking with the prisoner, and no more exercise than the doctor considers necessary for health. The commanding officer can bully officers and sergeants as long as he keeps them on duty; when he confines them to their quarters he has nothing further to do with them till they come on duty again. The public are persuaded that he can lock a sergeant up in a cell; he can no more touch the person of a sergeant than he can the person of an officer; and he has no more power to punish him than he has to punish the Prime Minister. His sole power consists in preferring charges against him for the decision of a court-martial. Once in arrest, any question connected with the comfort or health of the delinquent is for the medical officer to decide, who could, if he considered it necessary, send an elephant to take the sergeant-major for an airing. When people meddle with things they don't understand, their interference is more likely to make them ridiculous than to do any good. It would be amusing, were it not so disastrous in its effect, to see the jumble that has been made of persons, places, and things. The commanding officer has been blamed for the medical officer's neglect, if there were any neglect; and the Commander-in-Chief for the fault of General Farell, if there were any fault. Perhaps the most ridiculous part of the whole affair is the blame saddled on Sir Hugh Rose, who could not have moved in it by any possibility until after the death of the sergeant-major. The question then came before him in the form of a vital principle, which gives life to the English army, and with which, when quenched, that army will surely die. For the same reason that the Government supported the English and Indian Commander-in-Chief, Sir Hugh Rose was compelled to support General Farell and Sir William Mansfield; but the question affecting Colonel Crawley was more vital in its interest, though perhaps not so broad in its principle. The Commander-in-Chief had simply to decide whether he would support a regiment in opposition to its commanding officer, or the colonel in opposition to the regiment. There is not a member of Parliament who stands up in his place and talks nonsense who would not have acted as Sir Hugh Rose acted had he been in Sir Hugh Rose's place. It is not a question of feeling—a question of detail—but it is a question of principle, of far greater force than the English people can believe, which would have compelled Sir Hugh Rose openly to support the colonel. The details of the war waged between the regiment and the colonel might go to show that the commanding officer had not judgment and temper for his difficult position, in which case he would be quietly removed; but the great object would have been to carry this out without allowing the regiment to know they had triumphed. The ignorant and stupid action of the English public in this and other late cases has been like so many deadly blows struck at the discipline of the army, the effects of which are distinctly seen and felt over our empire, and will probably, in the end, be attended with a most serious result. Formerly, the tone was given to a regiment by its seniors; now, the mainspring that moves it is to be sought among the Cornets and Ensigns. The respect once shown the commanding officer is faintly seen, and a colonel compelled to administer a check to one of the leading young spirits is met with a manner bordering on insolence and the exclamation, when his back is turned, that "he had better look out; times are changed, and he will be shown up."—M.—Englishman, August 20.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE SHIP "HAHNEMAN," from Liverpool, which arrived on the 30th August, reports having been fired into and boarded by a Confederate privateer, on the 1st July. After examining the papers of the Hahneman, the privateer left her in lat 25-25 S., long 36-47 W.

PRICE OF LIVING IN BOMBAY.—We learn from the Times of India that the Bombay Government has appointed a commission, consisting of Messrs. Hart and Ellis, Revenue Commissioners, and Colonel Potter, Commissary General, "to report upon the changes which have taken place during the last forty years in the prices of the principal articles of provision, and the wages of labour, both skilled and unskilled, and also in house rents, at the principal towns of the Bombay Presidency." The object of the Government in appointing this commission is to arrive at some conclusive data respecting the present cost of living, as compared with that of former years. It is probable that if the result of the inquiry warrant such a step, the Government will increase the salaries of all public servants.

Military Letter.

RECKONING OFFICERS' SERVICE.

Military.—No. 177.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord.—Referring to my despatch* dated March 31, 1862, regarding the mode of reckoning the service of an officer of the staff corps formerly under the old furl. regulations, I have to inform you that as regards future furlis. such officers will be under the operation of clause 7 of the furl. rules of 1854, quoted in the margin.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) C. Wood.

Court Martial.

LIEUT. E. H. THOMAS, 29th M.N.I.

Head Qrs., Simla, July 13.—At a General Court Martial assembled at Saugor, on Tuesday, June 9, Lieut. Edgar Hastings Thomas, 29th regt. Madras N.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With unofficer-like conduct, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Saugor, on March 30, disrespectfully and insubordinately refused to return to his commanding officer, Maj. A. K. Gore, an official letter sent to him, Lieut. Thomas, by his commanding officer, for perusal, although repeatedly ordered to do so.

Finding.—The Court is of opinion that the prisoner, Lieut. Edgar Hastings Thomas, 29th regt. Madras N.I., is guilty of the charge preferred against him, with the exception of the words "disrespectfully" and "repeatedly," of which it acquits him.

Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner, Lieut. E. H. Thomas, 29th regt. Madras N.I., to be reprimanded in such manner as H.E. the C. in C. may be pleased to direct.

(Signed) W. W. TURNER, Col.,

Lieut. col., 97th regt., President.

Saugor, June 9.

Confirmed.

(Signed) HUGH ROSE, General,

C. in C. in India.

Simla, July 7.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C. IN INDIA.

The Court have been in error in acquitting Lieut. Thomas of "repeatedly" refusing to return the letter

* No. 134.—The second furlough of two years will only be granted after ten years' service in India from the date of the return to duty after the first furlough of two years.

These furloughs are not to be cumulative under any circumstances, but are limited to two years. Officers who have taken leave of absence, on sick certificate, to Europe, or elsewhere beyond sea, will be ineligible to a furlough on private affairs until they have served six years from their last return to duty. This rule does not apply to short leaves to sea.

called for by the commanding officer. It is proved by evidence that the commanding officer three times requested Lieut. Thomas to return it, and that he three times refused to do so. The fact that the two first requests were not in an official form is immaterial; and to establish the principle that orders so conveyed are to be looked upon as invalid might be attended with grave consequences. A military order is perfectly valid, no matter in what form it is conveyed.

This is not the first time that Lieut. Thomas has shown his disregard for authority. On a former occasion he gave just cause of complaint on that head to Brigadier Travers, v.c., commanding the Saugor district, and was reprimanded for this misconduct.

Brigadier Travers will read these remarks to Lieut. Thomas in presence of the officers of the garrison of Saugor.

Lieut. Thomas is to be released from arrest, and to return to his duty.

BY THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

Public Dept., Fort St. George, Aug. 18.—The services of Major W. R. Campbell, of the staff corps, officio, protector of emigrants, are placed temporarily at the disposal of H.E. the C. in C. for employment as a member of the Military Examining Committee, without prejudice to his appointment as officiating protector of emigrants.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, September 26, 1863.

THE FRENCH STEAM COMPANY'S SUPPOSED PUBLIC BOON.

WE publish in another part of our paper a reply from the London office of the French Mail Steam Packets on the Indian line, to an enquiry from Captain Thompson, on the subject of the supposed reduced fares, by which it appears that the terms have not been lowered, as we announced in our last number, on the authority of the Calcutta press. We hope there is some mistake in the London office. Perhaps the supposed new rules have originated in the Indian Office, for all the Indian papers give the details apparently on authority, and without any expression of doubt.

THE LATE HENRY MEREDITH PARKER.

WE have heard from one brother editor only, and he happens, like ourselves, to be connected with Indian interests, of the death of Henry Meredith Parker, a name so well known on the Bengal side of British India about twenty years ago. At that period, in point of public reputation, he was by far the most prominent and popular of the Bengal civilians. To his compatriots in Eastern exile his name was then as familiar as a household word, and if he had ended his days in India every local newspaper and magazine there would have teemed with lamentations for his loss, and with tributes to his memory. Here he was very little known as a public man, and his death has excited no emotion except within the limits of his domestic circle, and amongst those retired Anglo-Indians who were his contemporaries in the East. And yet he was a man of great mark and likelihood—in every sense of the phrase, a man of genius. He had rare gifts and a wonderful variety of elegant accomplishments. Unhappily, he dissipated his powers by employing them almost simultaneously in too many different directions. He was everything by fits and nothing long. With a most genial nature that made him a delightful friend and companion, and the leader and the life of every social assembly which he chose to enter, he had such a stock of animal spirits as enabled him to fortify himself against all the ordinary ill accidents of life, and to defy the power of a climate so hostile as that of India to the generality of his fellow-countrymen. But though this natural vivacity contributed to his happiness it defrauded him of his fame and Europe of a legacy. Perhaps even the majority of his own countrymen in India, while astonished at his versatility, and enchanted and enlivened with his gaiety and humour, little appreciated the nobler but less demonstrated elements of his nature. "Proteus they called him," and

A merrier man

Within the limits of becoming mirth
 We never spent an hour's talk withal:
 His eye begat occasion for his wit:
 For every object that the one did catch
 The other turned to a mirth-moving jest;
 Which his fair tongue (conceit's expositor)
 Delivered in such apt and gracious words
 That aged ears played truant at his tales
 And younger hearers were quite ravished;
 So sweet and voluble was his discourse.

But he was something better than a humorous, or merry, or eloquent companion, and if his numerous popular accomplishments and his high relish of social life had not withheld him from graver and more earnest pursuits, and he could have been persuaded to devote his highest faculties to some one noble object demanding the whole man, his name might have obtained a permanent place in the long and brilliant list of British authors. As it was, his high animal spirits and his popular accomplishments made him content to give to "society" what was meant for mankind.

Mr. Parker left India in 1842. Dr. Johnson, with a poetical hyperbole, spoke of the death of his friend Garrick as having "eclipsed the gaiety of nations;" but it is no hyperbole, but a plain truth, to say of Henry Meredith Parker that his departure from that country eclipsed for awhile the gaiety of the City of Palaces, and "diminished the public stock of harmless pleasure." Amongst his other popular attractions was his cleverness and versatility as an actor, which was the origin of his sobriquet of "Proteus." But he was as Protean off the stage as on it, for this "one man in his time played many parts," and all successfully. He was alternately a poet, a painter, a musician, and an orator, and took the lead, as in his natural and proper vocation, in all important local movements, public or private. Add to this that he was an excellent and well-appreciated servant of the State; and in his office of Secretary to the Salt Board he was as studious of the quality of the old Company's vulgar but lucrative commodity as if it had been purely Attic. With respect to his histrionic career, he was as much the first actor on the Calcutta stage as was Garrick on that of London. He, too, like Garrick, was equally at home in comedy and tragedy. It would be absurd to suppose that his pretensions as an actor are here seriously compared with those of Garrick. Such a comparison would be utterly preposterous. He was no more a Garrick than Calcutta is London. He was as inferior to Garrick as the Chowringhee Dramatic Corps (when Parker was the manager of it) was inferior to the company at Drury-lane, when it was presided over by the genius whose death was said to have "eclipsed the gaiety of nations." But Parker was nevertheless a capital actor, though not a Garrick, and was quite as much as Garrick himself the facile princeps in his own lesser circle. Like Garrick, too, as he passed from the great stage of human life, after a career of more than threescore years, his friends were taken by surprise, because, as Boswell said of the great English actor, "there was a vivacity in our late celebrated friend which drove away the thoughts of death from any association with him."

As a poet Mr. Parker has left no name behind him in this country, but his occasional verses were once exceedingly popular amongst his countrymen in India, and they well deserved to be so, for they were extremely musical and spirited and graceful, and exhibited a freshness of feeling and fancy, and a facility of style that we rarely meet with in the pages of many much more fortunate versifiers in his fatherland, who from superior local facilities and advantages have contrived to win a considerable share of public notice. As a prose writer his chief merit was a vein of original wit and humour wholly free from all personality and unkindness of any sort, and, indeed, peculiarly cheerful and good-tempered. Though the Indian press of his day was little better than a public record of private scandal, and was shamefully personal and virulent, Parker lived unscathed. He made not a single enemy—

And factions strove who should applaud him most.

GOCULDASS TEJPALL AND THE BOMBAY GOVERNMENT.

A RATHER serious case, connected with the question of Indian commercial morality, has been published in the Bombay papers. Mr. Goculdass Tejpal is the head of a mercantile firm in Bombay, and a justice of the peace. The local Saturday Review accused Mr. Goculdass Tejpal of having attempted to defraud Messrs. Nicol and Co., the charterers of two vessels, in the shipment of silver. The Government having observed that the accused party preserved a perfect silence under so serious a charge for half a year, called on him for some explanation, as it was necessary that a gentleman whose name was retained on her Majesty's Commission of the Peace should be free, even from the suspicion of such disgraceful conduct as that publicly attributed to him. On this Mr. Goculdass Tejpal submitted a very long and elaborate explanation of the matter to the Government. It is very remarkable that the Government, in so painful and delicate a case, should have kept Mr. Tejpal six months in anxious suspense, awaiting its final judgment as to his innocence or guilt, though that judgment was of such vital importance to his character, as a merchant, as a public officer, and as a man; and of some importance also to the Government itself, which was bound to see that a dishonest merchant was not retained on her Majesty's Commission of the Peace a day after his guilt had been discovered, nor kept a day longer than was necessary in his official post, while still under suspicion. We cannot imagine the circumstances that would justify a long delay at once so cruel and so impolitic.

Mr. Tejpal was at last, in some degree, relieved from his anxiety on the subject by a letter from the Chief Secretary to Government to the effect that "if his Excellency the Governor in Council"—this "if" is not exactly a peacemaker—that if his Excellency was right in the interpretation of his letter of explanation, he, the Secretary, was desired to express his Excellency's satisfaction at Mr. Tejpal's unqualified denial of the unworthy conduct imputed to him; but, what with the unpleasant "if," and a hint that he ought to have taken some early means of clearing his character, which would have saved Government the necessity for calling upon him for an explanation, and the somewhat equivocal meaning of the Government's offer to take the usual course of publishing the correspondence, "if it met Mr. Tejpal's wishes," that gentleman's satisfaction is not quite so complete or triumphant as he might naturally have desired.

In acknowledging the receipt of the reply from Government, Mr. Goculdass Tejpal could not help expressing himself rather sore at the question of publicity being left to his own choice, and declined to avail himself of that favour, leaving the decision entirely to the Government. We quote his own words:—

"When that statement was submitted, I had hoped that his Excellency in Council would be pleased, in justice to my character, and without any further reference to me, to direct the publication of correspondence in such a manner as might subserve the objects in view.

"As it has been thought fit to proceed otherwise, I humbly beg to defer to the resolution of his Excellency in Council now communicated to me, and with reference to your fifth paragraph, beg respectfully to state that I leave it to Government to give such publicity to the correspondence under reference as may appear to them proper.

On this the Government published the correspondence in the usual way.

Mr. Goculdass Tejpal, in his explanation, does not deny that the fraud complained of was really committed—he, indeed, admits it freely—but he states that he was not himself, in any degree, personally implicated. He had no knowledge of the matter. He has several partners—a considerable number of clerks and other servants in his employ, and he does not himself personally attend to the minute details of business. All this is quite possible, but as the head of the firm, he was responsible for its conduct, and for the conduct of its agents, and he ought at once to have vindicated its character by a public reply to a public charge, and have punished or discharged the parties who had brought his house into disrepute. But he remained silent until the Government forced him into an explanation, and even then, he offers nothing in exculpation of his several partners, who could hardly urge a plea like his own, that they never troubled themselves with details; and the only person in his house who was punished or discharged was one "old and hitherto much trusted servant, whom we have since thought fit to dismiss from our employ for misconduct." For what misconduct? "That is the question." Why did not Mr. Tejpal state more explicitly whether or not the old servant was dismissed for the fraud complained of, and whether he was dismissed immediately it was discovered, or for some other offence at a later period? The under-valuation of the shipment of silver was insignificant enough in amount, being only Rs. 117½, and, when first discovered, the charterers, Messrs. Nicol and Co., agreed to drop all notice of the matter if Mr. Tejpal would pay that amount, and give a declaration in writing that the under-valuation was made without his knowledge. This was at once agreed to. But subsequently Messrs. Nicol and Co. altered their minds on the subject, and threatened a prosecution. The friend or agent employed by Mr. Tejpal dissuaded them from this course, and said that he would consent to any other arrangement rather than have any litigation. Messrs. Nicol and Co. then consented to forego legal proceedings if Rs. 6,000 were paid to the Lancashire Fund. The donation was paid instantly and eagerly at the very interview in which the arrangement was proposed and agreed to, and it was this humiliating compromise which Mr. Tejpal told the Government rendered it impossible for him to proceed against the Saturday Review for a libel.

It is, indeed, difficult to believe that Mr. Tejpal, who is a very wealthy merchant, and who, by his own statement, has contributed in round numbers about 75,000 rupees to public and charitable purposes,* should, for the sake of so petty a gain as 117 rupees, have had anything to do with so petty and dirty a transaction as that attributed to him by the Saturday Review; but certainly if his friend, who settled the case with Nicol and Co., went beyond his wishes or instructions in the matter, Mr. Tejpal has good reason to exclaim—"Save us from our friends!" The way in which this delicate affair has been compromised has certainly not tended to raise the character of the firm in public estimation.

REDUCTION OF PASSAGE-MONEY BY THE FRENCH STEAMERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."
SIR,—From the enclosed letter you will perceive that the announcement in your last issue that the "Messageries Impériales" had decided on reducing the rate of passage-money to naval and military officers is incorrect. To prevent officers returning to India just now being misled, you will, doubtless, correct the error in your next. —Yours faithfully,
E. THOMPSON.

SIR,—We beg to inform you that the information which you have received respecting a reduction in the passage-money in favour of military and naval officers is erroneous.—Yours obediently,

SCINDE RAILWAY COMPANY.

The half-yearly meeting of this company was held yesterday at the London Tavern; Mr. W. P. Andrew in the chair.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said he had explained to them seven and a-half years ago that the object of the Scinde Railway was to open a communication from the harbour of Kurrachee to the valley of the Indus, and to avoid the navigation of the delta of that river. It was the first link in the communication from the sea to the Punjab and Central Asia. They were now in negotiation with the Government with the view of establishing a railway from the upper end of the Scinde line along the valley of the Indus to the Punjab Railway at Mooltan. They had established a steam communication from the present terminus of their line at Kotree, on the Indus, by means of the company's flotilla, and they had no reason to regret having done so, as it was the only available mode of securing large sources of traffic inland and landlocked, and to bring the valuable productions of the Punjab to the seaboard. The most complete mode of developing the existing resources of the immense districts between Lahore and the sea was by means of the proposed Indus Valley Railway. The great feature in their report was, having obtained the sanction of the Secretary of State for India to make the requisite surveys to determine the route that line should take along the valley of the Indus. From the first he had contemplated such a railway as a necessity, but so little was thought of the project at that time that it could not be entertained. The time had, however, arrived for the consideration of the subject, and it was likely to be carried out. All his anticipations had been more than fulfilled in respect of the immense traffic that would flow over their railways. All the appliances that engineers could devise had failed in accomplishing what was required for the successful navigation of the Indus. Steamboats might be safe, but could never be efficient in supplying the necessary accommodation. Every man had done his duty, and many with great ability. Loss of life, broken down health, and other losses had been endured to accomplish as much as possible. The finances of the company were in excellent condition; they had £1,500,000 to the credit of the company in the hands of the Government. As to the Scinde Railway, the harbour of Kurrachee was undergoing such improvements as were likely to meet the views of the most sanguine expectations of its capabilities. The improvements at the entrance of the harbour were those designed by Mr. Walker. The traffic on the Scinde Railway had been far beyond their expectations. They had been unable to carry the immense traffic that came to them. The station accommodation and rolling-stock were totally inadequate. They had no protection provided for the immense quantity of goods brought to them, and they were exposed to the weather from want of the ordinary appliances to meet the immense and urgent demands for conveyance. The working expenses were high, but this was partly attributable to the unusual inundations to which parts of their line had been subjected. When the ballasting of the line was completed he thought the working expenses would be reduced to a fair average. The conduct and exertions of the officers had met not only with the approval of their agents, but with that of the Governor of Bombay. The cost of the Scinde Railway had greatly exceeded what had been anticipated. Upon the portion of the railway near Kotree there were about twenty miles of sidings and railways which were now required to accommodate the traffic, but these additional sidings would be done away with when the Indus Valley line was completed. The trade of Kurrachee had been estimated at £5,000,000 last year, but it had exceeded that sum by £500,000. The Indus steam flotilla was by no means adequate to the requirements of the traffic. They were unable satisfactorily to cope with the stream in places, but, notwithstanding many difficulties, they had been able to keep up a regular bi-monthly communication with the Punjab. So much were the requirements beyond once a fortnight that they required daily steamers between Kotree and Mooltan. The Government had treated them in the most liberal manner, and had handed over all their steamers, stores, materials, and everything to assist them in the development of the traffic on the Indus. They had offered to allow the company to work two new steamers which had been just launched, but they feared they would be too expensive to work. The small vessels and tugs seemed best for the service. The Government had used two of their tenders for ferry boats. With regard to the Punjab Railway, the traffic was very satisfactory. The receipts of the line exceeded their expectations. The working expenses of the Punjab Railway were only about 40 per cent., and it was fully expected that the line would be opened throughout to Mooltan by the end of next year. When it was opened to that point there would be enormous quantities of produce, and the great difficulty would be to convey them away. With regard to the last link in the communication to Delhi, there were some formidable bridges to be constructed, and the cost would be much more than originally estimated. That was partly caused by the alteration of route, the additional length of line, and, above all, the unfortunate delay in commencing the works. In the interval the price of labour and materials had greatly increased all over India. The delay in proceeding with the necessary works was of most serious consequence; and he hoped and trusted the authorities would speedily give their sanction to begin the works. The company had ample means at their disposal, and the local Government were most anxious for the line to be constructed. There was ballast available at several points on the line, and there were large bridges to construct. The country through which the line would pass was well cultivated, and had a population of about 400 to the square mile, full of enterprise, industrious, and given to travel. He hoped they would soon hear of the commencement of the undertaking, which, with the Indus Valley Railway, would complete a great line of railway communication from Kurrachee to Calcutta, a length of 2,200 miles, having only one tunnel and scarcely a stiff gradient from one end to the other. It would make Kurrachee the European terminus of Indian railways. All the predictions he had made with regard to the undertaking had been more than realised, and when they had the Indus Valley and Delhi lines fairly in hand he believed they would complete the undertaking. (Hear, hear.)

Sir F. Arthur seconded the motion for the adoption of the report, and it was carried.

The Solicitor to the company read formal resolutions confirming the forfeiture of certain shares for non-payment of calls in the Scinde, Flotilla, and Punjab undertakings, which were carried unanimously.

On the motion of Sir J. Donaldson, Mr. Thornton, who had resided thirty years in India, including twenty-five as commissioner in the Punjab, was unanimously elected an auditor of the company.

In reply to a question respecting the Indus Valley Railway, as to what would become of the flotilla when that railway was made,

The Chairman said the flotilla would always be indispensable to the company, whether the line were made or not. The vessels would, in the first instance, be fully employed for a considerable time in bringing materials for the construction of the railway, and when that was done they would be valuable feeders to it from places on the Indus. It was probable the vessels would be made over to the Indus Valley Company.

The proceedings concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

INDIAN BRANCH RAILWAY COMPANY.

Yesterday the half-yearly meeting of the proprietors was held at the London Tavern, Mr. W. Dent in the chair.

The report of the directors of this company states that the early opening of the Nulhatee line had been unfortunately delayed, from the roadway which the Government undertook to deliver to the company not having been originally provided with sufficient openings to carry off the flood-waters of the district; the Government undertook to supply the additional waterway required, but the non-completion of one of the principal bridges had, up to the 1st of August, prevented the closing in of the line; but the works were so nearly finished that the chief engineer expected to get a train through at a very early date. Arrangements had been made with the Government for extending the Nulhatee line 8½ miles to Bogwangola, a port on the Ganges. Nearly all the materials of the permanent way, locomotives, &c., for this extension had been shipped for Calcutta; there was therefore every prospect that the whole of this branch line might be opened for traffic by the middle of next year. The negotiations with the Government of India for the concession of the whole system of railway lines in Oude and Rohilkund were progressing satisfactorily. The Secretary of State for India had given the Government of India full powers to arrange with the company for the construction of railways in those provinces. The board had received information that the whole system of railways for Oude and Rohilkund would be conceded to the company, and in the interim the chief engineer had the main line through those provinces, from Meerut to Ghazepore, and that from Cawnpore by Lucknow to Fyzabad surveyed. He expressed full confidence in being able to complete the construction of the lines at a cost not exceeding £4,000 per mile. It was the original intention of the company to adopt a four-foot gauge for their lines, but the Government had made it an indispensable condition that the standard gauge of five feet six inches should be adhered to for all such lines in the provinces of Oude and Rohilkund as form a part of the general system of railways in India. The directors were assured by their chief engineer that the adoption of the broad gauge would not materially affect either the cost of construction or the working expenses, inasmuch as it was proposed that the rails, rolling stock, &c., should be much lighter than those used on the Grand Trunk guaranteed lines, and that the speed should not exceed that originally intended by the company. A further issue of capital to the extent of 50,000 shares of £10 each had been rateably allotted to the registered shareholders. Interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum had been paid to the shareholders for the quarter ending the 30th of June last. The capital account showed that £147,476 had been received, and £58,330 expended, leaving a balance of £89,146.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said it was matter of disappointment both to the shareholders and the directors that the Nulhatee line had not been opened, as originally expected. The fault, however, did not rest either with the directors or the engineer. The Government undertook to deliver the roadway in a state fit for the reception of the railway, but as the roadway was not originally provided with sufficient openings to carry off the flood waters of the district the engineer could not proceed. The Government also undertook to supply the additional waterway required; but on August 1, when Mr. Wilson, the company's engineer, visited the line, this had not been done. He stated, however, that the works were then so nearly finished that he expected in a very short time that the line would be opened. To show how near the line was to its completion, he might state that Mr. Wilson had passed an engine over the bridge, but that he had determined not to work the line until it was in a more complete state and perfectly consolidated. The proprietors might expect to hear daily that the line was completed and opened. As regarded the prospects of the undertaking generally, there was no reason whatever to suppose that they would not realise all that was originally expected. The road was a first-class road constructed by Government, and when the bridging was completed would answer every purpose. The Nulhatee line by arrangements with the Government would be extended to Bogwangola, a port on the Ganges, a distance of eight and a half miles, and the road was in a forward state. All the materials for the permanent way and locomotives had been sent out, and there was little doubt that the line would be opened by the middle of next year. There was now no doubt that the concession of the whole system of railways in Oude and Rohilkund would be conceded to this company by the Government of India, subject to the confirmation by the Secretary of State. The terms of the concession were these. All the land requisite for the railway would be given by the Government free for ninety-nine years, and, in addition, the Government would give the estimated cost of the ordinary metalled roadway, and the cost of the bridges. This was computed at £1,000 per mile, or equivalent to £100 per mile per annum for twenty years, that being the actuarial calculation with interest, at 5 per cent., or equal to £1,240. According to the last accounts received Mr. Wilson was on his way to the residence of the Governor-General at Simla to complete the arrangements for the concession of the railways for Oude and Rohilkund, and pending the final negotiations surveys of the provinces had been made from Meerut to Ghazepore, and from Cawnpore by Lucknow to Fyzabad, which might be constructed at a cost of £4,000 per mile. The directors had not the slightest doubt but that everything would be settled satisfactorily with the Government of India now that they had full powers from the Secretary of State here.

Mr. Kenzard, M.P., seconded the adoption of the report, which was put and carried unanimously.

The Chairman, in reply to Mr. Downes and others, said that in the event of their getting the concession they would build a bridge over the Juanpoir. The line from Meerut to Ghazepore and from Cawnpore by Lucknow to Fyzabad had been surveyed, and the directors were waiting the transmission of the plans and sections and estimate of costs from Mr. Wilson.

Sir S. Donaldson inquired when another call might be expected.

The Chairman said that would depend in some measure on the speed with which the Government of India granted the concession; but the directors saw no prospect at present of any call being made before January. In any case, any call would not exceed £2 per share, and there would always be an interval of three months between each call.

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

FOREIGN OFFICE, Sept. 22.

A despatch, of which the following is an extract, from Major-General Brown, commanding the British troops in China, has been communicated to Earl Russell by the Secretary of State for War:—

Various statements having appeared in the several journals published at Shanghai, concerning the treatment of rebel prisoners, and alleged torture of some few taken at the capture of Taitsan, I have the honour to state that a report was made to me by Captain Murray, R.A., commanding a field force in support of the attack on Taitsan, soon after his return to head-quarters, of the Imperialists' cruel treatment of their prisoners. I took the report to her Britannic Majesty's consul (Harvey) without delay, and expressed my desire that the Foutai should be informed of the same, and to urge upon him to send out an order at once to all his mandarins in command, forbidding any cruelty to be exercised upon captured prisoners; and further, if any report was again made to me of a similar nature, I would cease to act with his troops. Lieut. R. Cane, R.A., who has been six years in China, and has some knowledge of the Chinese language and customs, was the first who reported the circumstance to Captain Murray; and the letter of the former officer, called for by me for report, is here annexed, and details, I think, everything most clearly. I have no reason to believe otherwise than that the Foutai is equally anxious to be as humane as possible to his prisoners; some hundreds were lately captured at Quang-san, and, so far from being cruelly or severely dealt with, have actually, to a great extent, been incorporated by Major Gordon into his own regiment; and I have also asked for some to be sent down to me from Quang-san to be drilled with, and attached to, the batteries of Chinese artillery gun Lascars, which are under the command of the officer commanding Royal Artillery who reports them most useful and efficient. Major Gordon was also lent by me some fifty of these drilled gun Lascars for his attack on Quan-san, and speaks most highly of them. I have now only to draw attention to "Eye-Witness's" statement, who would actually allow the public to believe that men, undergoing extreme torture, such as he describes, with various wounds, from whence issued copious streams of blood, and could not only exist from eleven a.m. till sunset, but then to be able to be led out for execution, leaving one to suppose that he was present the whole time; whereas the editor, in his remarks on the bishop's letter, to remove any apprehension as to the non-influence of British officers who were on the spot, states that the treatment the prisoners were undergoing was only discovered ten minutes before their execution. This alone, I submit, stamps the whole statement as highly coloured and greatly exaggerated.

(Enclosure).

Shanghai, June 11, 1863.

Sir,—In reply to the inquiry of the Major-General Commanding, I have the honour to inform you that, on the 3rd May, 1863, I was present at Waikongsun, as Acting Field Adjutant to a force under the command of Captain A. Murray, Royal Artillery. In the afternoon of that day I was taking a walk for exercise, with several other officers, along the main road towards Ko-lung-sung, and in passing between two Imperialist stockades our attention was attracted by a number of men, I think seven or eight, naked and tied to posts. On approaching I found they were Changman prisoners, all with very long hair (showing that they were rebels of long standing), and with the very peculiar complexion and physiognomy which have been frequently noticed as acquired by men who have spent much time among the Taepings.

These men had evidently been sentenced to the punishment of the "Ling-che," or "slow and ignominious death," what we call "cutting into a thousand pieces," and it was also evident that they had been spared as much as possible, and little more than the form of this horrible punishment carried out. Each man had a piece of skin, not flesh, about four inches by two, partly stripped from one arm and hanging down, and one or two arrows had been pushed (apparently not shot) through the skin in different places. There was very little blood about the ground, and the men did not appear to be in pain; one was crying out very loudly that he was a Shanghai coolie, and ought not to be put to death as a rebel. He had, however, very long hair. I asked a low Chinese officer present what they were. He told me they were old and well-known rebels, two of them officers, and that they were about to be beheaded. He said they had been exposed from mid-day. (It was about half-past four or five o'clock p.m. when I saw them). At the same time I saw an official approaching to superintend the execution; and, not being anxious to witness the spectacle, which I had often seen before, I withdrew. From what other officers who remained informed me, I gathered that decapitation was performed at once in the usual manner, except that the sword employed was blunt and the executioner inexperienced, I saw no other sign of torture whatever, and considered that these men were, taking into account Chinese law and customs, rather mercifully dealt with. A dead Changman lay some distance off, who had been treated in a similar manner to the other; in addition a slight incision had been made from his breast to his groin, but, from the absence of blood, I think this was done after death. On my return to Waikong I reported what I had seen to Captain Murray, commanding, who desired me to visit the camp next morning, and to take notice of the occurrence, which I did by mentioning it to a fourth rank military field officer, the senior in the camp. I told him we English did not like such punishments; that if a man deserved death we executed him at once, and did not expose or mutilate him. I expressed general disapproval of what had been done, and said the English commanding officer was much displeased at it, and if anything of the sort was attempted again, would march up and put a stop to it, and that I hoped it would not again occur during our stay. He replied that he did not himself approve of it, but that I must recollect that a large number of the rebel prisoners taken at Taitsan had been pardoned by the High Imperial officers, permitted to shave their heads, and employed as soldiers or labourers; and that it was not possible to restrain the Imperial soldiers from taking some vengeance for the treatment which the rebels had inflicted on 300 or more of their comrades, who had been entrapped into Taitsan on a false promise of a surrender of the place. These men, he said, were almost all put to death, and very many of them had their "bodies wounded, and cotton put over their wounds and set on fire," and were otherwise badly tortured. (This I understood was really the case). He added that the Chinese general officer then in command at Waikongsun-Kwoh Ta-jin was mercifully inclined, and anxious not to be severe with the rebel soldiers, many of whom had been carried away forcibly, and compelled to serve in the ranks of the Taepings.—I have, &c., (Signed)

ROBERT EMMET CAVE, Lieut. Royal Artillery. The deputy-Assistant Adjutant-General, Shanghai.

N.B.—1,100 men were sent up to take possession of Taitsan by the Foutai. They were entrapped, and out of the above number only some 300 were rescued by Major Gordon on the fall of Taitsan. 350 are known to have been beheaded a few days before the capture, and the remainder are still unaccounted for.

MONEY MARKET.—Some parties are looking forward to the release of the large sums to be paid by the India Council to dissentient stockholders, and the distribution of the dividends, to produce a comparative glut, which, it is thought, may be succeeded by a reduction in the Bank terms. Others, however, very much doubt if any alteration will be experienced; and admitting, as they do, the abundance of the harvest, the gradual increase in the gold arrivals, and the hopeful views taken of the future, they at the same time believe that arrangements have already been made for dealing with the bulk of the capital to be received from the Secretary of State for India, while the surplus of the dividends will soon be absorbed, leaving the market, as regards general supply, much in the same state as it was before. It is also evident, as was pointed out a week ago, that the trade of the country is progressively advancing, and that it requires, especially in the Lancashire districts, through the high prices of the raw material, a much larger amount of means to pursue the same operations. Further, it must not be forgotten that remittances are rapidly swelling for transmission to the East, the payments for cotton at Bombay and Madras being in course of adjustment, the effect of which will now be sensibly felt. In taking into consideration the probable reduction of the Bank rate these circumstances must not be lost sight of; and should a change take place, which is still held to be extremely problematical, it will hardly go to the extent of more than one-half per cent.—Standard.—The Bank of England authorities have experienced a very heavy demand to-day for discount accommodation, numerous applications having been received from bill brokers whose resources have become somewhat exhausted through the active inquiry that has recently prevailed. In the open market a very large amount of business has likewise been negotiated, and fully 4 per cent. has been charged for the best description of paper. The revenue collections which are now in progress, and the withdrawal of the money out on loans for the extinction of the £2,000,000 of Indian Debentures due on the 8th proximo, are influencing to a high degree the present condition of the market. Besides these special circumstances usual at this period of the year, there is also a slight increase in the general trade of the country, and an augmented exportation of silver to the East, to pay for cotton, &c., which are also producing an effect. Soon after the dividends on some of the Government and Indian stocks have been discharged, and much of the capital now being expended for harvest operations shall have been returned to its ordinary source, the supplies in the hands of the dealers will doubtless be considerably increased, and, competition being then excited, the authorities may be enabled to reduce their minimum quotation.—Daily Telegraph, Sept. 26.

PROPOSED MEMORIAL TO LORD CLYDE IN GLASGOW.—The Lord Provost of Glasgow convened a preliminary meeting in the council chamber, on Wednesday last, for the purpose of considering the advisability of calling a public meeting of citizens, to arrange for the erection of a suitable memorial to Lord Clyde in his native city. The rank and reputation of the gentlemen present at the meeting, and the letters of approval which were read from several distinguished noblemen and gentlemen, indicated that the course adopted by the Lord Provost in calling the meeting was in harmony with a very general feeling. Sir Archibald Alison moved that a public meeting be called, and suggested that the subscriptions to the Lord Clyde memorial should be limited to a moderate sum, in order that all might participate in perpetuating the memory of that eminent citizen of Glasgow. The 21st of October was named as the day for the public meeting. The proposition was seconded by Sir James Campbell, and unanimously adopted. A committee was at once appointed, Mr. G. Readman, of the Clydesdale Bank, being appointed treasurer, and Dr. Strong and Mr. A. Bannatyne, jun., secretaries.

THE ORIENTAL BANK.—The directors of the Oriental Bank intend, it is stated, to declare an interim dividend of £1. 15s. per share for the half-year ended the 30th of June last at their meeting on the 22nd of next month.

The P. and O. Company purpose running large-sized steamers between Marseilles and Alexandria, in order to compete with the French Oriental Mail Company.

SCINDE RAILWAY (INDUS STEAM FLUOTILLA, PUNJAB and DELHI RAILWAYS) COMPANY.

At the FIFTEENTH HALF-YEARLY GENERAL MEET-
ING of the above Company, held at the London Tavern Bishopsgate-street, in the City of London, on FRIDAY, the 25th September, 1863.

W. P. ANDREW, Esq., Chairman of the Company, presiding.
The following Resolutions were carried unanimously:—
1. That this Meeting receive and adopt the Report of the Directors.

2. Resolved,—That the Declaration of forfeiture made by the Directors of the Scinde Railway Company on August 26, 1863, of the share in the Scinde Railway numbered 24,905, be hereby confirmed, and that the share be sold in such manner or otherwise disposed of as the Directors think most advantageous to the Company.

3. Resolved,—That the declaration of forfeiture made by the Directors of the Scinde Railway Company on the 26th of August, 1863, of the five shares in the Indus Steam Flotilla numbered 7,382 to 7,386 be hereby confirmed, and that the said shares be sold in such manner, or otherwise disposed of,
as the Directors think most advantageous to the Company.

4. Resolved,—That the declaration of forfeiture made by the Directors of the Scinde Railway Company on the 26th of August, 1863, of the shares in the Punjab Railway numbered as follows, viz.:

	No. 22,867 to 22,926
90 Shares	65,745 to 68,773
30 Shares	23,500 to 23,529
90 Shares	52,624 to 52,713

60 Shares	53,447 to 53,466
30 Shares	68,776 to 68,805
30 Shares	64,705 to 64,734

be hereby confirmed, and that the said shares be sold in such manner or otherwise disposed of as the Directors think most advantageous to the Company.

5. Resolved, That Edward Thornton, Esq., C.B., be appointed an Auditor of the Company in place of Philip Anstruther, Esq., deceased.

6. That the best thanks of this Meeting be tendered to the Chairman and Directors for their continued attention to the interests of the Company.

7. That the cordial thanks of this meeting are due to W.
P. Andrew, Esq., for his courteous conduct in the chair this day.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared India-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

THE POLISH CAPTIVITY:

An Account of the present Position and Prospects of the Poles in the Kingdom of Poland, and in the Polish Provinces of Austria, Prussia, and Russia.

By H. SUTHERLAND EDWARDS, Author of "Russians at Home."

"A portion of this book on Poland by Mr. Sutherland Edwards has already appeared in our columns, though apparently such a small portion that it is substantially a new as well as a highly opportune production."—The Times, April 2, 1863.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards not only understands his subject, but what is far more important and uncommon, his readers. He tells his audience precisely the facts which they are desirous to know. The 'Polish Captivity' is full of light but suggestive sketches, pièces justificatives of historic value, national songs and stories, descriptions of Polish towns, Polish nobilities, and Polish women, and is, besides, a book an English lady might read with twice the ease of Mr. Trollope's latest novel."—Spectator, March 28, 1863.

"The book in which Mr. Sutherland Edwards has depicted the 'Polish Captivity' would have been valuable at any time, but the opportuneness of its arrival so enhances its merits, that it is certain to command a greater than ordinary success. It is a subject which few writers are competent to deal with, but Mr. Edwards possesses special qualifications for the task. Personal experience has made him well acquainted with Poland and the Poles; the interest he takes in their fortunes has led him to study the question of their wrongs with zeal and assiduity, and his acquaintance with Slavonic languages enables him to make use of stores of information which are unobtainable to the ordinary student. Consequently, he is entitled to speak with authority, and his opinions on the condition, feelings, and prospects of the various nations which he describes deserve a very different hearing from that which would be given to the crude theories formed by a careless traveller passing hastily through an unfamiliar land."—London Review, March 28, 1863.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards visited Poland in the interval between the Warsaw massacre and the breaking out of the insurrection. What he saw he has described simply, but forcibly. Few English writers are so likely as he to form a correct judgment on any matter connected with Russia or Poland. His acquaintance with each of these countries, its people, its language, and its literature, gives him advantages which few other travellers possess. In wandering with him about the streets of Warsaw, we feel that we are in the hands of a trustworthy guide, one who can tell us what the people are chattering about, and who can explain the written mysteries which, under the veil of an unknown tongue, elude our hazy eyes. Mr. Edwards's book will be read with deep interest. It is well written, and the narratives are well constructed."—Athenaeum, March 21, 1863.

OVERLAND ROUTE.—COMMUNICATION BY STEAM TO INDIA, AUSTRALIA, &c., via Egypt.—The PENINSULAR and ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY BOOK PASSENGERS and RECEIVE CARGO and PARCELS at their London Office for GIBRALTAR, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN, CEYLON, MADRAS, CALCUTTA, the STRAITS, and CHINA, by their Steamers leaving Southampton on the 4th and 20th of every month. For GIBRALTAR, MALTA, EGYPT, ADEN, and BOMBAY, by those of the 12th and 27th of each month, and for MAURITIUS, REUNION, KING GEORGE'S SOUND, MELBOURNE, and SYDNEY, by the Steamers leaving Southampton on the 20th of every month.

For further Particulars apply at the Company's Offices, 122, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.; or Oriental-place, Southampton.

OVERLAND ROUTE from MARSEILLES to INDIA and CHINA.—Services Maritimes des Messageries Impériales. On the 19th of every month a FRENCH MAIL-STEAMER will be despatched from MARSEILLES at Two P.M. for ALEXANDRIA, corresponding with another steamer from Suez to India and China. Passengers and cargo will be received for Messina, Alexandria, Aden, Port de Galie (Ceylon), Pondicherry, Madras, Calcutta, Singapore, Saigon, Hong Kong, and Shanghai.

For passage, freight, and information, apply to B. W. and H. HORN, 4, Moorgate-street, where berths may be secured, and 33, Regent-circus, Piccadilly, where handbooks of information may be obtained, or at Rue Notre Dame des Victoires, Paris, and Place Royale, Marseilles.

CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS.

STEAM COMMUNICATION between LONDON and INDIA by the MAGNIFICENT FLEET of STEAMERS belonging to the EAST INDIA and LONDON SHIPPING COMPANY (Limited).

The well-known Clipper Auxiliary Steam-ship GOLDEN FLEECE, 2,768 tons, 350-horse power, G. E. BIRD, Commander, now loading in the Victoria (London) Docks, will leave on the 17th of OCTOBER, embarking passengers at and leaving Gravesend on the 30th of OCTOBER, for CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS. This magnificent Ship, built expressly for the India trade, has been thoroughly refitted, has first-rate accommodation for passengers, and will carry an experienced Surgeon, also a Stewardess.

The average passage of these steamers has been seventy days to Madras; some of them making the shortest passages on record.

The line will be continued on the 20th of each succeeding month, with the strictest punctuality, by one of this Company's fleet of auxiliary screw steam-ships.

For freight or passage apply to GRINDLAY and Co., 55, Parliament-street, S.W.; the Broker, ALFRED BRETT and Co., 150, Leadenhall-street, E.C.; or at the Offices of the Company, 9, Mincing-lane, London, E.C., where also applications for appointments as Midshipmen in this service should be made.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-ounce pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinoline.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

TEETH.—PATENT 764, AUG., 1855.—As shown at the International Exhibition, Class XVII.—Messrs. LEWIN MOSELY and SONS direct attention to their GUM-COLOURED ENAMELLED BASE FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and their complete system of Painless Dentistry. Teeth from 5s.; Sets, 5, 8, 10, and 15 Guineas.—30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.—Established 1820. For the efficacy and success of this system, vide "Lancet."

CORALLIUM SILEX, an entirely new substance for ARTIFICIAL TEETH, which will neither discolour nor decay, remaining firm in the mouth, from one to a complete set, without springs, wires, or any visible attachment. It gives the greatest support to all loose or tender teeth, and answers most perfectly the purposes of maturation and articulation. No painful operation required. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, &c. At home from eleven till four. No connection with any person in the same profession.—No. 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—The greatest

and most useful invention of the day, AQUA AMARELLA.—Messrs. JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King-court, Lombard-street, Perumiers to her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age. The Aqua Amarella has none of the properties of dyes, it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea per bottle.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-

SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. When combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

It is prepared in a state of perfect purity and of uniform strength by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

GOOD DIVIDENDS.—MESSRS. DAUNT and Co., of 2, Hercules-passage, 54, Thredneedle-street, E.C., have on SALE some FOREIGN GOVERNMENT BONDS, yielding 8 and 9 per cent. interest, payable half-yearly, as punctually as on Consols, and are perfectly secure. Business transacted in the English Funds at 1 16th, Railways at 3, and Mines at 1 per cent. A list of safe investments forwarded (gratis) on application. Investors will be cautioned against spurious mines.

GENTLEMEN WITH TENDER FEET.

J. CHAPPELL, 388, Strand, W.C., Boot-maker, and Professor of Fitting, begs to call the attention of such to his method of measuring, by which he guarantees, at the first trial, to produce a fit unprecedented for comfort, yet combined with the most fashionable shape. Those gentlemen on whom boot-makers have practised unsuccessfully are particularly solicited by J. C., who will undertake to fit them at once, however difficult. Established 1835. Inventor of the "Pulvinar" or Cushion Boots. Ladies' show rooms first floor.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!

C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times, C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Messrs. Price, Morgan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post. 23, Cannon-street West, St. Paul's, London; and opposite the Angel, Islington.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER. Fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the TRUSS (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

BLAIR'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC PILLS.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the Gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by un-solicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part. Sold at 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, by all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

ONE HOPE YET REMAINS.—However long continued their disease, however severe their sufferings, let no invalid despair of being cured till these potent remedies have had a fair trial. The one or other invariably succeeds. Both Ointment and Pills operate by purifying and regulating every function. These qualities advantageously display themselves in various diseases which differ in several particulars. The Ointment speedily removes all outward blemishes. The Pills improve the digestion and promote the formation of healthy bile, so essential to digestion, cheerfulness, and vigour. In cases of obstinate constiveness, no purgative can be prescribed so well calculated to produce the desired effect. They relax the bile-ducts, and liberate the natural aperient of the system.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 15th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton on the 12th and 27th of the month except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packet now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE curiosity and interest on the subject of the supposed Nana has pretty well subsided. We thought from the first that the Bombay detectives would be found to be on the wrong scent. Dr. Cheke testified before a magistrate that the Ajmere captive has not even a single feature that resembles the Nana; that he is much shorter in stature, and about fifteen years older, and that his voice does not in the least degree resemble that of the person he has been taken for. The captive is a miserable, broken-down old man, and to all appearance hopelessly ill.

Sir Mordaunt Wells gave what the Englishman calls "a luminous and careful judgment" in the Burney case the day before the mail started; but as it occupied no less than six hours in the delivery, neither the Englishman nor the Hurkaru were able to give a report of it in time to include it in their overland weekly mail of the 29th of August. The Bengal Hurkaru characterises the decision as "so elaborate, so clear, and so convincing that no one who is not blinded by wilful prejudices can fail to recognise its perfect justice." Damages were laid at the heavy amount of 50,000 rupees, but the plaintiff's counsel explained that the plaintiff had no actual desire for vindictive damages, though it had been thought advisable to indicate a deep sense of the great wrong done by a nominal demand for a large pecuniary redress. The 2,000 rupees awarded would carry heavy costs, and the decision against him would probably cause the loss of Capt. Eyre's commission. The whole case is a very remarkable one, deplorably illustrative of the petty jealousies and collisions, and mean personal enmities, into which our countrymen are too apt to fall in remote Mofussil stations, when men and women have little else to occupy their minds than small scandals and idle personal gossip. The trial has excited so much interest that it is to be reprinted in the form of a pamphlet, and to be forwarded for sale in England to Mr. Algar, of 11, Clement's-lane, Lombard-street, London, and Messrs. Wheatley and Co., 150, Leadenhall street; price one shilling. We give these particulars to our readers because we cannot ourselves afford to give up space for the entire report. It is said that Sir Mordaunt Wells's summing up was terribly severe, not on Lieutenant Eyre only, but on several other parties concerned; and we suppose he has not let the Commander-in-Chief himself escape, who seems to have been too ready to lend all his influence and power to the side which an independent British Court has shown to be the wrong one.

It is quite evident that the poor old veteran, who had served his country honourably for more than forty years, had no chance of fair-play, for his case was clearly prejudged, and he was all but prohibited from entering upon his defence, being told beforehand that the Commander-in-Chief thought his conduct "disgraceful," and that if he should demand inquiry it would be a very "searching" one, and that the moment he should decline to resign his command, or express a desire to enter upon his defence, he was to be put under arrest.

We have long suspected that the speculation of mining for iron in India is a profitless one, and the impression is confirmed by our noticing recently that the Government of Bengal have come to the resolution not to carry on the iron works recently established at Burevai, on the Nerbudda, as a Government undertaking. The Government invite offers from capitalists desirous of taking up such an enterprise. The sale or lease of the works is advertised.

The Bombay papers notice the prospectus of the new Oriental Hotel Company, projected in London, and the promise that their first hotel shall be built at Bombay instead of Galle; but they say that the London company is too late, for there is a local hotel company just completed with a capital of £150,000. The two hotel companies will, perhaps, finally be united before the greater old rival East India Companies trading to the East Indies.

Sir Charles Trevelyan, who puts his whole soul into every new scheme that he desires to carry into execution, has met with an unexpected check from the other members of the Governor-general's Council in his proposition to classify the clerks and writers in the Adjutant-general's office. It is objected that it would cause the present expenditure of a lakh of rupees to be increased to five times that sum.

The Governor-general will leave Simla on the 25th September. His Excellency will first visit the Kangra valley to see the progress of tea-planting there. He will then proceed to Peshawar. From Peshawar he will return to Lahore and open the Punjab Exhibition. The rifle brigade from Delhi will form his Excellency's escort through the Punjab.

By a general order, dated Bombay Castle, Sept. 1, 1863, the following officers are permitted to retire from her Majesty's service from this date on the pension of their rank, with the special annuity of £200, according to the notification in general order, No. 358, of the 7th of July last:—Royal Artillery: Colonel John Maxwell Glasse, Colonel Robert Croft Wormald, and Colonel John Pottinger, C.B. Royal Engineers: Colonel Henry Joshua Margary and Colonel Gore Boland Munbee.

The Lahore Chronicle says that there is good reason to suppose we shall have a little war on the borders when the cold weather sets in, and already an expedition against the Judoons and the Hindostanies of Sitani is talked of. These latter actually made a raid into the Eusofzaie valley recently, when two troops of the Guides marched immediately to "protect the integrity" of our dominions. A blockade is being enforced against them, and carried out as rigorously as possible both in Eusofzaie and the Huzarah district.

The intelligence from Cabul is very conflicting, but there is no doubt dissensions have sprung up among the family of the late Ameer, which are leading to results similar to those with which recent events have made us familiar in North America.

THE REPUTED NANA— HIS EXAMINATION.

CAWNPORE, Aug. 25.

Yesterday Dr. Cheke and others went before the Cawnpore magistrate, and swore that the prisoner brought from Ajmere was not the Nana of Bithoor, nor the least like him in features, stature, or expression of face! The man in custody is at least sixty-two years of age, snow white hair, and two inches and a quarter shorter than the Nana of Bithoor.

Great was the disgust expressed at any man being subjected to the deep degradation of being dragged half over India in irons, simply because the Government did not take the trouble of having the alleged rebel identified on the spot by those European gentlemen who have now come forward to swear to one of the most extraordinary instances of mistaken identity on record. It is a most humiliating mistake.

From what follows you will see that the Cawnpore authorities have on their hands a very nice little job in the prisoner who has been brought here as the rebel Nana Dhoondia Punt. While a thousand circumstances tend to the substantiation of his identity with the traitor Bithoor, a thousand witnesses are ready here to swear, not only that this man is not the Nana, but that no portion of his person, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, even resembles the rebel. To add to the mystery, the age, height, complexion, voice, and features of this prisoner are not those of the man as he stood before Colonel Davidson, the Deputy Commissioner at Ajmere. Judging by the carefully drawn descriptive roll, the prisoner has decreased at least 3½ inches in height, lost sundry teeth, acquired a new conformation of jaw, gained at least fifteen years of age, with the unerring marks of actual senility, has lost at least half a maund of flesh, and, in fact, has been the subject of a general and thorough metamorphosis. Minutely and surgically examined at Ajmere, the authorities, with the Nana's descriptive roll before them, declared the prisoner to be unquestionably the man therein described; his appearance corresponded therewith in every particular most remarkably. With the self same document before them, the Cawnpore authorities cannot find one particular in which this prisoner resembles the Nana. The thing is thoroughly perplexing. At one time we all were ready to believe that the Nana was the devil incarnate. Are we still to think so? and that we can change his form, in this man at will? Or is this case an instance of the direct interposition of the fiend—a sort of diabolical miracle—to save from justice his arch apostle of Bithoor? Surely the Ajmere authorities measure and weigh by the same standard as we do; surely the terms "middle age" and "old age" have the same meaning here as there; and surely a plain descriptive roll conveys the same meaning there as at Cawnpore. And yet it scarcely seems so. I append the descriptive roll of the Nana by which the prisoner was identified at Ajmere, and that of the prisoner as taken at Cawnpore by two skilled surgeons and the magistrate—

The Nana in 1858 was 36 years of age.

Of fair complexion.

5 feet 8 in. in height.
Well built and stout, and of powerful frame.
Face, flat, full, and round.

Straight, well-formed, and even graceful in figure.

Large round dark eyes.
Regular well set teeth.

The prisoner here is
At least 55. He has the arcus senilis, an absolute physiological proof that he is above 50.

Of a rough dark complexion.

5 feet 4½ in.
Spare and boney marked,
unmuscular.
Sunken features, longular face, nose singularly prominent and large;
large chin, with eyes large and sunk, but eyeballs prominent.

Lean, stooping, bent, and ungraceful, with an habitual shrug of the shoulders.

Greyish bearded eyes.
Irregular teeth, two lost,
most of the rest loose,
some secured with wire.

Black hair.
Holes bored for ear-rings.
Spoke English.

Hair quite grey.
Holes bored for ear-rings.
It is believed he does not understand a word of English.

Had the cicatrix of a
big toe.

No such mark perceptible.

Nothing unusual about chin or lower jaw.

Has a peculiar and heavy underhanging lower jaw, protruding beyond the upper one.

And yet the captors of the man have a clear and consistent story, tending very nearly to conviction, that there has been no mistake in their capture. And, even to our knowledge here, there occurs in the man's presence and admitted antecedents, as also in his remarkable silence on points which must instantly clear him, if innocent, reasons of very grave suspicion. The personal appearance of the man has changed and is changing. It was openly admitted by the magistrate and the officers assisting him this morning, that not one of the photographs sent from Ajmere is the likeness of this man. Of this you shall judge for yourself, as I have obtained permission to take his portrait as he lies in jail. You will see that the chief informer, whose evidence is given below, attaches very great importance to the prisoner's change of appearance since his capture. Next, it must not be overlooked that it is proved that almost regal ovations have been made to this man, whose birthplace no one knows (if his tale be true); whose existence is of no importance; of whom nobody can give any account; who has wandered for forty years at least no one knows where; and who, in addition to the plainly concocted romance with which he has favoured us, has given us only two statements which are tangible and credible, namely, that "he and the Nana were of the same caste and age, though one used to be a king and he is a beggar," and that "he used to cook Bajereow's bread," an expression full of meaning from a prisoner on his examination suspected to be Bajereow's adopted son.

The above would seem perplexing enough, but the difficulty is now further complicated by the evidence of a native of character and respectability here, servant to a gentleman (E. Mackintosh, Esq.) whose family were residents of Cawnpore for a quarter of a century till slaughtered by the Nana; said witness declaring that the prisoner is well known to him as a faqueer dependent of the Nana's, named Lalpoorie. Of this, however, more to-morrow. At this stage of the proceedings it is right that you should be informed of a few particulars affecting the case, which, though they refer more to the Ajmere Cutcherry than that of Cawnpore, must, in mere justice to him, be mentioned in a report showing that he, the District Superintendent of Police at Ajmere, has brought down to Cawnpore as the Nana, a man sworn to be as dissimilar to him as one man can be to another. Captain Carnell was from first to last persuaded that the prisoner was not the Nana, and was certain that there was no fear of a rising in his behalf. He brought him down here in custody, attended only by an orderly guard of three Sikhs. It will no doubt turn out, as Captain Carnell expects, that this man, though not the Nana, has, or has had, some connection with him, and may, perhaps, be an emissary of his. It is certain that he has been accepted in various places as the Nana's known representative, if not the Nana himself, and that he has received almost regal ovations, made as if to the Nana.

I now append the evidence taken yesterday.

Captain Carnell proved that the prisoner was the man made over to him at Ajmere on the 11th instant. On the way down nothing had transpired tending to prove either that he was or was not the Nana, or a rebel of note, or even a rebel at all, or, indeed, other than he described himself, namely, "a Dekkanee Brahmin faqueer, and so was the Nana; but the Nana was a king, while he (prisoner) is a beggar."

Noor Mahomed, an old, well-known, and respectable inhabitant of Cawnpore, swore positively that the prisoner was not the Nana, whose person he knew well—was nothing like him. (Witness then detailed the various points of discrepancy, for which see the tabular descriptions (given above.)

Hindoo Singh, a resident of Bithoor, to whom the Nana was personally and intimately known, swore unhesitatingly to the same effect. This witness minutely described the persons of the Nana and his two brothers, Baba Bhut and Bala Rao, to neither of whom the person of the prisoner bore the slightest resemblance.

Gunesh Shastree, a Maharastra Brahmin, who knew the Nana for 10 years consecutively, swore that the prisoner did not in the least resemble him, neither did he resemble Baba Bhut.

Shew Churn, another old and respectable resident of Bithoor, who had known the whole family from childhood upwards, both here and in the Deccan, swore positively that the prisoner was neither Nana Dhoondia Punt, nor Baba Butt, nor Bala Rao. (It is well known that the latter has long been dead.)

Dr. Cheke, civil surgeon of Benares (formerly civil surgeon of Cawnpore), deposed:—"I am of the most decided opinion that the prisoner is not the Nana of Bithoor, whom I knew from the year 1849 till the year 1853. I was then civil surgeon at this station, and repeatedly attended upon him and his family, professionally. This man is not so tall as the Nana, nor so stoutly built. The Nana would not now have been much older than forty; this man is at least fifty-five." Dr. Cheke then detailed the particulars of the prisoner's personal appearance (as given above).

Choonee Singh, another old and respectable inhabitant of Bithoor, swore positively that the prisoner resembled neither the Nana nor Baba Bhut. The latter had a defect in his left eye; it was partially closed, though the sight was not quite lost.

Dr. Jones, Civil Surgeon of Cawnpore, then confirmed the prisoner's descriptive roll (given above) as drawn out by himself and Dr. Cheke in the magistrate's office on Saturday last.

Next follow the statements of the informers and spies who effected the capture of the prisoner. These are lengthy and interesting, and I must reserve them for my next.

WEDNESDAY, August 26, 6 P.M.

I have just time to add that, after hearing and sifting the informers' evidence and the testimony of Narrain Row and others of Bithoor, the Cawnpore authorities have definitively pronounced that the prisoner is not the Nana. The special guard over him in gaol has been withdrawn.

CANPORE, August 28.

It is now certain that the prisoner brought to Cawnpore is not the Nana Dhoondia Punt; there is no resemblance whatever between them. It is sworn, too, by many witnesses from Bithoor and elsewhere, whose evidence places the matter beyond doubt or question, that whatever the man may have been, or may have done elsewhere, he was never a person of note here. Among these witnesses is Narrain Row, of Bithoor, who was one of Bajee Row's household, was at Bithoor throughout the rebellion, and to whom the person of every conspicuous rebel is known. Under these circumstances, the special guard which had been placed over the man has been removed; and he remains merely an ordinary prisoner, on suspicion, in the gaol. Indeed, unless some evidence of a more definite nature than is at present forthcoming turns up speedily, the authorities have, I believe, resolved on releasing him forthwith. Notwithstanding the above, the informers and the blind man, who was with him, still persist in declaring that the prisoner is the Nana. The following is the statement of the principal informer and spy, a man named Gya-pershad, formerly a resident of Bithoor:—

"I often saw the Nana at Bithoor before the rebellion, and knew his person well. The prisoner at the bar is he. This is the same man who was arrested by Colonel Davidson at Ajmere. Since his arrest his person has very much changed. He was then a good deal stouter, double his present size, and, besides this, his countenance has undergone a great change. He looks older, more haggard, and more bony than he did; then he was fairer and in good condition, now he is dark, thin, and worn out in appearance. Nevertheless, he is, without doubt, the man—the Nana of Bithoor. I have been after him more than three years, having determined to capture him, because I and my family had been ruined by him and his people at Bithoor. It was only within the last eight months, however, that I got certain and definite information of his movements. At that time, at Poona, I heard that Kishen Rao, formerly an adherent of Bajee Row, and afterwards of the Nana, had endeavoured to raise a disturbance in the Nana's behalf in that part of the country, and that he and the Nana had been together at Hyderabad for the purpose of carrying this measure out. This I heard from Kishen Rao's people, who told me, moreover, that Kishen Rao was then hiding in a garden at Poona, the police being in hot pursuit of him. They had already one man in custody on suspicion of his being Kishen Rao, but no evidence of his identity could be got. The real Kishen Rao was at length caught, and was taken a prisoner to Bombay, but witness did not know what had become of him. The servants of Kishen Rao after a few days became familiar with me, and I gave them to understand that I was disaffected to Government, and only waiting for an opportunity to join others in an insurrection. At last I was taken to Kishen Rao himself, and I told him a long false tale of the way I had been oppressed at Bithoor. I led him to believe that, utterly ruined by Government, I was thirsting for revenge. Kishen Rao then spoke of a rising there on behalf of the Nana; said he himself had been robbed and ruined by the British at Hyderabad, where he lost 4 or 5 lakhs of rupees; and he told me that the Nana, who had lately been at Poona, had now gone to Jeypoor, having taken with him some of his family whom he had left at Ramrajgar Bunder. A man named Pershotum Bhut was with Kishen Rao, performing pooja for the Nana in a toolsee garden; and I went and stopped with him. After a few days I went to Captain Nuttall, of the police, at Sholapore, and told him what I had learnt. As the commissioner was away on his tour I had to wait a few days, when two detectives were given me, and I went on to Jeypore, and there I heard that the Nana had left. I returned to Poona, and found that Pershotum had left, leaving word where I should follow him on. I went to the place, and found three other Brahmins, all doing pooja for the Nana. Pershotum was gone to Jeypore, but Kishen Rao was at Kandallah. I had with me Shewdeen Singh and Dwarka Pershad, two detectives. They remained while I went on to Bombay to give information to Mr. Forjett. That officer sent me back to Jeypore after the Nana with full powers, and two secret police officers. At Ooriha-nauth I found some Brahmins, from whom I learnt that the Nana was gone on to Saloombar. I offered them large bribes to show me the Nana, and one of them consented. To him I gave Rs. 600. With this man I went to Indore, and there (at a little distance) came to a place where an old subadar and some other old servants of the Peishwa live. Two of these were prevailed upon by the Brahmin with me to accompany us, and they did so. From them I heard that Tintia Topee's family had been left by the Nana at Ramrajgar. Thence we went to Joorce, and afterwards near Saloombar. We were afraid to go into Saloombar, but remained in the jungle, a little way off. After a short stay there the Nana came out, and passed the spot where we were. He was mounted upon a white horse, attended by 150 or 200 mounted men and as many on foot. It was the Nana—this prisoner. I recognised him instantly. I saw him very often at his own place before the rebellion. When at Ajmere, before the Deputy Commissioner, he did not look so old and dark as he does now; nor did he stoop as he now does. At Ajmere, before Colonel Davidson, the prisoner himself declared his age to be forty, or thereabouts, adding, 'I used to cook Bajee Rao's bread.'

The informer went on to state how he had tracked the prisoner step by step from Saloombar to Ajmere; but this was not recorded, as it seemed irrelevant to this inquiry, which is merely directed to ascertain whether the prisoner is or is not the Nana in person.

The authorities have reported, finally, that the prisoner is not the Nana, and they are now waiting return orders.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES OF INDIA."

SIR,—In your issue of the 2nd instant you publish from your Cawnpore correspondent a description of the prisoner supposed to be the Nana, drawn out by Drs. Cheeke and Jones, compared with the descriptive roll published by Government of what the Nana was in 1858. The Cawnpore surgeons depose that the prisoner is at least fifty-five years of age, whereas the Nana at the present time would not be more than forty-one, and found their opinion on the fact of the man having a certain condition of the eye called arcus senilis, which they say is an absolute physiological proof of the man being over fifty. This would appear to perfectly set at rest all doubt in the matter and decide that the prisoner is not the man so much needed. Now, if these gentlemen had stated that as a rule arcus senilis only occurred in persons over fifty, instead of laying it down as an absolute physiological proof of the man's age, they would have been correct; for, as an exception, this condition of the eye does sometimes exist in persons much younger than the age these gentlemen mention. "Lawrence on Diseases of the Eye," 356, in a section devoted to arcus senilis, mentions the following:—"It occurs much earlier in some individuals than in others, being occasionally seen between thirty and forty, but usually not till after the latter age." Again, Dr. Watson, in his lectures on the practice of medicine, mentioning arcus senilis in his lecture on diseases of the heart, states:—"I am acquainted with a gentleman under forty years of age who, enjoying excellent health, presents a well marked arcus in both his eyes, in whom that appearance has remained unaltered certainly since he was twenty-four years of age, and perhaps from an earlier period."

Under these circumstances I think you will agree with me that this condition of the prisoner's eye goes for nothing as proof that he is not the Nana; for presuming that the Nana had no such affliction five years back, the mental anxiety that he has undergone, combined with the exposure to which he has been subjected since, would be sufficient to age the man, producing degeneration of tissue, and consequently such a condition of the eye. Then, again, the prisoner himself states that he is the same age as the Nana, whereas if he was older, it would be to his advantage to say so.

I have brought these facts to your notice, as great stress appears to be laid upon the apparent age of this man. M. D.

THE CAMP OF EXERCISE AT LAHORE.

The following movements of troops will take place in the Punjab in the ensuing cold season, consequent upon the Viceroy's tour, and the formation of a camp of exercise at Lahore:—

The 23rd N.I. will escort the Governor-General's camp as far as Sealkote. Then the D Battery, 5th Brigade, R.H.A., squadron 20th Hussars, 7th Royal Fusiliers, 2nd Bengal Cavalry, 24th P.N.I. will escort it as far as Peshawur.

At Peshawur the Battery of R.H.A. and the 24th N.I. will be relieved by E Battery 2nd Brigade R.H.A. and 14th N.I. respectively.

On arrival at Rawul Pindie in return, E Battery will be relieved by A Battery 5th Brigade R.H.A.

The arrangements for the escort have been formed as much as possible on financial grounds, advantage having been taken of troops marching in relief. The 93rd, we believe, were intended to escort the camp, but in consequence of their being so sickly, the 7th Fusiliers were substituted.

The Commander-in-Chief starts from Kalka about the 15th November to Meeran Meer, escorted by the 2nd Goorkha Regiment.

The following troops will form the Camp of exercise at Meeran Meer. They are to be assembled in December:—

ROYAL HORSE ARTILLERY:—E Battery 5th Brigade Royal Horse Artillery; B Battery 5th Brigade (Armstrong guns); A Battery 5th Brigade; F Battery 5th Brigade.

ROYAL ARTILLERY:—E Battery 24th Brigade (Heavy); A C Battery 19th Brigade; E Battery 19th Brigade.

CAVALRY:—20th Hussars; 21st Hussars; 2nd Bengal Cavalry; 9th Bengal Cavalry; 10th Bengal Cavalry; 9th Bengal Cavalry.

INFANTRY:—3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade; 7th Royal Fusiliers; 42nd Royal Highlanders; 93rd Highlanders; 94th Foot. Head quarters, Sappers and Miners.

NATIVE INFANTRY:—6th Native Infantry; 3rd Sikhs; 23rd Native Infantry; 27th Native Infantry; 1st Goorkhas; 2nd Goorkhas.

Altogether, 4 batteries of Royal Horse Artillery, 4 batteries Field Artillery, 2 regiments of Hussars, 4 regiments of Bengal Cavalry, 5 regiments of British Infantry, 4 companies of Sappers, 5½ regiments of Native Infantry; or a total of about 47 guns and 10,000 men.—Delhi Gazette.

THE RAILWAY FROM DELHI TO KURRACHEE.

It is difficult to over-estimate the changes which the completion of the railway system of India within the next four years will make in all departments of our administration, and in many of the social habits of both Anglo-Indians and Asiatics. It will affect the locality of the Imperial capital and the character of the Imperial legislature. It will lead to the formation of new civil stations, and to the construction of roads, solely with reference to the railway lines. It will influence travelling allowances as well as the strength of the staff of almost every department, and will give new facilities for our administration to penetrate to the obscurest villages and the humblest classes. In a military point of view, the completion of the trunk system will work most radical changes in the strength of our army, the position of our cantonments, the health of the soldiers, and the expenditure of the twelve millions sterling devoted to the army every year. The society changes have already begun, and may prove the most radical of all, though they are at present too subtle in their nature for us to estimate them.

The most patent changes in India effected by railways will certainly, however, be seen in the extent and flow of traffic. Confining our attention to India north of the Nizam's country, a study of its physical geography, and of the facts recently taught us by the excited cotton trade will lead us to pretty definite conclusions as to the various courses trade will take. The civil station at Allyghur is called Coel, a place of importance at the time when William the Conqueror landed in England. The traveller who cares to look around him will see, at the junction of three roads, a table of distances erected for his guidance, and from this he will learn the fact that Coel is equidistant from Bombay and Calcutta, being, as near as possible, 800 miles from each. We should be inclined to fix upon this as the culminating point of the great trade-shed of Northern India. We believe that in general all traffic to the east of this will find its way by the railway down the Doab and Gangetic valley to Calcutta; all traffic to the south and south-west will be attracted to Bombay; while that which awaits transit to the north and north-west will seek an outlet by Delhi or Seharunpore, Lahore, and Kurrachee. During the past two years bales of cotton have actually followed these geographical lines, in spite of the obstacles which at present make the last the least attractive. The line from Delhi to Kurrachee is as yet opened only for the few miles from Umritsur to Lahore, and from Kotree on the Indus to Kurrachee, not 150 in all. It is clearly the interest of the Punjab and Sind authorities to complete that line, without a break, with all possible speed.

The line from Delhi or Meerut to Lahore has been surveyed and sanctioned. The capital is guaranteed, and we should like to see the energetic chairman of the Sind and Punjab Railways, Mr. W. P. Andrew, really beginning the work. Every day's delay will prove a serious obstacle to the future railway and commercial prosperity of the Punjab and Sind. Traffic is like a little water, it will run to the best channel and avoid all obstacles. Dammed up as it now is at Delhi, it will soon wear away so good a bed for itself to south-east and south-west, that the tardily completed Delhi and Lahore Railway will work in vain. But there is another obstacle which must be removed, even were that line and the Lahore and Mooltan section complete. Whatever may be done to improve the navigation of the Indus, either by engineering or by first-class steamers, it will always be dangerous, tardy, and unpopular. It is madness to dream that Kurrachee will become the actual as it is the natural port of the Punjab and Western Central Asia, if an unsafe river navigation is to be the link between the Punjab and Sind Railways. The Sind and Punjab Railway Company have already urged the survey of the Indus hiatus, but we should like to see the Government of the Punjab and Sind clamorous for its immediate construction. The evil—perhaps, in some cases inevitable—of our past railway construction has been that we have made lines and sections of lines piecemeal instead of simultaneously. The result is a serious loss to the public. The two railways from Calcutta to Bombay will long be unable to pay the guaranteed interest, because the Jubbulpore link is wanting. Let not this mistake be repeated in the Punjab. Simultaneously with the construction of the line from Delhi to Lahore, let a railway be laid from Mooltan to Kotree, so that in less than five years Kurrachee may become as much the port of Delhi as Calcutta will soon be of Ailhabad, and Bombay of Nagpore.

The interests at stake are so great as to demand importunity on the part of the Punjab and Sind authorities. Sir Robert Montgomery, at least, does not overlook them, and we are sure Sir Bartle Frere, whose protégé Sind is, will still less ignore them. The former has just induced the Maharajah of Cashmere to concede certain commercial facilities, which we ought never to have given his father the power to refuse. In spite of the disturbed state of Central Asia, the trade returns of Kurrachee during the past official year show that its wool, fibres, and drugs are steadily pouring down in exchange for our cloths, cutlery, and condiments. Moreover, there is the Punjab itself, a province which might feed England with wheat as fine as that of the Ukraine, and which, in one year, has produced nearly a million bales of cotton. Surely the small but annually increasing colonies of tea planters on the slopes of the Western Himalayas will never consent that their communication with the sea should be broken by that horrible gap from Mooltan to Kotree, where steamers are always breaking down in their tedious voyages and people are dying from the heat. And if already the trade of Kurrachee has grown in two years from two and a half to five and a half millions sterling in value, what will it not become when man, by his railways, makes it what nature has physically intended it to be—the drainer of all the vast country from Khylat, Peshawur, Cashmere, and Central Asia, to Coel, Delhi, and the yet to be fertilised deserts of Rajpootana and Sind? Hitherto British Burmah has distanced its elder sister. Sind, if not in itself yet as the outlet of the hardy millions of the Punjab, will prove a formidable rival to Bombay, if the Indus link is riveted simultaneously with that from Delhi to Lahore. Kurrachee must become the port of Delhi.—Friend of India.

SATYENDRA TAGORE AND THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The last overland mail brings the happy tidings of a decisive step in advance taken by our countrymen in the march of progress. Among the names of the successful candidates for the Indian Civil Service appointments is found that of Satyendra Tagore, a Calcutta Baboo, late of the Calcutta University. The Tagore is an historical family, that has played a very important part in the history of the progress of British enlightenment in India; and we are glad to find that its present representative, Mr. Satyendra, has proved himself worthy of the well-known house. It has recently been the fashion to compare the people of Western with that of Eastern India, and many an observing writer or speaker has deemed it appropriate to pronounce us as fast gaining in our race over the Calcutta Baboos. Often do we read expressions of admiration and respect bestowed in the Calcutta papers upon our enlightenment, public spirit, and all that. Even in point of intellectual attainments, we have had one-sided admirers. Our own travellers to Calcutta boasted the other day of our knowledge and our improvement; and the Indian Field, an independent English journal, in reviewing a recent Bombay work, in spite of one fault, which it discerned in it, made some admission highly flattering to the Bombay people:—"Latterly the natives of Bombay are rapidly stealing a march in the progress of civilisation in full competition with their compatriots of Bengal, and unless the Bengalees exhibit greater energy, public spirit, and patriotism than they have hitherto manifested, they are sure to be overmatched by the Parsis and Hindoos of the Western Presidency, an earnest of which contingency is undoubtedly presented in the work of Framji Bomanji now under review."

But this is all undue sanguineness; and we believe it will be many years yet before the Parsis or the Hindoos of Bombay will supersede the Baboos in any respect. We are only noising in the world, while all earnest efforts are being made by our friends in Bengal. Our social progress—our so called refinements of female society and the breaking down of religious monstrosities—we only recently contrasted with the silent workings of the Baboos, and found ourselves wanting in the balance of comparison. Let us now see what we have done in point of intellectual advancement. The Baboos have got among themselves a native barrister and a native civil servant, too. We have as yet sent no one from among us to England for passing a course of instruction at the Temple to join our bar, while the great noise we made in the world for the civil service grade has brought to us only shame and chagrin. We sent up several of our youths, but one returned after complaining that he was unjustly treated in the standard of the required age being lowered after his joining the college only upon the faith of the old limit, though there is no reason why he should not have competed at all a year previous to his intention. Next went two young men of the Kama family, as if, because they could afford the expense, they could also afford labour and brains for the standard, but both returned after some three or four years' trial and an enormous expenditure of money, giving up the prize they were so sanguine at first to obtain. A fourth candidate, who promised well in the beginning, and who stood firm to the last, gave up his ambition and joined a mercantile firm some six months ago. He is also expected to return in a month or two. These have been our successes in the intellectual race; let that of Mr. Satyendra speak itself for the people of Calcutta.—Indian Banner, August 29.

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.

One of the most extraordinary papers that ever issued from a public office is one recently published by the Indian Government, "regarding the Aborigines of the Andaman Islands; the establishment of a village on Ross Island, called the 'Andaman Home' for their accommodation; and the measures commenced for their civilisation and instruction." The sentence just quoted is not a bad example of the style and tone that characterise the report itself. The obvious meaning of the second clause is, that Ross Island is called the Andaman Home in order to accommodate the Aborigines. The paper in question consists of an absurdly stiff and stilted letter, in King Cambyes vein, from Lieutenant Colonel Tytler, Officiating Superintendent of Port Blair, forwarding a most laughable communication from the Rev. Mr. Corbyn. Mighty warriors are not compelled to be agreeable writers—Caesars and Napoleons being the exception rather than the rule—but we do not expect of a clergyman of the Church of England that he should express himself with propriety and decorum, and neither act nor write like a lad just escaped from a public school. Anthing more ludicrously stately than the "I, therefore," with which Colonel Tytler commences half-a-dozen different sentences can hardly be conceived. His account, too, of the success achieved by Mr. Corbyn is a trifle more highly coloured than that reverend gentleman's detailed narrative altogether warranted. He states, truly enough, that a village or home had been formed on Ross Island, in which twenty Aborigines, men, women, and children, were living quietly and peaceably on the 25th June. Then, warming with poetic fire, he launches out into an idyllic strain. Here, he says or sings, "here they may be seen sitting down (an interesting spectacle, certainly, and one worthy of official record), some working and making baskets, the women sewing clothes, and the two prisoners learning and repeating the alphabet of the English language under the guidance of instructors whom I have appointed." This "strange and somewhat marvellous change in their habits"—including, we presume, their sitting down—Colonel Tytler attributes to "the management and assistance rendered to me by the Rev. Mr. Corbyn;" but we are not informed who or how many are "the instructors appointed by me" to teach the English alphabet to two of these pigmy savages, or what amount of salary is awarded for the performance of such high educational duties.

But if Colonel Tytler's letter to the Government, and his instructions to Mr. Corbyn remind one of a child "making believe" to be king, with a Noah's Ark for a kingdom, what shall we say of Mr. Corbyn's absurd and conceited narrative? His notion of civilising and instructing the barbarians is extremely comical. One of the boys proving refractory while conning his alphabet, his instructor, by way of enforcing his attention to his lesson, held down his head over the book. Just so have we seen gardeners at home peg down a bough or twig, in order that it should strike roots downward and grow up a beautiful and ornamental shrub. But Mr. Corbyn did not confine his labours to the schoolroom. Armed with pistol and dagger as a member of the Church Militant, and escorted by a boat's crew also armed to the teeth, he made frequent excursions to the mainland, taking with him plantains and cocoanuts and occasionally a pig. The following extract will sufficiently illustrate the reverend gentleman's mode of proceeding, and also the general tone and tenour of his very minute narrative:—

"An aged woman now came up, a fierce-looking virago; she appeared idiotic, and talked loud and angrily, as if cursing. I made the usual salutation, which she returned, but after doing so gnashed her teeth close to my hand, and then contemptuously flung it from her, as much as to signify that she had a good will to bite and tear me if she could. She exhibited the same animosity to other Europeans. I concluded that she was insane, and she may possibly have been rendered fierce by losing a son or other near relative in affrays with Europeans. The other savages were extremely demonstrative in their friendship; most of them felt my limbs, and examined my hands and fingers, as if tracing the veins; they pointed with pleasure to a souvenir which I wore, given to me by Polly, a piece of her coral bracelet which she had fastened to my necktie. After joining in their dance we embraced them and returned, bringing with us a small axe and some bows and arrows which they offered us of their own accord; none of them showed an inclination to return with us, the pig which we had left behind being for the time the absorbing attraction."

Imagine an English clergyman, by his own account a muscular Christian, joining in a dance which appears to be a sort of cross between the "double-shuffle" and the cacoon, with a party of savages dressed in red mud, and winding up with embracing his partner, who after all seems to have been thinking more of roast pig than of her clerical cavalier, notwithstanding his Christian muscles. At another time he was delighted to see an infant "after satisfying itself from its mother's breast clamour to her to hold down her mouth, and try with its tiny arms resting on her necklace to raise its mouth to kiss." A charming vignette, no doubt, but unhappily for Mr. Corbyn's sentimental emotion, the object of baby's excitement "was explained by the mother putting her lips down to her child's, and giving it from her mouth some munched cocoanut which the child had watched her chewing. The other women," he goes on to say, "occasionally gave it food and water in just the same way that birds impart nourishment to their young." How charmingly graphic! And what a pretty idea is this of "imparting nourishment" as the little dicky birds do! In a similar spirit and with equal force of character Mr. Corbyn depicts the process of tuition, so enthusiastically alluded to by the superintendent of the settlement:—

"The four Andamanese whom we brought over were a woman known as Queen Vic., and renamed by me Bess, and three men who are well known as Joe, Jacko, and Jingo. It was thought advisable to employ the new party as well as the former comers, and accordingly Snowball and Jumbo, besides their instruction in the alphabet, were sent to work at basket and morah-making, at which Jingo, a very quiet and tractable man, but who at first seemed the most unruly, assisted them; while Jacko and Joe were daily instructed by a Burmese to make bamboo matting for flooring, the women Topsy and Bess receiving lessons in sewing. They all showed a strong disinclination to do work of any kind. Joe, who is a very dodging and deceptive man, but extremely playful, almost always laughing and in high spirits, would try every artifice to escape the mat-work—at one time making a show of working hard at it, and as soon as he was not observed quietly sliding into a corner, or pretending to be raking the fire, or to want something left on the machaun, or to be under the necessity of going out for a few moments, or else simulating illness, or if all these shifts failed, half petulant, half amused with a bellow of disgust returning to his work, only to try the same tricks again and jest at all around him. Jacko showed a more pugnacious spirit, and was inclined to resist with force till he found such resistance unavailing. The same opposition was encountered in teaching Topsy and Bess sewing, but they were soon overcome by firmness; and though now, for other important reasons, these industrial occupations have been abandoned, yet in the time they were thus employed, both the Andamanese women gave proof that they had a real aptitude for delicate manual labour, and that they would be capable of doing the finest work in sewing under a course of proper training."

Could no better names, we should like to ask, be devised than Joe and Jacko and Jingo? Surely something more decorous than the names usually given to pet monkeys might have been found for these neophytes of civilisation. But the entire paper bears the imprint of a weak and vulgar mind, and as the old rhyme quaintly if coarsely expresses it:—

None can a pitcher turn to a silver piece,
Nor make a goodly silk of a goat's fleece;
And hard is also to make withouten fail,
A bright two-handed sword of a cow's tail.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHOLERA.—We are happy to state, on the authority of the Oudh Gazette, that cholera has almost, if not entirely disappeared from the civil station and cantonments of Lucknow. The two companies of the wing of H.M.'s 107th Regiment, which went into camp on the first appearance of the disease, continued remarkably healthy, notwithstanding the fact that the camp was formed within a short distance of a native village in which the cholera was raging at the time. Another site will be selected as soon as the weather will admit of the camp being broken up.

THE BURNEY TRIAL.—The great Burney trial is over, and judgment has at last been pronounced. Major-general Burney comes out of the fiery ordeal through which he has just passed with untarnished honour, though not without a slight smell of burning on his garments. The only points, however, on which he appears at all in an unfavourable light were his omission to place Colonel Gordon and Mr. Eyre under arrest, and his lamentable weakness in resigning his command. For this reason he has been awarded comparatively small damages—Rs. 2,000—but enough to vindicate his character as an officer and a gentleman. On the other hand, Mr. Eyre has been clearly convicted of uttering the most vile and deliberate falsehoods, while Colonel Gordon has been shown to have been actuated by harsh and uncharitable feelings. Indeed, not one member of "the combination" escapes a severe wiggling from the learned Judge, who has tracked out all the doublings of this extraordinary case with the courage, persistence, and sagacity of a sleuth-hound. For the moment, we shall say no more than that the admirable judgment delivered yesterday by Sir Mordaunt Wells is a worthy culmination of his Indian glories, and will not easily be forgotten by those who had the good fortune to be present on the occasion. A concise summary of the case will be sent home in our overland paper to-morrow, and on Monday we hope to give a tolerably full narrative of all the incidents of this extraordinary romance in real life. On the following day the narrative, evidence, and judgment will be made up together in the form of a pamphlet.—Overland Bengal Hurkaru, Aug. 29.

BRIGADIER SWINLEY.—We regret to hear that Brigadier Swinley, of the artillery, is dangerously ill at Nynee Tal, suffering from what is called Bright's disease.—Lahore Chronicle, Aug. 19.

AGRA SAVINGS-BANK.—The half-yearly meeting of the Agra Savings-bank was held on Saturday, when the report of the manager showed a gross profit on the half-year's operations of Rs. 27,938; of which, after deducting interest on deposits closed, transfers to doubtful debts, &c., a divisible surplus was left of Rs. 8,642-7. The usual dividend of 24 per cent. per annum, or Rs. 12 per share, was declared, and a bonus of Rs. 16-10-8 per share, consequent on the late increase of capital. We shall publish the proceedings in detail to-morrow.—Allahabad Gazette, Aug. 11.

STAFF CORPS FURLONGS.—A despatch from Sir Charles Wood, dated 16th May, 1863, is published for general information, and lays down that for the future Staff Corps officers formerly under the old furlough regulations will be under the operation of clause seven of the Furlough Rules of 1854. That clause it will be recollected allows a second furlough of two years, after ten years service in India from the date of return from the first furlough of two years. Officers who have been to Europe on medical certificate are entitled to their furlough six years after their return to duty.

INDIAN CURRENCY.—At the close of last month the state of the currency was, according to the Friend, as follows. As some securities are still under adjustment, the amount invested may be estimated at one million sterling, or only one-fourth of the sum allowed by law. The profit of the currency of the State is thus at present the interest of a million sterling at 5 per cent. Notes in circulation, Calcutta, 2,65,00,000; Bombay, 1,81,00,000; Madras, 65,00,000; total, 5,11,00,000. Silver coin reserve, Calcutta, 1,75,94,247; Bombay, 51,00,000; Madras, 65,00,000; total, 2,91,94,247. Silver bullion reserve, Bombay, 1,30,00,000; total, 1,30,00,000. Government securities, Calcutta, 89,05,753; total, 89,05,753.

N. W. PROVINCES.—An interesting trial is likely soon to take place in the High Court in Calcutta, in which Colonel Crommelin, late our chief engineer, will be defendant. It appears a Mr. Sutton, late a sergeant in the Sappers and Miners, and an overseer in the Department Public Works, and who lately got his discharge from the army, is about to proceed against Government, or rather Colonel Crommelin as their representative, for publishing in the Government Gazette that Mr. Sutton had been suspended from Government employ, and also for sending circulars to parties with whom Mr. S. had contracts, by which he lost those contracts. The facts which gave rise to Mr. Sutton's dismissal are these:—Mr. Sutton was overseer in charge of the road between this and Cawnpore, and was charged by his immediate superior, Mr. Nolan, (late ex-engineer here, but now employed under the contractors Jubbulpore Railway) in conjunction with a native supervisor, with an attempt to defraud Government. The native was convicted and duly punished, but a court of enquiry at Colonel Crommelin's request was assembled, and Mr. Sutton was examined on charges made against him by the Colonel. The court on these charges recorded their opinion that Mr. Sutton was only guilty of negligence, and that the charge of fraud could not be proved against him. The Judge Advocate-General, however, differed with the court's opinion, and asserted that Mr. Sutton could be tried on the charge of embezzlement, but now came the difficulty; by what tribunal was he to be tried, whether by a court-martial, or by the civil powers, for previous to the court of enquiry he had obtained his discharge from the service. Government in their decision considered that the punishment of dismissal from his situation was enough, and accordingly the order was issued by the chief engineer. Mr. Sutton has memorialised Lord Elgin, praying the order for his dismissal may be cancelled, setting forth at the same time many extenuating facts as a plea in his favour. It remains to be seen what view Lord Elgin will take of the case, but should it be favourable to Mr. Sutton, he intends to proceed against Colonel Crommelin for defamation of character, and for compensation for the contracts he has lost through the order published in the Gazette.—Delhi Gazette.

PRIZE-MONEY.—His Excellency, the Governor in Council, authorises the issue of the first distribution of prize-money, captured at the following places, at the rate specified opposite to each. Nurgood prize-money, Rs. 15 per share; Shorapore prize-money, Rs. 27 per share; Hulgullee prize-money, Rs. 20 per share; Sathpoora (Khandesh) prize-money, Rs. 55 per share.

THE BARQUE "POMONA."—The Government Telegraph Gazette of last evening announced that the barque Pomona had got ashore below Bedford's Channel whilst proceeding down the river in tow of the steamer Linnet. The Pomona left Calcutta on the morning of Tuesday last, and was bound for Singapore. The steam tug remains in attendance.—Hurkaru, Aug. 27.

PERSIA.—TABREEZ, Aug. 25.—Mr. Alison, her Majesty's minister to the Shah, arrived here on Wednesday last, on his return from England to Teheran, accompanied by Mr. Watson, one of the secretaries of the mission. He was received, of course, with the usual official honour, long since abandoned with you in Turkey, but still maintained here in as much barbaric completeness as when Tamerlane, or Nadir Shah at least, was king. A whole legion of Persian functionaries went out to meet him, followed by a perfect troop of led horses, splendidly caparisoned, and 200 mounted gholams, all gaudily dressed and armed, their horses being, if possible, more splendidly brilliant than themselves. To these were added the English Consul-General and a goodly company of British protégés—for we still "protect" largely in Azerbidjan—all in the fullest holiday finery. Mr. Alison was met a long way out in the plain in his carriage, which he had brought with him from England, but on the cavalcade coming up he mounted a led charger, and, being in full uniform, came on like a real elchee, with his barbaric train behind. Half way in a large tent was spread for his Excellency's reception, and there the party halted and partook of the usual Persian refreshments—calouns, tea, sweetmeats, and sherbet. These over, the journey in was resumed, and the cavalcade made its "solemn entry," amid nearly as much dust, hubbub, turning out of guards, and all the other et ceteras of official honour as if Nousedreddin Shah himself had been there in bodily presence. Since then the Sirdar, who acts as a kind of dry nurse to the heir apparent, who, though in this case only a boy eleven years of age, is prescriptive Governor-General of this province, gave a grand entertainment in honour of the returned minister. The dinner on the occasion was excellent, being a happy mixture of native and European dishes, and served up with the infidel accompaniments of knives and forks and excellent wine. The host's garden, one of the best in Tabreez, was brilliantly illuminated; fireworks, too, were let off in startling abundance, and a military band discoursed such "music" as should, even at this distance, have made the bones of Mozart or Donizetti rattle in their graves. A great gun of the evening was a celebrated native tenore, who frequently sings before the Shah, and who on this occasion rendered a variety of native airs, and recited choice poems of Afiz and Saadi, on the whole not unpleasantly. The scene was right Oriental in every detail, and in none more, perhaps, than in the fact that the giver of the feast enjoys practically unlimited power of life and death—a right, too, which is no dead letter in his hands. He can, and does, strangle, behead, chop off limbs, torture, and blow up (with gunpowder) as many of the Shah's lieges in this province as he likes; and, as I say, he makes a pretty liberal use of his power. With all this, however, he is "as mild a mannered man as ever cut a throat"—in fact, a perfect type of a Persian gentleman; and as our heads and limbs, at least, were safe from his power, we enjoyed his company and his good cheer immensely. Speaking of the heir apparent, I may just say that he is a very pretty, bland, intelligent looking boy, with fine regular features—quite a type, in fact, of his Royal Kandar race. His natural disposition is said to be excellent; but through what influences must he pass before he reaches manhood and his throne!—Levant Herald.

NOTWITHSTANDING that cholera has at last assumed an epidemic form throughout the province, and is now prevailing in the Roy Bareilly, Fyzabad, Seetapore, and Hurdi districts, we are happy to announce that, since our last issue, there have been no fresh cases amongst the European troops. Of the twenty-two cases that, from the commencement, have occurred in H.M.'s 107th Regiment, only nine have proved fatal; and out of three men of H.M.'s 48th Regiment attacked, two have died. Since Friday, the 31st ult., there has not been a single case in the Central Jail; and all the convalescents in hospital are recovering rapidly. During the last five days the mortality in the native city has decreased 75 per cent.—Oudh Gazette, August 12.

Mr. S. D. BIRCH, Deputy-Auditor and Accountant-General at Bombay, leaves for England immediately, and Mr. F. Lushington, Deputy-Auditor and Accountant-General for Madras, now on sick leave, will not return to the country. It is also believed that Mr. R. P. Harrison, Accountant-General and Auditor-General for India, will not again risk his health in India, and two uncovenanted officers also vacate their appointments. This will promote all hands in the Account Department, certainly not before promotion has been deserved. Some dissatisfaction exists in consequence of the claims of many having been set aside, although they were highly recommended by their superiors in office. We hope Sir Charles Trevelyan will act for himself and advance the view of those who have been recommended on the present occasion. We are not aware that the probationers have as yet distinguished themselves in any way, and until they do we certainly think they should not stand in the way of thoroughly practical men, to whose exertions Sir Charles Trevelyan owes the success of his Budget.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC RECEIPTS.—The receipts of the Great Southern of India Railway for the week ending 8th August, 1863, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 2,852-11-0, and for luggage, goods, &c., to Rs. 2,338-8-0, making together Rs. 5,191-3-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 65-11-0. During the corresponding week in 1862 the receipts were Rs. 4,836-5-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 61-4-0.

A DYING RAJAH.—We learn with deep regret that Rajah Radha Kanta Deb Bahadoor is lying dangerously sick in his garden house at Sukhchar. A vernacular contemporary reports the following conversation to have taken place between the venerable Rajah on his sick bed, and Pundit Maheslia Chandra Nayaratra. The Rajah turning to the Pundit said,—"Bhattacharjee, the present is a fit time for the abandonment of this body. I don't think I shall survive this attack. You are a Brahman, and are acquainted with the Vedas, please go through the ceremony of Swastayan, that I may soon be emancipated." The Nayaratra replied,—"Yes, the time is seasonable, so far as you are concerned; but the state of the country is such that we cannot bid you farewell. When you disappear, what will be the fate of practical religion and Sanscrit-professing Brahmans and Pundits?" The old Rajah, putting his hand on Rajah Kamal Krishna, who was sitting by, said,—"This full moon will continue to shine. May God give him long life. So long as he lives, no one will regret my departure. He will yet do more glorious things than I have done."—Indian Reformer.

REPLY TO THE ADDRESS TO THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.—We received last evening the following letter from S. Gladstone, Esq., Sheriff of Calcutta, which acknowledges the receipt, by the Prince and Princess of Wales, of the Address from the European and native inhabitants of Calcutta.—Marlborough House, June 30, 1863.—Lieutenant General Knollys had the honour of laying before the Prince and Princess of Wales an Address from the European and native inhabitants of Calcutta on their Royal Highnesses marriage, and to convey their sincere thanks for the warm congratulations contained therein. Their Royal Highnesses are very sensible of the earnest good wishes which the inhabitants of Calcutta offer for their future happiness.

—Bengal Hurkaru, Aug. 22.

REMARriage OF HINDOO WIDOWS.—The remarriage of Hindoo widows is being carried out with energy and perseverance in Lower Bengal, according to the following, which we take from the Indian Reformer:—"It gives us great pleasure to inform our readers that the marriage of a Hindu widow was celebrated on the 30th ultimo, in the village of Chandrakona, in the district of Hooghly. The bride, whose name is Nilamani Dasi, is the daughter of Baboo Gopi Nath Dutt, of the Kayastha caste, an inhabitant of Bachua, in the district of Midnapore. Her first marriage took place when she was only seven years of age; at eight she became a widow; and now she is twelve years old. The fortunate man who has obtained the hand of the young widow is Parvati Charan Sarkar, the son of Baboo Laksmi Narayan Sarkar, an inhabitant of Keshal, in the district of Midnapore. The nuptials were witnessed by a large number of respectable Hindu gentlemen. Thus slowly but surely is reform taking place in Hindu society."

A NEAT THING.—Here is a neat thing in the way of Joint-Stock Companies. A Mr. R. J. Hodge, who keeps a small watchmaker's shop in this street, is blossoming out into a "Limited Company." At least, he has put forth a prospectus with that object in view. He does not, indeed, ask for any enormous amount of capital, the withdrawal of which from general circulation might derange the operations of the money market. Rupees fifteen thousand is all that he demands, and he is willing to sell a share for the small sum of three pounds. Though candidly confessing that he is not himself a wealthy man, he offers to guarantee a dividend of 12 per cent. for the first three years, which he does the more readily from entertaining a well-founded conviction that the annual profits will not be less than 25 per cent. One advantage is that there is nothing to pay for old stock, and not much for old customers. Shareholders will, consequently, be in a position to procure their own stock and acquire their own customers, besides engaging the services of Mr. Hodge as manager for a nominal salary of Rs. 130 per mensem, and a trifling commission on all sales effected. Mr. Hodge will also consent to act as secretary, in consideration of a further nominal salary. And so enormous are the profits of watch-making that shareholders will be charged 10 per cent. less on purchases, and 20 per cent. less on repairs, than ordinary customers. As soon as the first instalment of Rs. 15 per share has been realised, a remittance will be sent to England for the purchase of stock. The purport of the company will, therefore, be to collect a sum of £1,500 to enable Mr. Hodge to pay his landlady the three hundred and odd rupees for which she obtained a decree against him the other day in the Small Cause Court, and to secure to him a small annual income in place of a small annual loss. The object is a good one from Mr. Hodge's point of view; but a supremely ridiculous one from any other.—Hurkaru.

Mr. J. H. MORRIS, who has ably filled the office of magistrate and collector of Allahabad for upwards of two years, has, we understand, been transferred to the Nagpore Commission, as settlement commissioner. There are, we believe, few officers under Government who so thoroughly understand the intricate revenue system of our provinces as Mr. Morris; and his late successful settlement operations in the Trans Jumna Pergunnahs of Bara and Khyragurh show that he is peculiarly qualified for the post which he is now going to occupy. He has deservedly earned the thanks of Government for this work. Both as magistrate and collector, and as superintendent of the affairs connected with the civil station, Mr. Morris has always given the highest satisfaction to those with whom he has come in contact. He will carry with him the good wishes of the whole community.

CAPTAIN SLADEN's battery of artillery, D, of the 5th Royal Horse Brigade, has been warned that it will form part of the escort of his Excellency the Viceroy on his approaching tour. We believe the battery will meet his lordship at Sealkote, and march with him to Peshawur.—Lahore Chronicle, Aug. 15.

A DISPUTED POLICY OF INSURANCE.—A question of very considerable importance to insurers on the one hand, and to insurance companies on the other, will shortly be decided before the High Court of Madras. It appears that the plaintiff in the action is the father of a late member of the Civil Service, and the defendants, the Albert Medical Life Insurance Company. The point at issue is the payment of a policy for ten thousand rupees on the life of the deceased. The company declines to meet the claim, on the alleged ground that the deceased died from the effects of intemperance, "and that, at the time he effected the insurance, his habits were not such as were certified to in his declaration, nor in that of his private friend." The deceased died within a short period after the insurance was effected, and this, for reasons not stated, is regarded as a suspicious circumstance. The company did not, however, demur to paying a policy for twenty thousand rupees, effected on the life of the deceased at a former period, on the ground "that it was not supposed that his intemperate habits had been contracted until recently before his death." A somewhat parallel case was brought before the High Court of this Presidency about two years ago. We refer to the case of Farquhar v. Albert Medical Life Insurance Company, and in that case judgment for the full amount claimed was given in favour of the plaintiff, the court holding that the case did not disclose such evidence of intemperate habits as would entitle the company to plead non-liability. No doubt, while the law should protect insurance companies against fraud of this nature, the security of insurers would be greatly jeopardised if claims were to be set aside, unless upon the clearest and most satisfactory evidence of fraud having been committed. Judges naturally look with suspicion upon attempts made by insurance companies to shirk their responsibilities, and, while dealing out impartial justice, the strongest evidence of fraud is invariably required. If this were not so, all faith in the value of life-policies would be lost. Happily, it is in comparatively rare instances that the payment of policies is disputed.—Hurkaru, Aug. 25.

RUMOURS OF A LITTLE WAR.—There is good reason to suppose we shall have a little war on the borders when the cold weather sets in, and already an expedition against the Judoons and the Hindostanis of Sitani is talked of. These latter actually made a raid into the Eusofzaie valley recently, when two troops of the Guides marched immediately to "protect the integrity" of our dominions. A blockade is being enforced against them, and carried out as rigorously as possible, both in Eusofzaie and the Huzarah district.—Lahore Chronicle, Aug. 15.

CAPTAIN DANBUZ, R.A.—The special court of enquiry which assembled at Lucknow last month to examine into certain charges brought against Captain Danbuz, R.A., of having, whilst in command of a party of recruits between Allahabad and Saugor, used, or caused to be used, violence to Commissariat servants, and with unlawful seizure of carriage, &c., and which was adjourned for the production of further evidence, has again been convened at that station. The Oudh Gazette remarks that the charges now to be investigated are "of a different and more serious nature, preferred against another officer of the artillery at present quartered at Lucknow, which, if proved, must involve his ignominious expulsion from the service, but, whether proved or not, must always cause a certain indelible stigma to be attached to him."—Hurkaru, Aug. 26.

THE STAFF CORPS.—About a year ago we announced the fact that there were actually a thousand young officers then in India for whom no career whatever was demonstrable, and whose prospects were of the gloomiest possible hue. Since then how changed is the aspect of affairs for these young officers!—now obviously destined to conduct the large portion of the military, political, and other administration of India, which was formerly carried on by the officers of the Company's armies. The Staff Corps of the three Presidencies are a failure, and as good as gone; they are so spoken of, and admitted to be at army head-quarters; the Royal officers will not go in for an Indian career; month by month the Company's officers, in and out of the Staff Corps, are dropping away; and, as they go, the field opens clear, and without any competition whatever, to the young officers who, but a comparatively short time ago, seemed to have no destiny but future idleness, a kind of hybrid military general duty existence, and despair. If these officers will now only pass the easy tests of qualification in the native languages and acquaintance with military duty which are required, nothing can keep them out of a most prosperous, and according to their energy and capacity, a most successful and distinguished career. It will be a long time before any new system inaugurated in England for obtaining successors to the company's officers can bring forth the required fruit, if, indeed, it should succeed at all; and, in the meantime, the crowd of young officers who flocked out to India at and after the time of the company's decadence, will be gradually getting the stage to themselves, and it will be their own fault if they do not make themselves masters of the situation. Placed by chance in the position they hold, they will form the connecting link between the company's system and officers, and the system of administration that is one day to succeed them; whatever that may be.—Englishman.

THE NEW HIGH COURT.—We are informed that the three old houses adjoining the late Supreme Court purchased by Government have been sold for twenty-one thousand rupees for the purpose of being pulled down. The materials are to be removed before the 1st September next, in order that the new building for the High Court may be commenced on the 1st October, for which the Government has sanctioned an outlay of one million of rupees.—Hurkaru, Aug. 24.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN MENDIES.—The Allahabad paper announces with deep regret the death of Mr. John Mendies, one of the oldest residents of India, the contemporary of Carey, Ward, and Marshman, to the former of whom, it seems, he had been an amanuensis. He was subsequently known as the compiler of a Dictionary, about the commencement of the present century. He was also the author of the Dictionary, in two octavo volumes, in English and Bengalee, and vice versa.

THE CLIVE FUND.—In our last we stated that the widow of an officer of the Bengal army had been admitted to a pension equivalent to that which she would have received under the Clive Fund, previously to the late decision of the House of Lords. Since we published that statement, an officer has been admitted to a pension under exactly similar circumstances; so that there cannot exist any reasonable doubt that the Government recognises all rights in the Clive Fund as being covered by the guarantee of the Amalgamation Act.—Delhi Gazette.

EPIDEMIC IN THE HOOGHLY.—Dr. Elliot's report on the effect of the measures taken to check the epidemic in the Hooghly, Nuddea, and adjacent districts, is quite as satisfactory as could be expected at so early a date as the 20th July. Even then, however, a considerable falling-off in the number of deaths was remarked, with a corresponding diminution in that of new cases. But some time must yet elapse before the real benefit of the sanitary measures instituted by the Government will be fully appreciated.

THE AMERICAN VESSEL "BRITANNIA."—Messrs. Auschletzky and Co., of Akyab, have requested us to notify that "the American vessel Britannia, 1,114 tons, Captain E. H. Hill, which left Calcutta on the 23rd July for London, with a mixed cargo of rice, sugar, linseed, and jute, put in at that port on the evening of the 16th August, in order to stop a leak. It is reported that there are three feet of water in her hold, and that she will have to land the whole of her cargo."—Hurkaru, Aug. 24.

DESTRUCTION OF LOCUSTS.—The number of young locusts destroyed in the Hissar district during the month of July was 254 millions and 271 thousands, more or less, this result being obtained by weighing, estimating 1,700 insects to a chutack. It has been ascertained by experience that damp and rain or immersion in water are fatal to old locusts, while young locusts are not affected by these influences. It also appears that neither disturbance of the eggs nor their separation from the cone impair the vitality of the embryo, and therefore something else is required to destroy them besides ploughing up the ground. We understand that some ravines about the Murree hills are choked up with dead bodies of myriads upon myriads of locusts.—Lahore Chronicle.

MADRAS.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT SIMPSON.

It was our painful duty to record the death at the Presidency on the 25th instant, of Lieutenant Samuel Simpson, of the Commissariat Department. This fine old soldier entered the Madras artillery in 1819, and in the humble capacity of a gunner soon made himself conspicuous for the qualities which afterwards raised him to the rank of a gentleman, and gained for him the respect and regard, we may almost say the affection, of every officer under whom he served. He was a native of the West of Scotland, the nursing mother of those stern old Covenanters, who, with the Bible in one hand and the sword in the other, poured out their blood like water in defence of their right to worship God in the only form their consciences permitted them to consider lawful; and, had Samuel Simpson come into the world a century and a-half earlier, he was the very man to have fought to the last on the Bridge of Bothwell; to have led the Psalm on a hill side in the Wilds of Galloway, with the bloody Dalzell hovering near; or to have met an ignominious death in the grass-market with the triumphant feelings of a martyr strong in faith.

But although no such career was open to the veteran whose loss we have to lament, it was impossible for any man to have done his duty better in the condition of life in which it had pleased God to place him. A more upright and conscientious servant of Government never existed. Whilst overseer at the Remount Depot at Oosoor, he did his work with untiring industry and ceaseless vigilance, and thus acquired an immense stock of horse-lore, which he was ever ready to communicate with an amusing quaintness and originality which rendered a "talk with old Simpson" one of the greatest treats we knew.

His constitution had been broken by hardships in early life, and his friends had for some time remarked that he was rapidly failing, and at last he met death as became a good and brave man. In concluding this imperfect notice, which comes from one who knew him long and well, we cannot do better than quote the fine lines of Dr. Johnson:—

"His virtues walk'd their narrow round,
Nor made a pause, nor left a void;
And sure the eternal Master found
His single talent well employed."

—Madras Times, August 28.

PRINCE AZIM JAH.

The two recent parliamentary debates on Indian affairs exactly illustrate the working of that selfish policy which is but too often manifested towards this country by the British statesmen at home. The motion for an inquiry into the claims of Azim Jah to the Nawabship of the Carnatic was smothered by a "count out," whilst the cotton debate was characterised by an amount of extravagance, perversion of facts, false reasoning, and intense regard to self-interest, to the exclusion of all other interests, almost leading us to the conclusion that the parliamentary people of England are not only unworthy but utterly unfitted to maintain any supervision over or to carry out any interference with the administration of India.

The inquiry into the antiquated claims of Prince Azim Jah to the titular dignity of Nawab of the Carnatic, and to a fabulous amount of pension to enable that hoary spendthrift to support such dignity, by means of nautches, tumashas, and polygamous expenditure,—this inquiry, we say, serves to prove to the Secretary of State for India the extreme imprudence and rash culpability of his interference in behalf of the descendants of "Citizen Tippoo." As a question of abstract justice, which can only be approximated but never realised in this world, where might will over ride right so long as one man is stronger, or wiser, or better than another, the claims of Azim Jah, as the claims of other effete stipendiaries, are well worthy of consideration by a British Parliament, if only to enable them to understand the nature of such claims, and the policy which has been pursued by the Government in their disposal. As a matter of fact, we may say that they are far stronger than those of the Mysore family, inasmuch as they are put forward in behalf of a descendant of a once illustrious ally, whilst the latter were put forward by the descendant of a treacherous and cruel foe; nor would their revival be so utterly pernicious and demoralising as appears to have been the case in the precedent which the Secretary of State himself laid down only three years ago. But still we regard the claims themselves, abstracted from all other considerations, as having been finally settled and disposed of long enough ago; and if any selfishness or injustice has been displayed in the settlement, that, too, must be regarded as something which may be deplored, as we may deplore many an unjust act of the successive Ministers of George III., but which no measure of the administration in the present day can ever retrieve, except by a remedy which would prove worse than the disease, or an atonement which would prove a greater injustice than the original crime. The discussion, however, as already indicated, would have served to enlighten the people of England upon the subject of native stipendiaries, which, on the whole, would have brought little discredit on the Government of India. Some of our contemporaries have professed to be surprised that a debate, which must have terminated advantageously to Government, should have been suffered to expire from want of a little energy on the part of the "whippers-in." But here the most serious error on the part of the home Government rendered a "count out" most desirable. The claims of Prince Azim Jah, however untenable, stand infinitely higher than those of Prince Gholam Mahomed, and an adverse vote to an inquiry into the claims of the one would have involved a damaging censure upon that other inquiry or interference, which was carried out, not only without a parliamentary vote, but in the teeth of the deliberate opinion of those who had the power or the means of forming a judgment upon the case. As it is, Prince Azim Jah had better accept the result as final, and enjoy the pension which he is now drawing in the best way he can; and any way is better than that of wasting it on a number of so called advisers, who only excite hopes which never can be realised. Some day the history of all these petty agitations in behalf of native princes will find their way into the page of history, and perhaps furnish useful and instructive lessons for all time. At present the utter ignorance of the people of England leads them to give a fond ear to such extravagant statements, and utter perversions of facts, as would altogether preclude their enjoyment of the real story; and thus the credulous patriots of some distant market towns have arrived at the conclusion that the people of the Carnatic are mourning for the restoration of their old Nabob. Upon this point we can safely say that there is not a single Hindoo in all the Carnatic, except the creditors of Azim Jah, who cares one brass farthing about his restoration to the titular dignity, and who would not oppose the restoration of the Mussulman raj with all his might and main. The question is simply one of paying off the debts of the would-be Nawab, and when the people of England have paid off the debts of the late Duke of York, they may then consider whether it would be worth while to pay off those of Azim Jah.—Englishman, August 22.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EQUESTRIAN STATUE OF SIR MARK CUBBON.—The equestrian statue of Sir Mark Cubbon is in course of execution by Baron Marochetti. To insure an exact likeness of the late general, Major Martin has visited the studio of the Baron, and Major Taylor expects shortly to hear when the work is likely to be finished. Due notice shall be given when the statue may be expected for the information of all subscribers. The inscription on the pedestal is as follows:—

TO PERPETUATE THE MEMORY OF LIEUTENANT GENERAL

SIR MARK CUBBON, K.C.B.,
Of the Madras Native Infantry,
A wise, just, and good man,
This Statue is erected by Public Subscription.

Endowed by nature with singular
Clearness of intellect, serenity of temper,
And Benevolence of heart,
Regardless of his own interests,
But jealously watchful over those of his charge,
He governed Mysore for Twenty-seven Years
With a wisdom, a moderation, and a success,
Which commanded the Admiration of his Countrymen,
The Love and Reverence of the People,
And the Grateful Respect of the Rajah.

He was born in the Isle of Man, September 8, 1785,
And, dying in Egypt, April 23, 1861,
Was interred in his Father's Parish Church,
After Sixty Years passed in the Service of his Country.
—Bangalore Herald, August 14.

COONOR has commanding views not to be surpassed for either beauty or boldness even in Switzerland. Who has not heard of "Lady Canning's seat," that small hut perched like an eagle's nest on a small projecting rock, poised as it were in the air, with a direct fall of some 2,000 feet into the ghat below? Who, that has once stood on that spot will ever forget the glorious panorama before him? The fine old "Droog," ever majestic, with its proud head raising itself above all surrounding objects! The wonderful scarp precipice of "Lamb's Rock" forming a finer foreground for a picture than it is possible for pen to convey to imagination! but I must stop—to complete a description of this single view would occupy more space in your paper than you would be willing to give.

DR. BHIMJEE JEWANJEE.—We (Madras Times) learn with pleasure that a subscription has been opened among the native community for the purpose of presenting a purse to Dr. Bhimjee Jewanjee, the well-known bonesetter, who has laboured for the last fifteen years in this art, often for small remuneration, and often for none whatever. It is calculated on a rough estimate that during this period he has cured no fewer than a hundred and fifty thousand persons of all classes. Nearly forty thousand rupees have been already subscribed.

SIR JAMES HOPE GRANT, the Commander-in-Chief of Madras, proposes to extend his tour of inspection considerably beyond the limits originally laid down. His Excellency will remain at Bangalore until the beginning of November next, or until the rainy season is over. He will then commence his tour and will visit every military post of importance throughout the presidency. This completed, his Excellency will proceed to Rangoon and the Burman Provinces, returning direct from thence to Madras. It is probable that his Excellency's tour will occupy not less than eight months.

THE MADRAS CLUB is still without a regular secretary, and is becoming every day more and more expensive. It is surprising that the committee do not send home for a man; but suppose the finances would not admit of an engagement embodying a passage out and a return home. I am afraid the establishment is fast losing the reputation it has hitherto enjoyed of being the best club in India.

H. E. THE GOVERNOR.—Beyond the fact that Sir William Denison has been laid up with an attack of fever at Oosoor, and is now on his way to Bellary, on a tour through the Ceded districts, there is but little in the shape of news to chronicle from this place. As regards our Commander-in-Chief, Sir Hope Grant, he remains at Bangalore, recruiting from the bad effects of a severe fall from his horse; but he starts shortly for Moulmein and Rangoon, on a tour of inspection. He is to be away altogether eight months from Madras; so he will not be here in November to take his seat in the Legislative Council at its first sitting some time in that month.

THE EAST INDIANS have been unduly exciting themselves, as is customary with them here every six months. They went a short while ago to hear a lecture delivered by a Wesleyan clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Griffiths, who told them some unpalatable truths, and in the heat of the moment so far forgot himself as to express a decided dislike on his part to East Indians driving in carriages. This seems to have roused their ire, notwithstanding his friendly advice to them to build villas all up the Coromandel coast, start joint-stock companies for the purpose of constructing cheap railways, and come into their offices every morning by a penny train. The rev. gentleman did not remain here to answer for his misdeeds, but, like a sensible man, took ship, and was steaming out of the roads as the smashers, which were to utterly annihilate and crush him, were issuing from the press.

IT SEEMS TO BE AN ENIGMA here what the D. P. W. are doing. Only the other day the Gazette placed the services of the staff employed on the Upper Godavery at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief, and Gazette after Gazette consigns some hapless captain or unfortunate sub. for employment on regimental duty. The department seems to be undergoing a complete re-organisation; but it is a question whether these abrupt changes are judicious or wise. Colonels Birdwood and Ludlow, of the Engineers, are about to retire from the service, and will leave the D. P. W. Secretariat without either a head or a deputy. Speculation is rife as to who will succeed Colonel Birdwood. Colonels Orr and Boileau are both named, but the latter, having just returned from England, stands the best chance.

NATIVE LIBERALITY.

The tide of native liberality would seem to be at its flood. To the munificent donations that have been made within the last few weeks, to our local and other charities, we have now to add the following:—

To the Strangers' Friend Society.	Rs.
Ardaseer Eduljee Chenoy, Esq.	1,000
M. Nusserwanjee Bhowngugree, Esq.	2,500
To the Society of St. Vincent de Paul.
M. Nusserwanjee Bhowngugree, Esq.	500
Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Esq.	700
To the Asiatic Home, London.
Karsundas Madhows, Esq., and cousin	10,000

It is a gratifying feature in all these cases, that not an effort has been made to give them publicity, but we do not feel it right that they should pass unnoticed. A few days ago, also, a subscription of not less than Rs. 80,000 was raised at once, upon the representation to a few native gentlemen of the distressed condition of the Madras weavers. The donors were as follows:—

For the Madras Weavers.	Rs.
Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bart.	25,000
Honourable Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee
Cursetjee Furdoonjee, Esq.	5,000
Honourable Mr. Sunkersett	5,000
Merwanjee Framjee Panday, Esq.	5,000
Cowasjee Jehangeer, Esq.	5,000

Premchund Roychund, Esq.	5,000
Sorabjee Pestonjee Framjee, Esq.	5,000
Byramjee Hormusjee Cama, Esq.	5,000
Kursondass Madhavdass, Esq.	3,000
M. & B. C. Cama and Co.	2,000
Honourable Mr. Premabhaee	5,000
Munguldass Nathooobhoy, Esq.	5,000

The subscription list for this last purpose is in the hands of Messrs. Ritchie, Stenart, and Co., and it is hoped that some of the leading European houses will supplement the list liberally. Madras has shown herself so backward in this matter, that it is desirable Bombay should remind her of the distress she is doing little or nothing to relieve. There is great distress amongst the weavers of Conjevaram and other districts of that presidency, and, in our sympathy for the operatives of Lancashire, it would surely be unbecoming to lose sight of the sufferings of the native weavers of India. All honour to the gentlemen who have so nobly commenced this movement, which we commend very earnestly to the support of our great European firms. The form the relief should take is still under discussion. Madras must contrive to raise an equal sum with Bombay, when the Government will no doubt double the amount, to be applied as the local committees may suggest. We may mention that it has been proposed to bring a large body of these weavers round to Bombay, for employment in our mills.—Times of India.

BOARDING OF THE "HAHNEMANN" BY A CONFEDERATE PRIVATEER.

By the courtesy of Captain Phillips, of the Hahnemann, we are enabled to lay before our readers a detailed account of the Confederate privateer's boarding of that vessel.

It appears that on the 1st July, in lat. 25-25 S., and long. 32-48 W., while in company with the Dutch barque Bulgerstyn and another vessel name unknown, a barque was seen running without studding sails. She passed the two ships, and in doing so exchanged colours with the Dutchman. She then shaped her course for the Hahnemann, which was then heading S.W., on the port tack, with a light breeze from the S.E. A blank gun was fired, and the Hahnemann at once hoisted her ensign, but did not heave to. A shotted gun was then fired, which fell astern; another followed shortly afterwards, which dropped some distance ahead. The cross jack of the Hahnemann was then hauled up and the barque rapidly gained on them. While the former vessel was in the act of hauling up her mainsail the privateer luffed to and delivered two shotted guns—one pitched about twenty or thirty feet short in a line with the foremast; the other passed over the poop between the main and the mizen mast, and close to the captain and mate, who were standing there. Captain Phillips at once backed his mainyard, and awaited the strange vessel's approach. She rounded to about 400 yards to windward, and appeared to be a low, black barque, about 350 tons burthen, and evidently a very fast sailer. She then lowered a boat, containing an officer and four men, armed with revolvers and cutlasses, three of whom with the officer boarded the Hahnemann and demanded her papers. He was told that his mode of procedure was considered rather sharp, inasmuch as the sailing qualities of one vessel were so much superior to the other. The officer replied that had they been sure it was a Yankee they were chasing they would have riddled her rather than she should have escaped. A minute scrutiny was then made of the ship's papers, with which the officer ultimately expressed himself satisfied. Capt. Phillips then inquired the strange vessel's name and commander, and was informed that she was the Confederate cruiser Tuscaloosa, commanded by Captain Low. She had run the blockade of Charleston after the repulse of the iron-clads, and had been out fifty days, but up to that time had taken nothing, although she had boarded many vessels. She was very anxious for news of the war, and was supplied with a paper containing the three days' heavy fighting at Fredericksburg. The officer, Mr. St. Clair, a native of Virginia, then left the ship, and the Hahnemann proceeded on her way. On the 3rd of July, at daylight, the Tuscaloosa was again seen about three miles to windward, and again gave chase to the Hahnemann, but discovering her mistake, and a sail at the same time heaving in sight to leeward, she started in pursuit. At four P.M. the Tuscaloosa had come up with the vessel of which she was in chase. No firing was heard, and those on board the Hahnemann concluded it was the Dutch barque Bulgerstyn.—Times of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEATH OF MEER JAFFER ALLEE KHAN.—SURAT, August 23.—His Highness Meer Jaffer Allee Khan Bahadur, the Nawab of Surat, breathed his last on Friday evening, after an illness of a month, during which time he was a great sufferer. This melancholy event has awakened a feeling of deep sorrow and regret amongst the inhabitants of this city. This nobleman was the chief of the family, after the demise of Meer Hufzooladeen Khan Bahadur, his father-in-law. The late Nawab was much beloved by his own people, and highly respected and esteemed by the European residents of Surat, as well as by the community generally. In Meer Jaffer Allee the people had a generous and enlightened friend, and to those who needed it a sincere and benevolent patron. This prince was the projector of the Spinning and Weaving Company here which bears his name, and had extended his assistance to many other useful purposes. He was not like the greater part of native princes of India, who are in the habit of passing their time in indolence and luxury, but spent the greater portion of life in ministering to the wants of his people. He leaves two sons and two daughters. The remains of his Highness were carried to their last resting-place yesterday morning, the funeral obsequies being performed in a most imposing manner, in which due honour was shown to the exalted position in which the deceased had lived. There was a very large assemblage of people present on the occasion, and among other European gentlemen, Mr. R. H. Pinhey, the agent of H. E. the governor, was conspicuous. The Nawab Russala, as well as the Surat Seebundee Corps, with arms reversed, were present to do homage to the memory of the deceased nobleman.

CATERPILLARS.—Every year, in the month of August, a small caterpillar makes its appearance in immense numbers in Bombay. They come out of the ground, and climb on the walls of houses. After a few days they become stationary, envelope themselves in a funeral shroud and cease to exist. In "Bombay as it was and is," we are told that the managers of the Pinjrapole sent out bands of men last year, furnished with baskets and sticks and attended with carts, for the purpose of transporting these caterpillars to that institution, and thus accumulating an untold amount of righteousness, at an inconsiderable outlay. Whether the enterprise has been carried out this year again or not, we cannot say.—Bombay Guardian.

THE MHOW COURT MARTIAL.—Mhow, Aug. 21. Colonel Payn, Major Champion, A.A.G., with about a dozen officers of 8th Dragoons and 72nd Highlanders, fifty-two non-commissioned officers and privates 6th Dragoons, one Parsee and two Portuguese cooks, were by division order directed to leave the station to-morrow en route for England, as evidence in the case of Colonel Crawley, who also accompanies the party. It was not anticipated here that any more evidence would be required than that already selected; but matters would appear to have taken a turn lately, as yesterday afternoon a peremptory order was received to the effect that every man who had been on sentry over Sergeant-Major Lilley, or brought into contact with him in any way during his imprisonment, were also to be sent to England. I shall not be presumptuous enough to say anything about the merits of this unhappy case either way, but I may, perhaps, be permitted to state, that the extent to which the suppressio veri principle has been carried will some day cause a sensation, even now the public is ignorant of one-half the facts of the case. In a late number of your paper you commented upon the great difficulty all along experienced in obtaining authentic information on the subject. Most true, and in the earlier stages of the case you must have been grossly imposed upon by some one; even your latest remarks on Lilley's case contained a few inaccuracies, and for the reason already given not to be wondered at.—Times of India, Sept. 9.

ASSAULT ON AN OFFICER.—We (Poona Observer) hear a case came before the Assistant-collector the other day against the Patell and Ghow people at Carrigaum, charging them with assault on an officer who, it seems, was riding between Seroor and Poona. So far as we know, the facts are as follows:—A tattoo dawk had been laid to enable him to reach Poona in the morning and return to Seroor in the afternoon. He arrived at Carrigaum about 7 A.M., and as he could not see the two horses he expected to find there, he went to the Gaum to make inquiries. After calling out for a long time to try and awake some one he dismounted from his horse and was in the act of walking along a narrow lane to see if there was anyone there, when a native rushed out of a house he had passed, and calling out "choor, choor," (thief, thief,) began to make an attack on him, for which he received a blow between the eyes. Almost immediately fifty or sixty natives were on the spot, and commenced to thump and maul the officer, who was very soon overpowered and pinioned, and those who had had a taste of his fists crouched round and paid off their scores by pulling his hair, thumping him, and hitting him on the head, and although he called out that he was a Sahib, no attention was paid to him. After some struggling he succeeded in breaking away from his persecutors and ran for a short distance, then turning round he faced his pursuers and called out for the Patel; a native cried out "I am the Patel." By this time the crowd had again surrounded the officer and recommenced their assault on him, the Patel meanwhile looking on in the most unconcerned manner; they, however, gradually left off, and as soon as he could disengage himself he went up to the Patel and told him who he was, and demanded the names of several of the people who had assaulted him, which the Patel refused to give. At last, finding he could get no information, and, in fact, that the natives seemed inclined to set on him again, he mounted his horse and rode off to Poona, and in the evening a Fouzdar was out with him, and he succeeded in recognising four men, who were taken into Poona. In the scuffle his watch was wrenched from his chain and broken on the ground, his head was cut and knocked about, and his clothes very much torn. The Patel was found guilty and sentenced to one month's imprisonment, and, in addition, to pay a fine of fifty rupees, in default of which he is to be imprisoned for two months. The other two prisoners were sentenced to twenty and ten days, and in addition to pay a fine of twenty and ten rupees respectively.

COTTON.—The cotton merchants of Duckland, in consequence of the American war, have amassed princely fortunes; but what is wealth in the hands of those who are illiterate, and do not know how to spend it? Superstitions, follies, and vices have increased with increase of wealth. During the last two months the banians and bhattias of the Vullabacharya sect, the devout and blind followers of the Maharajs, who wallow in the mire of sensuality, have spent some lacs of rupees in what are called saptahs, i.e., seven days in which the Bhagvat (one of the 18 Purans) is read. A certain man who has made some 15 or 20 lacs of rupees goes to a Maharaj, and requests him to invite so many Puranias (108 is the minimum), and promises to pay all the expenses. A certain character recommends X, Y, or Z as fit persons to read the Bhagvat, and preference is given to them, though they do not know a single word of the Sanscrit language, while shastrees are rejected. After the expiry of 7 days turbans, dhoots, coats, &c., are presented to each, and a sum of Rs. 200 or Rs. 300. They are then paraded through the principal streets with the clatter and noise of native music. The man who incurs all this unnecessary expense is taught that this is a meritorious act, and that he will obtain the highest seat in another world, irrespective of his moral worth. If this money had been spent in erecting adhurumshalla for the protection of the poor, or in promoting the cause of education, these men would have done immense good, and generations yet unborn would have hailed them as the benefactors of their country.—Times of India.

THE ALEXANDRA NATIVE GIRLS' ENGLISH INSTITUTION.—An English seminary for the education of native girls was inaugurated on the 1st inst., in a suite of apartments set apart by Mr. Monockjee Cursetjee, second judge of the Court of Small Causes, in his house, until better accommodation should be provided. The circumstances under which this novel project has been accomplished are these. For several years, since his visits to England, Mr. Manockjee cherished the object of establishing an institution of this kind, as superior to most other methods of improving the minds of native girls. He carried with him the sympathy of several ladies and gentlemen in England, with whom he conversed on the subject of such a school on his last visit to England, and who led him to form a reasonable hope of looking to them for support and encouragement when the institution was actually opened. At the performance of the third day's funeral ceremonies consequent on the death of his eldest son, Mr. Manockjee accordingly availed himself of the opportunity to explain his object to the friends who had assembled. A subscription list was at once opened, which Mr. Manockjee headed by a contribution of Rs. 4,000. It was proposed that this sum, with subsequent contributions, should form a fund, and that, when a sufficient sum was raised, a meeting of the subscribers should be called to consider the principles upon which the institution ought to be conducted, the name which it should bear, and the preliminary measures for its inauguration. Until a sufficient sum was collected for the purpose of building, purchasing, or renting suitable premises, Mr. Manockjee placed at the disposal of the supporters a suite of apartments in his own house for the institution. On the 16th ult. a general meeting of the subscribers was held at Villa Byculla, when Mr. Manockjee took occasion to express his thanks to the supporters of the school generally, and Mr. Cursetjee Nusserwanjee Cama in particular, who has afforded the most liberal encouragement in its establishment. Without an English education, Mr. Cursetjee Cama entertains very enlightened notions on all subjects of improvement and reform; and Mr. Manockjee admitted that but for his support and the interest he took therein, the establishment of the school might have been delayed. It was resolved at the meeting, among other things, to open the school on the 1st September with the designation of "The Alexandra Native Girls' English Institution," and to leave the subscription list open to all castes and classes of the community. The following gentlemen were appointed a committee of directors for the institution:—Messrs. Manockjee Cursetjee, Cursetjee Nusserwanjee Cama, Kursondas Mahadewdas, E. D. Sassoon, Cursetjee Rustomjee Cama, and Dossabhoj Ruttonjee Colah. At the first meeting of the directors, held on the 17th ult., Mr. Manockjee was elected the chairman, Mr. Cursetjee Nusserwanjee Cama treasurer, and Mr. Dossabhoj Ruttonjee Colah secretary to the institution. The subscriptions amount to Rs. 58,400.

JOINT STOCK COMPANIES.—We learn that Messrs. Treacher and Co. have resolved on handing over their extensive business, stock, and premises to a joint-stock company, on the limited liability principle. The project has been very favourably received in several influential quarters. Mr. Treacher and Mr. Colclough retain an interest in the new company, and guarantee the management for a term of years. Both gentlemen, we presume, wish to retire from the country, and see no way so eligible for the disposal of their large and flourishing business as that of disposing of it to a company. The shares, we hear, are already eagerly sought for.

WRECK.—From Akyab we learn that the Storm Cloud, 971 tons, Captain Duncan, which vessel left this port in July last, to load a cargo of rice from Akyab, had grounded near the outer entrance of the channel in attempting to proceed to sea on the 6th August last, and being abandoned by the crew drifted inside a reef, where she became a total loss, and the wreck was sold by auction for Rs. 930.—Bombay Saturday Review.

QUICK PASSAGE.—We notice the arrival, on the 20th ult., of the ship Lancastrian, Captain Donaldson, from Liverpool in seventy-eight days, which, if we are not mistaken, is the sharpest passage of the season—at any rate, it is a right quick one.

THE ROYAL BANK.—The preliminary arrangements of this bank are finally settled; Mr. Gordon being the Bombay manager, and Mr. Macculloch, late manager of the Agra and U. S. Bank, proceeding to England by the present mail to organise a staff in London, where he will assume the management.

MR. FORETT.—We (Times of India) regret to learn that Mr. Forrett is seriously ill at Poona, and is likely to be ordered away to Europe by his medical attendant. The services rendered our community by Mr. Forrett admit of no adequate return; and the attacks incessantly made upon him from certain quarters are, we believe, regarded with just indignation by the public.

MAIL BY THE FRENCH STEAMERS.—POSTAL NOTICE.—Her Majesty's Postmaster General having intimated that arrangements for the exchange of mails by means of French mail packets have been made with the French Post-office, mails will, in future, be regularly forwarded by these steamers. The correspondence sent will be liable to the same rates of postage as the correspondence sent by the British packets. The Messageries Impériales, it is stated, will have a fleet of nearly sixty steamers next year, and will then be the largest mail steam packet company in the world. We are informed that a protest has been forwarded to the directors of the French company, by Mr. D. W. Mackenzie and other passengers, in reference to the provisions and general treatment on board the company's steamers. Mr. Mackenzie left Hong Kong by the steamer Alphee on the 23rd May. At Galle, we understand, some of the passengers had their passage-money returned, and came on by the P. and O. Company's steamer Candia. When the reply of the company is received we shall notice the matter again.—Colombo Observer, Aug. 21.

THE SIKHS.—We learned yesterday that the party of Sikhs now in Colombo cannot be conveyed to the opposite coast, as proposed, until they have provided means whereby they may be enabled to continue their journey to their distant homes without becoming literally beggars or thieves. To supply this necessity a subscription has been set on foot, and from the sympathy universally expressed for these innocent victims to a most unfortunate mistake, we have no doubt purse-strings will be freely and generously relaxed. But although private charity may thus suffice for the purpose in view, we cannot too strongly urge upon our Government the necessity of a change in their treatment of the Sikhs at present. However much the Indian Government may be to blame as the sole cause of all the troubles, we fear the local authorities cannot escape being held responsible for the sufferings endured, during their sojourn in this island, by men who are so highly regarded by the British nation, and justly so, for their tried fidelity and bravery on many a battle-field since they became our subjects and allies. But more especially will our Government be placed in a predicament by what has occurred, since it has become evident that these men themselves are blameless as regards our loss and disappointment. Has a telegram been sent to Calcutta, demanding an explanation and instructions? and can the answer have been in effect,—Let the fellows alone, to find their way home the best way they can? or how are our officials quiescent when it is thus proposed to land the Punjaubees on the opposite coast? We think it absurd to suppose that the Indian Government can have acted dishonestly by us; it is plain that they were under a delusion as to the services for which the pioneers were required; or, if not, that subordinate officers have practised a deception on the Sikhs. We would advise our Government forthwith to remedy the evil done, as far as possible, by collecting the men now in the island, and maintaining them comfortably out of the public purse until they be sent direct to Calcutta, and then we may well present a bill to the Indian Government for the useless expense they have put us to.—Colombo Observer, Aug. 21.

THE SIKHS AT KANDY.—Since the capture of the Sikh deserters there has been a deal of litigation connected with the case of these men. On Monday last it was reported that an application would be made to bail out, without loss of time, the Sikhs who were apprehended on Saturday. On that day Mr. Advocate Vanderwall, Mr. Advocate Purcell, and Messrs. Van Houten, Ferdinands, Sidde Lobbe, and others, appeared at the police court on behalf of the accused. On the motion of Mr. C. L. Vanderwall, the men were brought into court. The learned advocate then moved that the hearing of the case be postponed till Friday, and that until that day the defendants be enlarged on bail. Mr. Dickson, in a review of the circumstances under which they were captured, and on a perusal of the affidavits before him, in which it was shown that the men were ready to abscond, thought heavy bail necessary. The subadar or captain was then required to give bail in £200 for appearance on Friday next, and each of the others in £100. The bail being very excessive, none of the gentlemen present were willing to stand security. The facts were explained to the Sikhs by Major O'Brien, who was present, and they went quietly back to gaol. In the evening the other thirty-three men, who were taken up on a charge of resisting the police force in the execution of their duty, were placed in court and required to find bail in £10 each. This they were unable to do, and so were obliged to return to prison.—Colombo Observer, Aug. 20.

LORD CLYDE'S BEQUEST TO GENERAL VINOY.

In a codicil to his will, dated May 23 last, the late Lord Clyde thus expresses himself in reference to the above distinguished French general, now commanding the 1st division of the army of Paris:—"I give and bequeath to Lieut.-general Vinoy, commanding a division in the French army, and my old and beloved comrade in the Crimea, the sum of £500, as a token of my especial esteem and regard." During the Crimean campaign General Vinoy commanded a body of French troops placed near those commanded by Sir Colin Campbell at Balaklava. On several occasions difficult and perilous duties were confided to their united forces. The upshot was a warm and lasting friendship between the two generals, whose example contributed much to the establishment of that thorough good understanding, kindly feeling, and mutual admiration, which marked the intercourse of the Zouaves and Highlanders throughout the Crimean war. If we are not misinformed, a portrait of General Vinoy, painted expressly for Queen Victoria, now hangs in her Majesty's writing closet at Windsor Castle, as a companion picture to that of his comrade in arms, Sir Colin Campbell. At the assault and capture of the Malakoff General Vinoy greatly distinguished himself, and at this moment there is no officer in the French army more likely than Vinoy to obtain a marshal's baton.

MAJOR PINKNEY'S WILL.—The will of Major Francis Wingrave Pinkney, C.B., late a commissioner of Jhanssee, in Central India, a Major in her Majesty's Indian Forces, was proved in London by John Rees Withcombe, Esq., M.D., one of the executors—power being reserved to Lieut. H. P. Lane, of the Madras Artillery, the other executor and trustee nominated in the will. This gallant military officer executed his will a few months before his decease, devising his freehold estates in Glamorganshire to his eldest son, and dividing his personal property amongst his children.

AMALGAMATION ROYAL COMMISSION.

SEVERAL inquiries have been made of us as to the proceedings of the Royal Commission now sitting to report on the Amalgamation of the Indian and Royal Army. We have not been able to obtain any certain or satisfactory information on the subject. These Royal Commissions move slowly, and those interested in their decisions have always rather serious calls upon their patience. The Commission has already spent about half-a-year on its inquiries and meditations.

SIR MORDAUNT WELLS AND THE MISSIONARIES.

THE recent decision of Sir Mordaunt Wells in the High Court of Calcutta in the case of Hemnath Bose, the Hindu-Christian convert, has excited so strong a feeling of dissatisfaction and alarm amongst the Anglo-Indian Missionaries, that on the 4th of August last the Calcutta Missionary Conference, consisting of representatives, lay and clerical, of all Protestant denominations, deemed it necessary to issue a full and formal statement respecting the whole affair, from first to last, with a record of their deliberate opinion upon the subject. From this statement it appears that Hemnath Bose was not educated at any missionary institution, but at the Calcutta Training Academy, which, if we remember rightly, is carried on exclusively by Hindoos. Still his conversion to Christianity was originally due, however indirectly, to the General Assembly's School, an avowed missionary institution, for Hemnath Bose's first ideas and impressions of Christianity were derived from conversations with a friend and countryman, who was a student at that school. His new religious opinions were confirmed by conversations with the Rev. Lal Beharey Day, the native missionary connected with the Free Church Mission. The convert at last expressed a desire to quit his father's house, or, in the words of the Statement, "his heathen home," and take up his residence at the Mission-house. Twice he was persuaded to return to his father, but on the third application, on his explaining that his parents would not allow him to read the Bible at home, the Rev. Mr. Day complied with his urgent request, and received him as a catechumen. Dr. Duff was immediately informed of what had occurred, and "cordially approved of the course which Mr. Day had adopted."

Hemnath Bose was in his sixteenth year, and seems to have possessed considerable intelligence. A Hindu of sixteen years of age is, perhaps, generally as far advanced intellectually as an English youth of twenty or twenty-one. Whether at the age of sixteen a Hindu is in a condition to examine the claims of the various religions of the world, and decide whether they are all false, or whether one of them only is true, and decide which that one is, a task that has clearly been often beyond the reach, from whatever cause, of mature and strong intellects in all countries—for there is scarcely any religion, however absurd and extravagant, which has not been enthusiastically embraced by men of sagacity and learning—is a question that we must leave untouched at present; but it is quite obvious that Hemnath Bose was precisely of an age to be influenced by new views and new arguments, if skilfully presented to his fresh and plastic mind. If he had been sixty years of age instead of sixteen, it would not have been so easy to indoctrinate him with a novel creed. Our missionaries rarely make proselytes amongst the natives of India of middle age or of more advanced years. The minds of Hindoos and Mahomedans, with respect to religion, like those of most men in all lands, soon become fixtures. It must be admitted, therefore, that the interpretation of the law by Sir Mordaunt Wells, who at once on the application of the father of Hemnath Bose restored the son to the parent against the son's wishes, is exceedingly unfavourable to the missionary cause in India, which has already so many other serious obstacles to contend with. We need not be surprised, therefore, that the whole missionary body in India should have met to express their sorrow at the result of this trial, and that they should have appealed, as they have done, to the Christian public of Great Britain to consider attentively, and to agitate perseveringly, the question of whether Sir Mordaunt Wells has rightly interpreted the existing law, or whether such a law, if it has been rightly interpreted, ought not to be repealed or modified. According to the Statement of the Anglo-Indian Missionaries, such a law must practically prevent Hindu youths under sixteen from becoming Christians, and "is at variance with the principles of religious liberty."

We heartily sympathise, as all true Christians must do, with the disappointment and vexation of the Anglo-Indian Missionaries at the decision of the High Court of Calcutta. It cannot be denied that it seems at first thought a sad and almost fatal blow to their high and holy cause, but, perhaps, on maturer and more cool reflection there will appear less reason for despondency or alarm; and this very obstacle or difficulty may serve in some cases to check a zeal beyond discretion that might injure the cause which it seeks too impatiently to advance. There is no mode of making converts that is more odious and more likely to frighten and to irritate the whole Hindu community than any direct personal collision between Hindu parents and Christian missionaries, or any conduct on the part of the latter that even bears the semblance of forcible conversion or the encouragement of children to desert and defy their own parents.

No Hindu can fairly complain of the results of sending his child for instruction to an English educational institution of a professedly missionary character. There is in that case no sort of deception. The system of Christian education is open and honest. The Hindoos love their religion, but they love money too, and even the wealthiest amongst them are eager on most occasions to save a few rupees—even a few pice. Thus Missionary Schools, as many of them really give as good an education as the Government Colleges, sometimes quite gratuitously, and always at a lower charge—are well filled with the children of orthodox Hindoos, who flatter themselves that the effects of any religious poison which may be mixed up with the wholesome secular food supplied to their children in the Christian schoolroom may be counteracted by the application of strong remedies at home. If their avarice and self-flattery or self-confiding fanaticism tempt them to run the risk, they cannot with any show of justice complain that the missionary teachers have availed themselves of unfair advantages. But even in this case, when a Hindu father or mother withdraws the converted child from the Christian school, we think the missionary would act wisely in declining to take any steps that would look like a direct denial of the right of parents to the obedience of their children: He surely ought not to instruct the child that he is freed by the Christian religion from all subordination to his natural guardians. Yet the Missionary Statement now before us asks very triumphantly whether a child ought not to obey God rather than man? which, though it sounds plausibly, must practically amount to the assertion that a converted boy ought in all cases to obey his new priest—be he whom he may—in defiance of the commands or wishes of his own father or mother. But the Christian religion teaches all people to honour their father and mother, and we cannot allow any priest to so interpret this command as to make it apply exclusively to the fathers and mothers of a particular country or creed.

We think the missionaries have good reason to urge that Sir Mordaunt Wells, whether wrong or right in his decision, was not justified in speaking harshly and passionately, as he is said to have done, of the Indian missionaries as a body; for though they may often act indiscreetly, and are sometimes mistaken in their choice of means to advance a consummation most devoutly to be wished, there is not on the face of God's earth any considerable number of human beings more truly moral and religious, more inspired with good intentions, more thoroughly Christian, or more characterised by a truly generous zeal and all sorts of worldly self-denial, than the missionaries in India.

THE DINAPORE SCANDAL.

THERE is no such community in the world as that of British India for public and private scandals. In all times of political peace in India there is sure to be a marvellous amount of social strife. The report of the trial consequent upon the Dinapore scandal case—Burney v. Eyre—occupies no less than nine closely-printed columns of the Bengal Hurkaru, so that the editor is obliged to apologise to his readers for confining his comments on things in general to the very narrowest limits. As the affair has been very incorrectly reported in the home papers, and has excited such lively interest in India, and involves the reputation of so many parties of some position in society, and even the Indian Commander-in-Chief has been compelled to give evidence on the trial, and has not come off with flying colours, we think it as well to put the matter as fully before our readers as our space will permit.

The following somewhat silly and indiscreet epistle from Colonel Burney (brigadier of the station) to the lady of Colonel Willis, of her Majesty's 38th Regiment, was the origin of a great social disturbance and public scandal, and will serve to show, quite as forcibly as the famous Rape of the Lock—

"What dire offence from amorous causes springs,
What mighty contests rise from trivial things."

THE BURNLEY LETTER.

"My dear Mrs. Willis,—How is the promised hair chain progressing? As I think Mr. Eyre could get the man you must not disappoint me. I have invited Colonel Loftus to dine with me on Monday with the Waltons. I do not write and ask you to come, as I know not if Mrs. Bayley can be with you, as I met her going in a palkee towards Bankipore. Have you seen her? Now, I am going to make an offer, that I pay you half house-rent, provided you allow me office room—that is, two rooms where J. P. S. remained. The half rent you can give Mrs. Bayley, and she be always with you. I find Fan's room is not my own—that is, I occupy a corner where the M. B. comes; and I am not private, which I wish to be. I want to be locked up from 10 to 5, when I would return home, see officers on business, and the M. B. at 9, 10, or 11, as most agreeable. My brougham and horse will be in your stables always. I am going to see the rejected horses.—Yours very truly
"GEO. BURNLEY."

"J. P. T. O.

"P.S.—I am glad you accompany Major Cunningham in his dog-cart; as it is so high you must get all the air. I have been looking over my heap of correspondence, and for the life of me I cannot find out if Mrs. Gordon's name is Mary Magdalene, for with me you must know a Christian name is something. Now, keep this last to yourself and acquaint me at leisure. I hope you enjoyed the party. Did you approve of Fan's dress? It appeared chaste to me—that is, it was not very very low in body, inviting attention and impertinent remarks. Oh, I was sorry to find some fair ones who were whirling round at paddle rate of fifteen miles an hour make an unnecessary exposé. Who invented that horrible dress, a crinoline? The China toys must have given the notion. What say you?"

"Coffee and cream will be with you at sunset."

No gentleman would dream of writing a letter of this nature to any lady with whom he was not on very intimate terms—but that Brigadier Burney had some reason to suppose that he might write familiarly and confidentially to Mrs. Willis, without offence, is evidenced from the fact that he was in daily intercourse with her husband and herself—that he was in the habit of supplying her with coffee and cream every morning and evening, at sunrise and sunset—that he presented her with a piano and a Delhi scarf, and many other tokens of friendship, with the knowledge and sanction of her husband; and that she evidently appears to have promised Colonel Burney a chain made of her own hair. Even her answer to the obnoxious and too famous letter, according to Colonel Burney's account, was not such as indicated the slightest anger or change of feeling.

Now comes the defendant, Lieutenant and Adjutant Eyre, of the 38th Regiment, upon the scene. Colonel Willis was absent on duty at Darjeeling. He had left his wife, it seems, in some way in charge of his adjutant and her own relative, Colonel Gordon. As Mrs. Willis was not accustomed to housekeeping and the management of servants, her husband left Rs. 1,000 in the hands of Lieutenant Eyre to assist her in her domestic economy. On obtaining a sight of Colonel Burney's epistle, the younger of the two guardians flared up at once into an outrageous passion, and, according to his own account, went to Brigadier Burney, in all haste, in company with Colonel Gordon, who was himself, of course, not a little irate and sore, mainly, perhaps, from a grievance of his own—the punning allusion to his wife's Christian name, Mary Madeline. Lieutenant Eyre says that he called the Brigadier a coward, and that the Brigadier quietly accepted the insult. The Brigadier flatly denies that Lieutenant Eyre applied such an epithet to him, and Colonel Gordon does not confirm Lieutenant Eyre's statement. The Brigadier, on being told that Mrs. Willis was deeply offended by the letter, emphatically denied all intention of offence, and not only expressed his extreme regret, but very imprudently placed the lady's answer in the hands of her champions, who say they destroyed it; and when the Brigadier subsequently asked for a copy of his own letter that he might know how to frame his defence, as he had forgotten the exact words he had used, and even in some degree the substance of it, his request was positively refused. That the letter was not only extremely silly and indiscreet, but in more serious respects objectionable, cannot be denied by the most partial of the writer's advocates; but then, again, it must be admitted by all reasonable and impartial persons, that he certainly did all a man could do to redeem his error. He earnestly and humbly apologised to the lady and her husband, and even to her friends, and he promised never again to claim acquaintance with the offended lady. If the Brigadier was a little too presumptuous as a letter-writer, he was, perhaps, almost too humble as an apologist; and it might have been thought, if his opponents had had any magnanimity, they would have been more than satisfied with his humiliation and repentance, and have let the matter drop, and not have endeavoured to bring utter ruin and disgrace upon an old soldier of high rank who had served his Queen and country with distinction for forty-three years, and who held a testimonial from a civil authority (Mr. Yule) to the effect that in the time of the great mutiny he had "saved the country from Rajmahal to Patna."

In reply to a letter of explanation and apology (sent in duplicate by separate posts), Colonel Burney received the following curt epistle from Colonel Willis:—

"Colonel Willis, on his arrival at Darjeeling this day, received two letters from Brigadier Burney: Colonel Willis purposes replying to them in person very shortly."

"Darjeeling, March 6."

Brigadier Burney had received privileged leave of absence, but as Colonel Willis's letter looked like a promised demand for personal satisfaction, he remained at his post for about two months in readiness to meet his offended friend. But, to his utter astonishment, he found that Colonel Willis and Lieutenant Eyre had sent statements of the case to the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Hugh Rose.

Now Sir Hugh Rose enters upon the field, and we must say not very creditably, for, before calling upon the Brigadier for any explanation, and coming to an adverse decision on a wholly ex parte statement, unseen by the accused, Sir Hugh directs Brigadier Burney to send in his resignation of his command immediately, and he is told that if he deliberately declares that he is able to free himself from the charges brought against him, he is to be immediately placed under arrest, and his Excellency "will cause a searching inquiry to be made in the matter by a superior officer whom he will name; but in that case it will remain with the Commander-in-Chief to judge whether he shall be brought to a court-martial." Colonel Burney at first chose the alternative of the Court of Inquiry, but his friends represented to him that the Commander-in-Chief had evidently already made up his mind against him, and that he had better resign. It does not appear that the Commander-in-Chief had a word of disapproval to bestow on a young officer like Lieutenant Eyre, going to the house of an old superior officer, and, by his own account, calling him a coward and threatening him with personal violence; and when it became known that Colonel Burney was about to bring his case before the highest Civil Court in the country, the Lieutenant, to his great convenience, was appointed to proceed on duty in the ship Holmsdale to England. But Colonel Burney's legal advisers were too sharp to allow him to escape. After a full and most careful trial of five days' duration, Lieutenant Eyre was convicted of having uttered a libel against an old and distinguished superior officer, and condemned to Rs. 2,000 damages, which, of course, carried costs. This civil decision places the highest military authority in a very awkward position, and is almost as much a condemnation of the Commander-in-Chief as of Lieutenant Eyre. It is pretty clear that with all Sir Hugh Rose's noble qualities in the field, he is but a poor administrator in the cabinet or in cantonment, and the consequence is that he is continually getting himself into some unpleasant difficulty that must tend to abate the moral influence of his high office.

Brigadier Burney, after being bullied and frightened into a resignation of his command, subsequently solicited an investigation of the charges against him, when he was coolly informed that, having availed himself of the alternative offered to him, he was held to have "voluntarily removed his right to further inquiry into his conduct." The Commander-in-Chief, however, condescended to tell him that the option of resigning was based solely on the statement of Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon. From a generous and delicate consideration of the feelings of Mrs. Willis, the letter to her was to be ignored; indeed, the Commander-in-Chief states in his evidence, on oath, that he had not even seen it, and, therefore, the sole official charge against the Brigadier was of a purely military nature—namely, that he had submitted to be called a coward by Lieut. Eyre, and to threats of personal violence from him, which charge, according to his Excellency's belief, was supported by Col. Gordon. This turns out to be a gross mistake on the part of his Excellency, for Col. Gordon (an angry and hostile witness, be it remembered) admitted that, though present on the occasion referred to, he heard no such epithet, and no such threats. When the Commander-in-Chief was under examination himself, he virtually admitted that Colonel Gordon's "support" was merely an unhappy guess or false surmise of his own! We give his own words

"Question 25. In what way did Lieutenant-colonel Gordon support these charges? Did he do so in writing? and, if so, please to produce the same. If not in writing, did he ever, previous to the 7th of June, 1862, make any statement to your Excellency, and, if so, what statement, on the subject?"

"Answer 25. Lieutenant-colonel Gordon did not support the charges or complaint by any direct statement prior to the 7th of June, 1862; but as Lieutenant and Adjutant Eyre in his written statement said that Lieutenant-colonel Gordon had accompanied him and joined him in using insulting and insubordinate language, and imposing the improper conditions I have mentioned above, it was concluded that Lieutenant-colonel Gordon's statement would support him."

Thus an old officer, after forty-three years' honourable service, was to be deprived of his appointment and disgraced and ruined on a mere guess or surmise of his official superior! His Excellency, in an official letter wholly prejudging the case, suffered himself to speak of Colonel Burney's "disgraceful conduct" when he had not seen a line of the letter which was the original cause of scandal, and when he had only Lieutenant Eyre's ex parte statement. Lieutenant Eyre was clearly guilty either of a gross and abominable falsehood, or of a great military offence, that of abusing and threatening his superior officer, and in either view of the case his Excellency was bound to subject him to an inquiry into his conduct; but, instead of that, though he, Sir Hugh Rose, was aware that Colonel Burney was going to call Lieutenant Eyre to account in a civil court, he is quietly directed to take charge of invalids to England; and when it was found that his Excellency's guess or surmise about the evidence of Colonel Gordon was wholly untrue, the least his Excellency could have done would have been to confess his mistake, and remedy, as far as possible, the gross injustice of pronouncing on ex parte evidence that the Brigadier was guilty of disgraceful conduct, and frightening him into a resignation of his command. However, thank God! there are civil courts as well as military ones, and civil judges as well as military commanders. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge in England, and his Excellency Sir Hugh Rose in India, have learnt, to their extreme mortification, that their hasty and illconsidered decisions are not final, and that they themselves can be put upon their defence, or be called upon for explanations and apologies. The Crawley, and Priestley, and Burney cases have certainly not tended to raise the reputation of our highest military authorities as administrators of justice.

LORD CLYDE'S WILL.

The following is a verbatim copy of the last codicil appended to the will of the late Lord Clyde, dated July 11, 1863, executed at General Eyre's house, Chatham, and bearing the signature of "Clyde, F.M." This codicil, strange to say, is written on a sheet of paper stamped with the Athenæum Club mark.

"I Field-marshal Colin Lord Clyde, do declare this to be a codicil to my will. Whereas, in my said will I have bequeathed the sum of £1,000 to my friend Major-general Eyre, for the purpose of purchasing a house, now I do hereby revoke that particular bequest, and in the place thereof and instead of the said sum, I give, bequeath, and assign to the said Major-general Eyre all my interest whatever in my leasehold house, No. 10, Berkeley-square, and in all premises pertaining thereto, with all furniture, pictures, plate, wine, and other effects whatever therein contained or thereto belonging. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this eleventh day of July, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three. CLYDE, F.M. [L.S.] Signed, sealed, published, and declared by the said Lord Clyde to be a codicil to his will, in the presence of us, who, in his presence and in the presence of each other, have set our hands as witnesses. J. Summers, Sergt.-maj. R.E.; William White."

Under the several codicils to his will, Lord Clyde further leaves to Major-general Eyre, "to assist in the advancement of his son, Henry Eyre, an ensign and lieutenant in the Coldstream Guards," the sum of £9,000; for division between General Eyre's two daughters, £4,000; to Mrs. Eyre, wife of General Eyre, £500; and finally appoints General Eyre joint residuary legatee, along with the deceased field-marshal's sister, Alicia Campbell, to whom he leaves only an annuity of £1,000.

The will makes no reference to the large amount of Kirwee and Banda prize-money which may yet be awarded to the deceased's estate, and which will thus fall to the residuary legatees.

The trustees, viz., Major-general Henry Eyre; Lieutenant-colonel Archibald Alison, C.B.; Colonel W. M. S. M'Murdo, C.B.; and Lieutenant-general D. A. Cameron, are enjoined "to reclaim from Anthony Sterling all papers of every description connected with my official duties, whether in his handwriting or in the handwriting of others."

Lord Clyde pays the following high compliment to Sir William Mansfield:—

"I would have asked my dear friend Sir William Mansfield to have undertaken the duty of trustee, but he is one whose services the Government of the State is certain to require where important duties abroad demand the presence of his high abilities. I wish my trustees to present to Sir William Mansfield, to whom I give and bequeath the same, the sword which the City of London presented to me, together with the document conferring on me the freedom of the City of London."

MISCELLANEOUS.

APPOINTMENTS.—(Downing-street, Sept. 28.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint William Thompson and John Capper, Esqrs., to be Members of the Legislative Council of the Island of Ceylon.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The shipments of specie by the Pera, which left yesterday (Sunday), represent £100,905, of which £58,645 is gold and £51,260 silver. The quantities are—India, £1,045; China and the Straits, £57,200; and Alexandria, £57,000.

CHINA INDEMNITY.—The following is a statement of the sums received on account of the China indemnity, under the treaty of Peking, of the 24th day of October, 1860, made up to the latest date to which accounts have been received from China, and of the balance which then remained unpaid:—Payable by the Chinese Government, under the treaty of Peking, dated 24th October, 1860, viz.:—1. Indemnity for the prisoners who were unfairly captured by the Chinese on the 18th September, 1860, 300,000 taels; 2. Indemnity for Canton losses, 2,000,000 taels; indemnity for war expenses, 6,000,000 taels; total, 8,300,000 taels. The sums actually received under the treaty are:—Indemnity for prisoners—received at Peking on 25th October, 1860, 297,577½ taels. The amount stipulated for was 300,000 taels, but on weighing the sycee at Hong Kong there was found to be a deficiency of 2,422½ taels. Amount realised from sale of the above by public tender at Hong Kong, £92,733. 11s. 6d.; deduct expenses, £1,293. 10s.; balance, £91,440. 1s. 6d. On account of the indemnity of 8,000,000 taels for Canton losses and war expenses:—Total amount received in taels, 3,450,457; balance remaining unpaid on 31st December, 1862, 4,549,543 taels. The sum payable at Canton was subject to a deduction on account of the sum advanced by the authorities at that place towards the completion of the foreign factories (Shameen site).

RICHARD LOADER and Co., of 23 and 24, Pavement, Finsbury, London, Cabinet Manufacturers, Upholsterers, Carpet Warehousemen, and General House Furnishers, beg very respectfully to inform the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Public in general, that they have recently made very extensive ALTERATIONS and ADDITIONS to their spacious SHOW ROOMS and MANUFACTURING PREMISES, which has enabled them very materially to increase their hitherto extensive stock, and rendered it practicable for the more prompt execution of the numerous orders consequent on their large and increasing business, and they take this opportunity of most respectfully soliciting a continuance of past favours, and kind recommendation of those to whom the house is favourably known, calling special attention to the very important fact that, regardless of distance, all goods are delivered

CARRIAGE FREE.

R. L. and Co. invite all parties intending to furnish to supply themselves with their "Illustrated Furnishing Guide," containing about two hundred and fifty well-executed designs, which will be forwarded on application postage free.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELEY'S IMPROVEMENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is secured, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer. They will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth so operated, and rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

with ANODYNE CEMENT, which instantly allays the most violent pain, and fills up cavities, however large, and answers where every other kind of stopping has failed. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Prince's Augusta and Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France. 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from 11 till 4. No connection with any person practising in the same profession.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—The Manufacturing

Dentist, being the actual maker throughout, can with certainty insure comfort and satisfaction even where other have failed, and at a much lower charge. Mr. R. BRADSHAW, for several years Manufacturing Dentist to the Profession, 20, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street (Circus).

N.B.—Mr. BRADSHAW begs to say that no charge whatever is made by him unless satisfaction is given.

TEETH.—PATENT 764, AUG., 1855.—As

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITES' MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the TRUSS (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!

C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or, indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Mils, R. Price, Mordan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post.

23, Cannon-street West, St. Paul's, London; and opposite the Angel, Islington.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGES) ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA is a preparation for its Purity, and marked superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alternative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incident to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness invulnerable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir A. Leys Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medica Review.

"Latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridges' Sarsaparilla myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Port, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Water Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridges and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINIDINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilkinson, Bridges & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

IMPORTANT TO OFFICERS.—Have all

your BOTTLED ALES, WINES, &c., PACKED IN SEYMOUR'S REFRIGERANT STRAW ENVELOPES, which entirely prevent Heating, Fermentation, and Breakage; will use repeatedly as Wine Coolers, prevent all rot on board ship or in quarters, and save 20 per cent. in space and freight.

A. MOLLARD'S SULPHUR SOAP and

CREAM, for ordinary Toilet purposes, and BAREGE SULPHUR CREAM for Baths; all free from any disagreeable odour, nicely perfumed; highly p. (scented and strongly recommended by the more eminent ph. sicians (see testimonials) to keep the skin and body in perfect health. Tablets of Soap from Nos. 1 to 5, according to the degree of sulphur; Nos. 3, 4, 5, are used most successfully for curing local or cutaneous eruptions and rheumatism.

Sold at the depot, Rupert-street, Coventry-street, London, W., and at all respectable Chemists. Pamphlets and testimonials sent on application.

COUGHS, ASTHMA, AND INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION

ARE EFFECTUALLY CURED BY

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.

JUDGED BY THE IMMENSE DEMAND.

This UNIVERSAL REMEDY now stands the first in public favour and confidence; this result has been acquired by the test of fifty years' experience. The Lozenges may be found on sale in every British Colony, and throughout India and China they have been highly esteemed wherever introduced. For COUGHS, ASTHMA, and all affections of the Throat and Chest, they are the most agreeable and efficacious remedy.

Prepared and sold in Boxes. Thus, and Bottles of various sizes by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London. Sold retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the World.

N.B.—To prevent spurious imitations, please to observe that the words "KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES" are engraved on the Government Stamp of each Box, without which none are genuine.

BLAIR'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC PILLS.

This preparation is one of the best-fits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the Gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated, by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part. Sold at 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, by all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

There existed for many years a great and unfair prejudice against these remedies; but such has been their success in expelling internal impurities and healing bodies scarred with sores, that their worst opponents have now become their warmest supporters. At the present day no difference of opinion exists with reference to the purifying and healing powers of these world-renowned medicaments, which gradually cure diseases and remove disfigurements, over which medical skill hereofore had exercised little control. Holloway's remedies may be used at any time by either sex. They have for a long time enjoyed a great reputation among the ladies for checking pimples, eruptions, and other defects of the skin, and giving them clear and rosy complexions.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 19th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta papers by this mail are almost wholly filled up with the elaborate reports of the great Burney scandal case. It cannot be said that Sir Mordaunt Wells, though a little eccentric and much too verbose, is deficient in talent, integrity, or courage. His decision in this famous case furnishes an ample and most honourable display of all these good qualities. He has placed the Commander-in-Chief in India in a most awkward and humiliating position, for he has most clearly convicted him of gross partiality and injustice. This case, following so quickly upon the exposure of his Excellency's want of temper and judgment in the Priestly and Crawley affairs, will surely tend to shake the confidence of the Home authorities in his fitness for the high post which he still fills; but which his best friends begin to fear he will sooner or later be called upon to resign, in spite of his influential connections in high places. If the result of the coming Crawley court-martial should confirm the unfavourable opinion of the public as to his Excellency's proceedings as an administrator of military law, the public press of England will no doubt strongly protest against his being entrusted any longer with the serious responsibilities of his high office, though it must be with a generous regret that his countrymen will see one who has done such gallant and efficient service in the field exposed to punishment and mortification for his want of judgment and discretion in what may be called his civil economy, or the administrative department of his duties. Sir Mordaunt Wells has certainly not spared him, and the reader of that judge's summing up cannot help feeling that Sir Hugh Rose is almost as much a defendant in the case as Captain Eyre. The Hurkaru states that Captain Eyre's friends, dissatisfied with the decision of Sir Mordaunt Wells, have given notice of appeal to the Bench of Judges. It is also said that one of Captain Eyre's friends has sent him £150 to enable him to go back to India and take his chance of a court-martial. After the decision against him in the civil court he must, we suppose, either undergo a military trial or resign the service. What will be done with Colonel Burney? The judge considers that his decision must have the effect of restoring that officer to the position he was supposed to have forfeited. Will Sir Hugh Rose be obliged to reinstate him in his old appointment? Must his Excellency acknowledge his own injustice? Must he swallow so bitter a pill?

Sir Mordaunt Wells quits the shores of India very triumphantly. All India acknowledges that on his last decision as a judge he has exhibited a clear intellect and a bold and honest heart; and though he excited for a time the anger and the hatred of the native community by his fearless exposure of and denunciation of their too frequent forgeries and falsehoods, he has lived down his unpopularity, and the natives themselves have had the good sense and candour to bow to his well-meant correction of their faults. On leaving Calcutta, on his way home through the Upper Provinces, Indore, and Bombay, an address was presented to him from three thousand of the most wealthy and influential and enlightened members of the native community. This is equally honourable to both parties.

The Commander-in-Chief was to leave Simla on the 15th of this month for Cashmere. He was to meet Lord Elgin at Sealkote, and then to move down to the Camp of Exercise at Lahore.

The East Indian Railway is to be open to the public from Delhi to Calcutta, with the exception of crossing the Jumna at Allahabad, on the 1st of February next. As a temporary measure, the railway company will either have a pontoon bridge over the Jumna, or a steamer to convey the traffic across the river.

The great Rent Appeal case, which is of at least as much importance as the Burney scandal case, though of less social or personal interest, has been decided at last. It was an appeal against the decision of Mr. Elphinstone Jackson, now himself a Judge of the High Court. Sir Barnes Peacock has decreed that the rent of one rupee per beegah all round, instead of nine and ten annas allowed by Mr. E. Jackson, is not only absolutely fair and equitable to the tenant, but at least three annas below what the Court would have given Mr. Hills had he asked for it. The High Court has done more. It has decided that the twelve years' occupancy tenant has no interest in the land under Act X. His right of occupancy depends on his willingness to pay the market rate, or as much as others would pay.

Her Majesty's 101st Regiment, the 1st Punjab Infantry, and Huzaru Mountain Battery have received orders to march towards Ulm, on the Indus, with the object of watching the Judoon frontier.

No less than four public entertainments have been given in Madras in honour of Mr. H. E. Church, the traffic manager of the Madras Railway, on his leaving India. One of these entertainments was given by the Mahomedans, who, in addition to "an elegant dinner," celebrated his departure with fireworks and a nautch.

The Englishman says that the military examinations on the parade-ground, to be conducted in September at the Presidency, for all officers, from the rank of Lieutenant-colonel downwards, who have not previously passed and who wish to retain their appointments, will be carried out by Brigadier P. Harris, commanding at Barrackpore. These examinations, it is expected, will be strict and trying.

His Excellency Sir William Denison, Governor of Madras, has received a long and complimentary address from the natives of Kurnool.

It is said that orders have been received for the immediate despatch of H.M.'s 68th Foot from Rangoon to New Zealand.

We are glad to hear that Dr. Duff, who was en route to Java, had much improved in health.

Money still continues to be plentiful in all the chief cities of British India.

The Messageries Impériales Company, according to the Friend of India of August 28th, "have reduced their rates of passage for all Dutch officials in Netherlands India 30 per cent., as they have done in the case of Indian military officers. They are wise in their generation."

THE GREAT BURNEY TRIAL.

HIGH COURT OF CALCUTTA, AUGUST 28.

EXTRACTS FROM SIR MORDAUNT WELLS'S

SUMMING UP.

The alleged slander stands on a different footing from the written slander. I intimated at the commencement of the case that I had some doubt whether it was actionable. I have since carefully considered it, and I am now of opinion that it is actionable. My attention was not pointedly called to the words "whereby the plaintiff being a military officer was brought into great contempt, and was believed by the said Colonel J. Gordon and his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the army to whom the said Colonel J. Gordon repeated such conversation, to have submitted to threats of corporal punishment from an officer under the command of the plaintiff without taking any steps to clear his honour." These words were spoken of the plaintiff in his professional character. They were spoken to Colonel Gordon and contain a serious imputation, to the effect that the Brigadier in military command of a division implored mercy when threatened with personal violence by a subaltern under his command.

Any words tending to injure a merchant or tradesman are actionable whether they reflect on the honesty of his dealings or his credit. Imputations which affect a man in his office, profession, or means of livelihood are actionable. It has been held that to say of a bishop that he is a wicked man is a slander and actionable, as it reflects on his profession; and to say anything of a soldier derogatory to his character as a man of honour and courage is to reflect upon and disparage him in his profession. 2. MoC. 159.

There is no disguising the fact, that the question at issue between the parties is a momentous one, and I feel the responsibility of my position sitting here as a single judge. In England the judge in such a case would have had the assistance of a jury, upon whom would rest the responsibility of determining the questions of fact; but here I have to determine the questions of fact as well as of law; and in a case like this, so important in its issues to the parties concerned, I cannot but feel deeply the responsibility of my position. The broad issue is, whether the plaintiff or the defendant has committed perjury—the defendant having sworn to the truth of his statement, and the plaintiff having upon oath denied its truth.

I have given to this case the closest attention. Night and day it has been weighing upon my mind; and my anxiety to arrive at a right conclusion may be conceived when the nature of the issue between the parties is considered.

Mrs. Willis's conduct in accepting the present and replying in a friendly note so completely discredits the defendant in this part of his statement that it must be rejected as untrue; and this especially as the defendant himself never saw the letters complained of, and they are not alluded to by Colonel Willis in his evidence, and are not produced.

Mr. Eyre complains of the request as to the hair-chain; and yet it is remarkable that he is mentioned as the person who was to be asked to assist Mrs. Willis in enabling her to comply with the request. That circumstance alone shows conclusively that the letter was not intended to be confidential. The hair-chain is spoken of as having been already promised, and it is now certain that the plaintiff had previous to that asked Mrs. Willis for a hair-chain and that this was known to her husband, who did not treat it as an improper request, but made light of it. It has been urged on the part of the defendant that that was an improper application, but it was no more than a repetition of the first application which was not treated by Colonel Willis as improper. And I cannot conceive that any one reading this part of the letter in a spirit of fairness and proper feeling will impute to the plaintiff improper conduct, or suppose that he had committed the slightest breach of etiquette.

Dr. Wall, the plaintiff's son-in-law, says:—"In the letter there is an offer to pay half of the house-rent for the use of two rooms in Mrs. Willis's house, and there is an allusion to my wife. The explanation of this is, he at one time used our breakfast-room as his office, and saw the brigade-major there. He did not like that room as it was very noisy, and removed into our drawing-room and sat at the small table in the corner of the room. He was disturbed there by my wife playing the piano and my playing the guitar. He therefore went into his own house, so that the brigade-major had to go out there about two and a-half miles whenever he wanted to see the brigadier. There was no conversation with us about this. I could not give him any other accommodation. It was very inconvenient to us both. I don't know how long it was before the writing of this letter to Mrs. Willis that he had left our house. It might have been a month or a fortnight. I took no particular notice of it. Upon reading this paragraph in the letter it did not create any surprise in my mind." The evidence of this witness is stamped with truth and sincerity, and was given in such a way as to make a favourable impression on my mind. It throws considerable light upon the subject. It shows that the plaintiff was living at an inconvenient distance from the station, and was anxious to have rooms where it would be more convenient for his officers to meet him on business. His son-in-law and daughter accommodated him for a time in their house at great inconvenience to themselves, but the accommodation was not suitable, and was given up. Shortly after the plaintiff found that rooms in Mrs. Willis's house, adapted for his purpose, had just become vacant; he also became aware about the same time that Mrs. Bayley was about to leave, and thought that it would benefit Mrs. Willis as well as himself to make the offer which he then made. The plaintiff could not have intended that the offer should be accepted without the consent of Colonel Willis, and if it had been accepted without reference to him, he must soon after have become aware of it. The plaintiff could not have expected to occupy the rooms without the knowledge of Colonel Willis; and if he considered the offer an improper one, and such as would give offence to Colonel Willis, would he have made it? And if his motives were impure, would he have suggested, in connection with the offer, that Mrs. Bayley's services should be continued, so that she might be constantly with Mrs. Willis?

Considering the plaintiff's age and station; his previous intimacy with Colonel and Mrs. Willis; the general kindness of his character, as appears from the defendant's evidence; that he was in want of office rooms; that Captain Smith had just vacated the rooms which he had occupied in Mrs. Willis's house; that Mrs. Bayley was about to leave; and the nature of Mrs. Willis's reply,—I cannot but come to the conclusion that the plaintiff, as far as Mrs. Willis was concerned, was not actuated by improper motives but by a generous and friendly feeling. If I thought otherwise, I could scarcely trust myself in considering subsequent parts of the case, and should be inclined to infer everything against the plaintiff.

I do not wish unnecessarily to cause Colonel Burney any pain and annoyance, but must observe that his position at Dinapore was not a dignified one. I think that an officer in command of troops should scrupulously avoid mixing himself up with the discreditable gossip and scandal that occasionally disfigure European society in India.

The defendant states that in consequence of the note he went to Mrs. Willis, and the state of distress in which he found her is thus described by him in his statement:—"On the evening of the 16th of February, at about eight o'clock, I received a note from Mrs. Willis, begging I would go over to her house immediately, and on my arrival witnessed a scene of distress I trust I may never see again." And in his evidence he says,

"Mrs. Willis was in a state of agitation. She was sitting in her drawing room crying. . . . When I first went to Mrs. Willis she was sitting on an ottoman with the baby in her arms, crying. She had the letter in her hand, and gave it to me as soon as I went in. She said, "Mr. Eyre, what am I to do? How am I to be subjected to such treatment when my husband is absent?" Can it be imagined that a scene so agonising could have taken place so soon after the coffee and cream had been accepted and a friendly note written to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff's letter, to which the note was a reply, could have been the occasion of it? Mrs. Willis herself ought to have been here to have described the scene, and to have stated how, though overwhelmed by such agonising feelings, she yet never thought of summoning to her help her relatives and near neighbours, the Gordons, or if she at any time thought of doing so, how it was that she was able under such trying circumstances to abnegate self so completely as not to wish to put them to the trifling inconvenience which would be occasioned by disturbing them at dinner.

In his statement, which forms the subject of the libel, the defendant says:—"I here added your conduct is that of a coward," and he has sworn to having said so. Colonel Gordon's statement is silent about any such expression having been used; and in his evidence he says, "I did not hear Lieutenant Eyre say, 'your conduct is that of a coward.' If I had heard such an expression it would have aroused my attention and surprised me." And is it to be supposed that an officer of the plaintiff's standing and reputation, and one who has rendered such important services to his country, could have heard the word coward addressed to him calmly and in silence? He has solemnly and indignantly denied that any such word was used to him. He says:—"It is not true that he then called me a coward—devil-a-bit. It is wholly false. I was in a false position, which caused me to allow Colonel Gordon to show such temper, but if Lieutenant Eyre had used such language I should have ordered the guard, and have sent him off at once under arrest." . . . These words of Mr. Eyre are words which I can emphatically consider the most offensive part, and that of saying "your conduct is that of a coward" is what no officer should submit to. The use of the word "coward" by a subaltern to a superior officer is incompatible with a respectful manner towards that officer. I cannot believe that a subaltern could have used such language to an officer in the position of the plaintiff, except in a frenzy of passion, when he had lost all control over himself, and could not have preserved a respectful demeanour. And is there anything in the letter itself to have led a subaltern to forget himself so far as to call his commanding officer a coward, and thereby expose himself to certain and fearful risk? Is there a man acquainted with the ordinary ways of life who can come to the conclusion that any such word could have been used? But not only is it stated by Colonel Gordon that he heard no such word used, and it is denied by the plaintiff that any such word was used, but it is a fact of the utmost significance that neither Mrs. Willis nor Colonel Gordon nor Colonel Willis were informed that any such word was used till after the second interview.

When the defendant told Colonel Gordon that he had threatened to chastise the plaintiff, Colonel Gordon says, "This startled me, that Lieutenant Eyre used these words to his commanding officer." Would he have been so startled if he had been aware that the defendant had already used words as insulting to his commanding officer? It appears that the defendant wrote to Colonel Willis on the night of the first interview (February 15), immediately after his return from the plaintiff's house. That letter is another of the documents not produced, but it could not have made mention of the serious imputation against the plaintiff, as Colonel Willis had not heard of it till long after that had been received by him. Why was it kept a secret? Not because he was afraid of consequences, as he was restrained by no such consideration in regard to the imputation relating to the second interview. Was it because it had no foundation in truth, and had not then been thought of? I am satisfied upon the evidence that the defendant never mentioned to any one till after the second interview that he had at the first interview said to the plaintiff, "Your conduct is that of a coward;" and seeing the plaintiff's denial is supported by the strongest probabilities, I am clearly of opinion that no such words were ever addressed to him. The word "coward" is so grating to the ear, and particularly to the ear of a military man, that it is not likely not to have attracted the attention of Colonel Gordon, whose attention was aroused by a less offensive word, viz., the word "dared," or to have been heard by the plaintiff; and if heard by him it is impossible to believe that he would not—whatever the occasion, and under whatever circumstances such language may have been addressed to him—have instantly exercised the power he possessed of putting the defendant in arrest.

On the 16th of February the plaintiff wrote to Colonel Gordon:—

"Dear Colonel Gordon,—In positive ignorance of what I have written to cause such dire offence to Mrs. Willis, may I crave the favour of your obtaining for me a copy of my writing. The only questionable word that I remember was expose, to which I ought to have added 'of crinoline.' I certainly passed my strictures on the abominable crinoline dress which so distressed me at the ball, room. I could not, nor did I, intend in my writing to say anything offensive to Mrs. Willis, who has often been assured by me I had her good at heart. I have been sadly distressed, and will make any sacrifice to obtain forgiveness for my indiscretion, as I never intended any offence, but as my writing has offended Mrs. Willis, I tender my most humble apology, having great respect for her husband, of whom I have already expressed my opinion. Pray obtain for me a copy of the writing which has given such umbrage, and you will do me a kindness.—Yours faithfully,
GEO. BURNLEY.

"Sunday, February 16, 1862."

This letter shows that the plaintiff had been informed that Mrs. Willis had taken deep offence. He does not profess ignorance of what he had written, but only of what he had written to give offence. He repeats again that he never intended to give offence, but he says—"as my writing has offended" (he had been informed it had) "I tender my most humble apology." If he had been told merely that the letter was an offensive letter he might have disputed the fact, but when that it had actually given offence, and great offence, he commenced to doubt his own recollection of what he had written, and earnestly requested to be furnished with the means of judging for himself, and he asks not for the original letter, but only for a copy. But will it be believed that his request is not complied with? Colonel Gordon writes:—

"Sir,—A copy of the letter you refer to has been sent to Colonel Willis, and pending hearing from him I must decline, according to your request, to endeavour to obtain a copy of the writing for you, which, however, cannot be, I imagine, of much matter, as you can scarcely have forgotten so entirely the contents of a letter written so lately as yesterday afternoon. Adding the word costume as mentioned in your note now under reply would have been quite inapplicable in the original. I must also inform you that the note of yesterday is not the only one of those you have lately sent which is considered offensive.—I am, &c., F. GORDON."

To say nothing of the style and tone of the letter, to which the plaintiff ought not to have submitted, Colonel Gordon declines, pending a reference to Colonel Willis, "to obtain a copy of the writing," words which imply that the writing was not in his possession, although it was in his possession at that very time. The only reason that Colonel Gordon was able to give for not having furnished the plaintiff with a copy was that he did not believe the plaintiff did not remember what he had written. If he had no doubt, why should he have applied for a copy? But what difference would it have made to Colonel Gordon whether the plaintiff did or did not remember what he had written? If he did fully remember what he had written, a copy of the letter, if furnished to him, would have cleared up any doubt produced on his mind in consequence of what he had been told. If he did not fully remember what he had written, then it was of the utmost importance to him that he should not be kept in the dark.

How different the conduct of the plaintiff! When asked to return Mrs. Willis's letter he did not say, "Why, Mrs. Willis having just written it must know its contents;" but acting like a man of honour he at once gave it up. That letter would have been of the utmost importance in this case, but it was destroyed because it is said it was expected that it would be no more required. Why was not the plaintiff's letter destroyed for the same reason?

The plaintiff's letters to Colonel Gordon and Colonel Willis contain the outpourings of his mind to them. On the 4th of March he wrote to Mrs. Willis:—

"Pardon, pardon me Mrs. Willis, and pray intercede with your husband, and obtain for me his forgiveness. I do assure you in verity and in truth that I am ignorant of what I have written, but the knowledge of having given you dire offence has been to me a severe affliction."

Colonel Willis had not yet declared his mind, and the plaintiff thought that if Mrs. Willis would only believe that he had intended no offence, and use her influence with her husband, any unpleasantness might yet be avoided. But when Colonel Willis had once declared his mind, and the plaintiff found that they could be friends no longer, he wrote no more letters, and assumed the attitude of defence which the occasion required. That time, however had not yet arrived, and he presents himself before Mrs. Willis as suppliant and sues for pardon.

The plaintiff received the following letter from Colonel Willis:—

"Colonel Willis, on his arrival at Darjeeling this day, received two letters from Brigadier Burney. Colonel Willis purposes replying to them in person very shortly. Darjeeling, March 6th."

The plaintiff did not shrink from meeting the husband of the lady whom he was said to have offended, but he is supposed to have lost all heart in the presence of the defendant, the friend of the husband, and a subaltern! It is remarkable that Colonel Willis did not carry out the intention expressed in his letter. It is clear that when he wrote to the plaintiff he intended nothing more than to seek personal satisfaction, and this, I think, shows that at that time no imputation had been made reflecting on the plaintiff as a soldier. But when he found soon after that such an imputation had been made, he abandoned his original intention, and made a complaint against the plaintiff, believing that he had now some tangible ground to go upon. Was it honourable and fair on the part of Colonel Willis to leave the plaintiff under the impression produced by his letter, and, without the slightest intimation to him, to go up to the authorities? There is a meanness about this discreditable to Colonel Willis. He does not come to Dinapore, nor does he say he was intending to complain against the plaintiff; but on the 26th of April he writes to Dr. Wall, saying, "Your respectable father-in-law is to lose his brigade." Why? No charge had been made against him—none had been threatened; and how could he predicate in the language of certainty that the plaintiff was about to be disgraced with the loss of his brigade? Is there nothing in this indicative of combination?

The defendant states in his statement of the 25th of May:—"Some fourteen days or so after this, I received another note from Mrs. Willis, requesting me to go over at once to her house, which I immediately did, and Mrs. Willis informed me that Brigadier Burney had spread a false report relating to the reasons for her cutting him. She told me the nature of the report. I was so incensed at such dastardly conduct, such perversion of truth, and the breaking of a promise faithfully made to Colonel Gordon and myself, that I got on my horse and rode over to Brigadier Burney's house, and demanded an interview.

After some delay I was informed that he was in bed, but on my persisting in seeing him, I was shown into his room. I taxed him with his base and cowardly conduct, and told him, if he was innocent of all evil thought and intentions, his conduct would be very different. He replied, "I am on the bed of repentance, and have suffered much in mind; what am I to suffer now in body from you?" He begged I would remember he was an old man, and therefore not beat him. I told him it was not my intention to do so, but to leave him to Colonel Willis's tender mercies; I had simply come down to warn him how he again broke his promise by mentioning or even breathing Mrs. Willis' name to any one, for that if he did, his age would not protect him, and that I should consider our positions in the light of he as Mr. Burney and myself as Mr. Eyre; that I would punish him in the most public place I could find, for I consider it my duty, as a friend of Colonel Willis, for whom I had such a great regard, to protect the name of Mrs. Willis in his absence." And in his evidence he states that on the 8th of March Mrs. Willis wrote to him begging him to come over. "She said she had been told by Mrs. Chalmers that a report was in the station. She asked me to go to Colonel Burney. I went, and then told her what had passed between me and Colonel Burney. I told her that I had threatened to punish Col. Burney if any further reports were circulated." The note from Mrs. Willis which the defendant says he received is not produced, and Mrs. Willis has not been called either to say that she wrote such a note or sent the defendant to the plaintiff; but what must have been her feelings as an English lady when she heard that an aged officer, and one who had treated her with the kindness of a parent, and who had only two days before told her how deeply distressed he was at having unintentionally offended her, had been threatened and insulted by the defendant acting on her behalf? If the defendant really told her what he says he did, it is to be hoped that she expressed her disapprobation, and rebuked him for his violent and improper conduct. But why was the defendant sent for? At this time Colonel Gordon was living in the house, and Mrs. Willis was under his immediate protection—there was no pretence for calling for the defendant, and still less for sending him to the plaintiff without the knowledge of Colonel Gordon. That Colonel Gordon was unaware that he was going to the plaintiff, and was surprised that he had not been communicated with is abundantly clear from his having said to the defendant, "You did not tell me you were going down." It is not only strange that Mrs. Willis should on this occasion have confided her wishes to the defendant alone, but it is also strange that the defendant should have made it a point to go alone to the plaintiff. Was it because it was a part of his plan that there should be no witness at the interview, so that he might allege what he pleased without the fear of contradiction by a second person?

According to the defendant's statements, which I have just read, the plaintiff submitted to be charged with base and cowardly conduct, and in answer to the charge brought against him, he said, "I am on the bed of repentance," thereby implying that he admitted the charge, and was in a state of contrition and sorrow for what he had done; but in his evidence before the Court the defendant has admitted that the plaintiff said to him, "I have not said a word about it to any one," which is a direct and positive denial of the charge, and is quite inconsistent with the next words he is said to have uttered, viz., "I am on the bed of repentance. I have suffered much in mind; what am I to suffer now in body from you?" He begged I would remember he was an old man, and therefore not beat him. It is impossible to read these words without a feeling of indignation—and when repeated by the defendant to Colonel Gordon, one would expect that he would instantly have put the defendant in arrest, and would have addressed a proper communication to Colonel Burney. To tax his commanding officer, a veteran full of years and honours, with "base and cowardly conduct," and threaten to punish him in the most public manner! And why? Because Mrs. Willis had heard from some one who had heard from some one else that a report of what had occurred at the ball had been traced to the plaintiff. There is not a jury either here or in England that would not, on the bare reading of such a statement, reject it as false. If the plaintiff had been guilty of a crime of the greatest magnitude which had placed him at the mercy of the defendant, he could not have been more abject than he is represented to have been on being merely accused of having spread a report which he says he never did spread and never could have spread, as such a report would have been false. The defendant says, "Colonel Burney said—'Don't beat or strike me' before I made a symptom of striking." Then why should the plaintiff, who had not admitted the charge, and could not truthfully have admitted it, who was conscious of having done no wrong, and who had no reason to suppose that an assault was about to be committed, have suddenly reminded the defendant that he was an old man, and begged that he would not beat him? And why especially should he have done so when he had a guard at hand and was well protected? The plaintiff's account of the interview is very different from that given of it by the defendant. He says: "On the 8th March he came again about sunset. The servant announced him. I told him to let him in at once. He came to me in my bed-room. He said, 'I have come to complain that Mrs. Willis is much hurt at hearing that you had found fault with her dress at the ball. She denies this.' Eyre said that the report had been traced to me. I felt very annoyed and indignant at a subaltern coming to take me to task when Mrs. Colonel Gordon was her protectress. Then I said: 'Sir, if you had one grain of sense to rub against another you would never charge me with having made this statement.' He muttered, 'I have sense,' and told me it was known in the bazaar. I then said 'Look to your own and Mrs. Willis' servants, who speak English; mine don't.' They were both Madrassees; mine were natives of the place. He then asked, very civil all the time, 'Will you kindly state to whom you mentioned the circumstance?' I then said, 'To my son-in-law, Dr. Wall, and Dr. Wright.' I then referred to the first nocturnal visit, and to Mrs. Willis being annoyed with me. He then went away. He had said, 'I don't mind Wall, but that Wright is not to be trusted.' I never used the expression, 'I am on the bed of repentance,' &c. I never said, 'Remember I am an old man; don't beat me.' It is wholly a false statement. He did not say it was not his intention to beat me, but to leave me to the tender mercies of Colonel Willis. It is wholly and positively false. He never told me that he had only come down to warn me against breaking my promise; and that if I ever mentioned Mrs. Willis' name again to any one my age would not protect me, but that he should consider himself as Mr. Eyre and Colonel Burney as Mr. Burney, and that he would punish me in the most public place he could find, for he considered it his duty in Colonel Willis's absence to protect the name of Mrs. Willis. He most certainly did not comport himself towards me with any discourtesy or incivility; on the contrary, I was very angry with him. I never spread such a report; it would have been false if I had. I have nothing to be ashamed of with respect to Mrs. Willis. I did not know how I had offended her. During that interview orderlies were in the verandah of the house near the guard. If Eyre had spoken the words he avers, I should have sent him to the guard, and written to the Brigade Major to place him under his arrest."

General Campbell requested Colonel Willis "to call upon the defendant for a full statement of what transpired at an interview between Brigadier Burney and himself."

The result of that request was the defendant's statement which was received by General Campbell in May. It disclosed, according to General Campbell, that the defendant "had been guilty of a gross breach of military discipline." Why, then, was not the defendant put under arrest? To this question the only answer given by General Campbell is "that he did not deem it expedient." Is it to go forth that it is possible for an officer to be guilty of the grossest breach of military discipline with impunity? No greater offence could be committed by a junior officer than was committed by the defendant, and yet it was not deemed expedient to arrest him. Colonel Gordon says, "I cannot see why he was not tried by court-martial," and there can be but one opinion on the subject. General Campbell did not furnish the plaintiff with a copy of the statement or give him any intimation that such a statement had been received, but the statement was forwarded to the Commander-in-Chief without note or explanation from the plaintiff. Here again no action is taken against the defendant, who had dared to avow that he had addressed the most insulting language to a superior officer in high command. His Excellency says:—"I did not consider it necessary to have a court assembled to try Lieutenant and Adjutant Eyre. The general officer commanding the division preferred no charge or complaint against him, and almost the whole responsibility rested with Brigadier Burney for having called upon himself and provoked the improper language, which, moreover, the brigadier has since denied ever having received. I conceived that the brigadier had been guilty of disgraceful conduct which called forth the indignation of Lieutenant and Adjutant Eyre. If a superior officer is playing (for example) with an inferior officer at cards, and the superior cheats, and the inferior tells him that he has done so, I conceive that however great the scandal, the responsibility rests upon the superior officer, who has disgraced himself as an officer and a gentleman by cheating at cards." He says General Campbell preferred no charge or complaint against the defendant: if General Campbell did not do his duty, why was he not brought to account? His Excellency also says, "the whole responsibility rested with Brigadier Burney for having called upon himself and provoked the improper language." This is a pure assumption against the plaintiff without a tittle of proof; but whether the plaintiff was at fault or not, surely it is necessary that discipline should be maintained, irrespective of the conduct of parties. His Excellency also says:—"I conceived that the brigadier had been guilty of disgraceful conduct, which called forth the indignation of Lieutenant and Adjutant Eyre;" that is, that on an ex parte statement he had actually thought the brigadier had been guilty of disgraceful conduct, and acted in that belief in reference to both the parties; and he excuses himself for having taken no steps against the defendant by saying that the plaintiff had since denied the charge preferred against him by the defendant. Does his Excellency mean that he took no steps against the defendant because the charge preferred by him had been denied by the plaintiff? That would be an additional reason for taking steps against him; for while on the one hand he appeared as his own accuser as regards his conduct towards the plaintiff, on the other hand he stood accused by the plaintiff of having made a false and malicious statement. The illustration drawn from the game of cards does not apply. There a superior officer is supposed to be playing with an inferior officer; it is his own act, and if he cheats he gives his junior officer the right to tell him that he has done so. The junior officer would not, however, be entitled to reflect upon the honesty of his superior officer on insufficient grounds. Here the plaintiff had never placed himself in relation to the defendant in any such position as that which must necessarily exist between two officers playing at cards; and it is assumed that the defendant interfered on sufficient grounds. The defendant's misconduct is overlooked both by General Campbell and the Commander-in-Chief. No action is taken against him, nor even disapprobation expressed. The Commander-in-Chief says, "I was under the impression, and still am so, that I directed an expression of my disapprobation to be conveyed to Lieutenant and Adjutant Eyre of the violent and improper language which he had addressed to Brigadier Burney." But the defendant himself says, "I have not been reprimanded, and have been promoted."

The plaintiff is all this time in entire ignorance of what is going forward, and it may be imagined with what feelings he received the following communication through General Campbell:—

"Sir,—With reference to your letter of the 2nd instant, and its enclosures, which the Commander-in-Chief has shown to me, confidentially, I am directed to state that the proof of Brigadier G. Burney's disgraceful conduct to Mrs. Willis, and of his having submitted to threats of corporal punishment from an officer under his command, without taking any steps to clear his honour, are so clear, that his Excellency empowers you to call upon that officer to send in his resignation of his command immediately.

"2. But should Brigadier Burney declare deliberately that he is able to free himself of the charges brought against him by Lieut.-colonel T. A. Willis, C.B., and supported by Lieut.-colonel Gordon, and Lieutenant and Adjutant P. H. Eyre, 38th Regiment, then you will inform him that the Commander-in-Chief will cause a searching inquiry to be made in the matter by a superior officer, whom he will name; but in this case, it will remain with the Commander-in-Chief whether he shall not be brought to a court-martial.

This informs him not only that a complaint had been made against him, but that it had been investigated behind his back, and that the Commander-in-Chief, without having heard him, had formed so strong an opinion against him as to actually empower General Campbell to call upon him to resign his command immediately. The letter says, "the proof of Brigadier Burney's disgraceful conduct to Mrs. Willis is so clear." Proof is the effect of evidence; but what evidence had the Commander-in-Chief before him to justify the strong and severe language which he used in reference to the conduct of the plaintiff? The plaintiff supposed, as any one would suppose, that he had formed his opinion upon the two letters, the one from himself to Mrs. Willis, and the other, Mrs. Willis's reply; but it is remarkable that these letters were not before the Commander-in-Chief, for his Excellency says with reference to the plaintiff's letter, "I have never seen that letter before." He also says, "I never saw the answer to that letter written by Mrs. Willis." What, then, was the proof? Was it the defendant's statement—a statement not made upon oath, and the existence of which had not been communicated to the plaintiff, and was not known to him? It is also intimated to him that the proof of his having submitted to threats of corporal punishment from an officer under his command is as clear as the proof of his disgraceful conduct to Mrs. Willis. What proof? Without being informed who his accuser is, he is informed not only that proof has been given against him, but that it has been considered clear and satisfactory. He is left to grope in the dark, and find out who is his secret accuser, and what is the nature of the proof adduced against him, and to unravel what, if innocent, must have appeared to him a deep mystery. The Commander-in-Chief, as well as General Campbell, assumed that he was guilty, and would know, without being told, who his accuser was, and the precise nature of the accusation. But is it right to act upon any other maxim than that a man is innocent till proved to be guilty? But whatever may have been his Excellency's views upon the subject, why should he have deviated from the usual course of furnishing the plaintiff with a copy of the statement of his accuser and calling upon him for an answer before expressing any opinion. The plaintiff has much reason to complain that he has been unfairly dealt with by all parties. It is true that a "searching inquiry" is offered in the second paragraph of the letter, but even that is accompanied by a threatening intimation of bringing the plaintiff to a court martial.

Dr. Wain has described the state of his mind when he advised the plaintiff to resign. What was the state of the plaintiff's mind when that advice was given? It is one he had just before refused to resign, but it may well be imagined that his mind was in a state to be easily influenced. As the Commander-in-Chief had formed a strong opinion with reference to his letter to Mrs. Willis, and had applied to his conduct the word "disgraceful," he might well think that there might, after all, be something in the letter he did not remember. He had reason to think there was a disposition on the part of the authorities to keep him in the dark, and to allow his accuser an unfair advantage over him. He remembered that no action had been taken against the defendant, although, upon his own showing, his conduct had been subversive of discipline, and such as had probably never before been overlooked; that when put by himself under arrest on a grave charge he had been immediately released without investigation of the charge,—that both before and at the inquiry he had been asked to resign on the statement of a subaltern, which had not, as to the charges under investigation, been corroborated by Colonel Gordon, and the truth of which had been solemnly denied by him; and last, though not least, that having, under the peculiar circumstances of his position, allowed Colonel Gordon and the defendant to treat him at the first interview in a manner unbecoming his position as the brigadier in command, he was in the power of the Commander-in-Chief; and with all this crowding into his mind, is it to be wondered at that he was in a state of vacillation, and that it required but little to turn the scale? I have no doubt he felt that the Commander-in-Chief wished him to resign, and that it would be better not to oppose him; and this is in substance expressed by him in a letter to his Excellency, dated 15th November, 1862, wherein he states, "An early resignation of my command became imperative, in obedience to the Commander-in-Chief's desire."

The resignation was forwarded to the Commander-in-Chief, who says:—"By resigning, Brigadier Burney, in my opinion, acknowledged the sufficiency of the evidence against him and his guilt." I cannot accept this as a correct conclusion. The defendant's statement as to the charges had not been confirmed by his own witness, Colonel Gordon; and had been denied by the plaintiff; where, then, was the sufficiency of the evidence against the plaintiff? And the plaintiff had not only denied the charge both before and at the inquiry, but he repeated the denial in his letter of resignation in these words:—"I totally and most solemnly deny ever having received a threat from Lieutenant Eyre or from anybody else." Was it right under the circumstances to have inferred guilt? If it was believed that the plaintiff was really guilty of the serious charges preferred against him, it must also have been believed that he was guilty of falsehood in having denied those charges; and, if so, why was he permitted to resign?—and why was he, in the act of resigning, honoured with a salute?

The plaintiff had committed his case into the hands of Government, and I think it would have been better if he had relied on the wisdom and justice of the viceroy and his council; but as the defendant was about to leave the country he felt himself driven to institute proceedings in this Court which he would otherwise not have done.

It cannot be disguised that the resignation of the plaintiff was a lamentable act of weakness and indecision on his part, which he will no doubt regret to the end of life. It was his duty in the face of such terrible charges as those contained in the defendant's statement to have indignantly declined the proposal to resign made by General Campbell, but still there will be to him some trace of consolation in the thought that he was led to do what he did under domestic and other influences which at the time warped his judgment. And beyond the miserable exhibition of human weakness on his part to which I have referred, he leaves this Court without a stain upon his honour.

Mr. Newmarch, in his able speech, invited me to dismiss the suit on the ground that the evidence was insufficient to justify the Court in finding that the words complained of in the libel had not been uttered by the defendant in the presence of the plaintiff, although the Court might not feel satisfied that the words had not been spoken. I cannot take any such course, as my mind is free from doubt, and I find that the defendant did not utter the words in the presence of Colonel Burney, and that the defendant did speak the slanderous words to Colonel Gordon. I find in favour of the plaintiff on all the issues.

My learned friend, Mr. Bell, whose absence I deplore, said he did not ask for extravagant damages; but if the plaintiff had placed the defendant and Col. Gordon under arrest and maintained his position throughout, I would have given him an amount of damages commensurate with the wrong done him. His conduct, however, has not been free from blame, and I cannot, therefore, give such an amount of damages as I would otherwise have done. But though his conduct has not been entirely free from blame, I must not, in assessing the amount of damages, lose sight of the conduct of the defendant. Nothing can be worse than his conduct, and yet he has held himself forth as a hero; but a hero of a low order. Having regard to his conduct I must not give such an amount of damages as would in effect neutralise my verdict, but such an amount as, without being exorbitant, will satisfy anyone that the plaintiff has recovered a substantial verdict. My verdict, therefore, will be for Rupees 2,000, with the highest scale of costs.

In the event of this case being appealed, I wish it to be understood that the sum of Rs. 2,000 is the amount of damages which I consider proper, if either of the alleged libels or the alleged slander be established to the satisfaction of the Court above.

I trust this judgment, which is the last I shall deliver, will not only have the effect of restoring the plaintiff to his position as an officer, which he was supposed to have forfeited, but will also be the means of producing such an amount of good as will render it unnecessary that a case like the present should ever again be brought into this Court.

BENGAL.

SCHEME OF INDIAN ARMY PROMOTIONS.

There have been several schemes laid before the public lately, the adoption of any of which would materially accelerate promotion, and save a large sum of money annually to the State. Government, however, seems to prefer saving at the spigot and expending at the bung. It is admitted on all hands that the old army of India, as re-constituted, does not find employment for the number of officials borne on its rolls. They cannot be forced to retire, and their rank—some privileges—and their pay, have been guaranteed to them by the Crown. At the same time the finances of the country are not in the most flourishing state, and Sir Charles Wood does not appear anxious to offer a second bonus to the infantry, or, should he be induced to do so, it will never be sufficiently tempting to make many accept it. Now, if Government would come forward in a liberal spirit towards its servants, and at the same time relinquish its own coffers, it should offer half the pay in India to thirty lieutenants, thirty majors, fifty captains, and fifty lieutenants.

Let these officers live in England or elsewhere, and let them count every two years so passed as one year of service for pension of rank, obliging them to accept such as soon as the time has been completed, and making their services available at any moment should they be required by the Government. They would be entitled to no extra promotion, and, as an extreme (but not necessary) measure, no promotions need be made in their places, although their names should be removed from the Army List. The cost of the number we have mentioned on Indian pay and allowances is as follows:—

30 Lieut.-Colonels ...	Rs. 371,610	0
50 Captains ...	249,225	0
50 Lieuts. ...	153,391	4
Total ...	Rs. 1,058,396	12

The saving by the plan proposed would be exactly half this sum, or Rupees 529,198-6-0, or nearly five and one-third lakhs annually. In the event of officers wishing to retire who are already entitled to the pension of their respective ranks, but who have fair expectations of the pension of a higher grade before them, either by line promotion, or by the term of years laid down for such pensions, Government should offer all such a bonus based upon the above scale, giving as a bonus the half-pay rate for the number of years which would have to elapse for their qualification for the pension of a higher grade—all recipients to retire on the rank they held at the time of accepting this bonus, and thus stopping their further promotion. All such casualties, however, would give substantive promotion in the cadres of regiments. For further remarks upon this and other kindred matters, the reader is referred to my remarks in the Hurkaru of the 8th Jan., 1862, and the Indian Empire of the 10th and 31st January of the current year, where I proposed schemes for the abolition of the Invalid and Unattached Establishments, the adoption of which would again materially and permanently reduce the military expenses of the presidency. I may have a few other remarks to make on a future occasion.—Delhi Gazette.

THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY OF INDIA.

To Mr. Oldham, Superintendent of the Geological Survey of India, is due the credit of having issued the first of all the regular administration reports for the official year which closed in April last. The addition of five new assistants has raised the survey staff to its proper strength, and enabled it to begin the regular examination of the Bombay Presidency. There, in the past season, the area extending from the coast of the Gulf of Cambay to Julgaum, on the Peninsula Railway, was examined, with valuable scientific results as to the age of the several groups of rocks. Next season this work will be joined on to that of Bengal, when the survey will have completed a section right across India from Calcutta to Cambay. At the same time the previous survey of the Nerbudda and Soane valleys will be joined on to the Bengal portion, by the examination of a very small area at Shergotty. The Hazareebaugh district to the north of the Trunk Road, with the valuable coal field of Kurhurbali, was carefully surveyed. In Madras, Mr. Foote's examination of Nellore and Cuddapah was continued, to the extent of 3,300 square miles. In British Burmah, the Yoma Range, south from the parallel of Bassein to Port Negrais, and the west coast northwards from Negrais to the boundary of Bassein, as well as the delta of the Irrawaddy to the parallel of Rangoon, were examined. The geological survey waits the publication of the maps of the topographical surveyor, hence no little delay, but the work accomplished seems to be satisfactory. Mr. Oldham's series of the "Paleontologia Indica," and the "Memoirs of the Survey," have been welcomed by the geologists and learned bodies of Europe. Mr. Oldham may well complain of the wretched house in which the Museum is hidden, but we trust the new University Buildings will soon give him relief.—Friend of India.

THE MUZBEE SIKH CASE.

Below we give the deposition of sepoy Gunda Sing—one of the unfortunate Sikhs who were sent to Ceylon as a pioneer corps—now in custody at Alipore as a deserter. The facts, as given by this man, require very little comment from us. Every Englishman who is proud of his country, and of the character of her Government for justice and good faith, will blush to think that such things should occur in her honoured name, and under her glorious flag; and to learn that a deluded and exiled man, transported from his native country, in her service, should fly from British oppression and injustice, to seek, and to find, from Mussulmans, hereditary enemies of his religion and his race, an asylum on the ocean, and help towards regaining his distant home.

But there are ulterior consequences suggested by this man's statement, which cannot be passed over without grave comment. If, as it appears from the statement of this poor illiterate man, his comrades, who went off in companies, were bound for Hyderabad in the Deccan, what may not be the effect of the presence of two or three hundred wronged and injured men, of the bravest race in India, at the Nizam's capital—the hot-bed of sedition, fanaticism, and hatred to British rule in India? This should be at once thought of and acted upon. If these Sikhs should find their way into the Deccan, it is not even yet too late to try and redress the wrong that has been done them; and the British Resident at Hyderabad should be instructed to send for them at once; to take them under his care and protection; to pay up all arrears, and take instant measures for sending them to Calcutta, en route to their native land. It is obviously of vital interest to many that the responsible author or authors of the lamentable treatment which these poor Sikhs have received, and of the hardships which they have endured and fled from, should be kept concealed. But, though this may be done for awhile, we are certain that eventually the whole story of this Ceylon pioneer business will come out in the British Parliament, if nowhere else. Even entirely apart from the mere pecuniary considerations involved, every Englishman who shall read what we have already written and printed upon this subject, and the deposition now given to the public, will feel that the character of his country for justice, unanimity, and gratitude, is deeply compromised; and an enquiry will be called for in so loud and general a voice that further concealment will be impossible, and the whole matter, from beginning to end, will be flooded with the light of a thorough and searching investigation. The sooner the better.

STATEMENT OF SEPOY GUNDA SING, CEYLON PIONEERS.

On arrival at Ceylon we were marched up country; Nos. 6, 7, and 8 Companies were together, the others went higher up country; we were told to go to work like coolies; this we had heard nothing of before, and consequently objected. Our provisions were then cut to half a seer of otter, or rice, without either ghee or salt. We remained in this state doing nothing for three or four months. We then got the order from the Government sahib to be broken up and go where we liked. Nos. 6, 7, and 8 then went off towards Hyderabad. Twenty of us remained, and we went to Major MacMullen, and he told us to go as the others had done. We then asked for a certificate and some pay (our arrears of pay amounted to about Rs. 50), upon which Major MacMullen got up and rushed at us to beat us. We then knew it was no good to remain any longer, so made the best of our way to the shore, and there I managed to get a passage on a Mussulman ship to Calcutta. The remainder stopped behind trying to get a passage in any ship they could. On my arrival at Calcutta I went to the first place where I heard there were Sikhs.

ANOTHER PRIZE-MONEY GRIEVANCE.

Colonel North has not a bit too soon called for the appointment of a Parliamentary Commission to enquire into and amend the past and present anomalous, unintelligible, and, in many cases, glaringly unjust, system of distributing prize-money acquired during hostile operations in the field—a system which, when it comes to be investigated by the Commission, will strike them and the public with amazement, and cause them to wonder how such a mass of contradictory absurdities could have grown up and remained so long a ruling authority. In addition to all the inconsistencies of this prize-money system, which we have of late exposed and dwelt upon, we have now another case before us, of the refusal of prize to a force, or a co-operating part of a force, upon grounds which we have not seen stated, and which our imagination cannot devise. The Arracan Battalion has been refused a share of the Pegu prize-money, resulting from the hostile operations of 1852-53, which commenced with the capture of Rangoon, and terminated in the annexation of British Burmah to our Eastern possessions; and Lieutenant Colonel W. F. Nuthall, now commanding the 3rd Regiment N.I., but then an officer of the battalion, has very rightly appealed to the Government against the unjust exclusion of the surviving officers and men from a share in the prize-money in question. The Arracan Battalion took a very distinguished and highly useful part in the military operations against the Burmese power, as it captured the strong stockades in the Aeng Pass, and then held that stronghold, subsequently penetrating into Pegu, when, in one affair, the commanding officer, Captain Barry, was shot dead, Lieutenant Thompson lost his arm, and several non-commissioned officers and men were killed and wounded. For these and other services, which we need not here detail, the battalion received the Pegu medal, and the batta accorded to the Burmah field force on the termination of hostilities; which, having got, we are utterly unable to understand why it should be excluded from its fair share in the prize-money. Although we are of opinion that British troops carrying on hostile operations in Asia will henceforward manage these prize-money affairs in a very prompt and summary manner indeed, and so as to save the Crown lawyers and the prize committees a vast deal of unnecessary trouble, yet we should be glad to see some order and just law eliminated from the chaos of contradiction and absurdity which now constitute our Prize Code, and have made it a source of endless worry and annoyance to all concerned; those who have received what they were never entitled to, alone excepted. Sir Charles Wood has summarily changed the distribution of prize-money realised under the Company's Government, and before India was so unfortunate as to come under his unscrupulous hands; and we suppose that this Arracan Battalion exclusion is either copied from his acts, or came out under his orders.—Englishman, Aug. 27.

REFORMATION NOT ANNEXATION.

The Proclamation which we publish elsewhere is invested with a peculiar significance for all our native feudatories. It is not long since we described in the glowing language of an eye-witness the accession to the feudatory musnud of Oodeypore of a young prince, who, partly through descent and partly through adoption, can boast an older pedigree than the greatest houses of Italy with their patrician blood. The Rajpoots are of the best blood in India, and the Rana of Oodeypore is of the purest blood of the Rajpoots. When other families were forced to give their daughters in marriage to the Imperial house of Delhi, the family of Oodeypore proudly refused to intermarry with even the best Rajpoot houses who did so. There is no doubt that the present Rana can trace back his ancestry to the earliest Rajpoot invasion of India, signified by Loh, son of the apotheosised hero Rama, who built Lahore or Lohkote. Yet a deed has been done in the name of the young Rana, and with the connivance of his Council of Regency, which ten years ago would most probably have, according to the then general law of the empire, extinguished the race and led to the annexation of the State.

The offence is twofold. One Kotharee Kesree Singh, after embezzling upwards of two hundred thousand pounds belonging to the State, was justified by the Council of Regency. The paramount power, in the interests of the young chief, has removed him from the administration. But the second offence is far worse than this. To suppress gang and highway robbery, Mehta Ajeet Singh, son of the executive member of the Council of Regency, was appointed. He proceeded to apprehend two men, Gowla Naik and Kripa Naik, on the charges of murder, robbery, mutilation, and cow-killing. When under the torture of beating both confessed that they had committed robbery and eaten cow's flesh. Thereupon Mehta Ajeet Singh, with an amount of cruelty which in its form is peculiar to Asiatics, and which we look for only in the greatest conquerors in their maddest moments, directed Gowla Naik to be tied to the leg of an elephant and dragged through the streets of the village of Poor. He then ordered him to be buried alive with his head above ground, in which state the man survived for two days. Kripa Naik had his teeth extracted, and died four days afterwards from the torture to which he was subjected. And this was done after the Political Agent had warned the Council of Regency that nothing should be done to the prisoners without a fair trial, and that capital sentences cannot be carried out without the sanction of Government. Yet the Regency justified the miscreant's proceedings in the name of justice, and when he confessed to the Political Agent and was detained at Oodeypore, under heavy security, they connived at his escape the same night. In a Proclamation published to all India in the Gazette, the Viceroy and Governor-general, in that dignified and sonorous language in which all his official utterances should be worded, expresses the abhorrence of the British Government at the atrocities committed in the name of justice by Mehta Ajeet Singh, and calls on every well-wisher of Oodeypore or Meywar to deny the criminal shelter, and to use the utmost endeavours to apprehend him. And the Council of Regency, as an administrative body, is virtually abolished, by conferring on the Political Agent judicial and revenue powers "until the Maharajah is pronounced of age and capable of undertaking the responsibility of the administration."

This procedure of Lord Elgin's Government should be weighed by every feudatory power and political officer in India, as at once a warning and a ground of confidence. It is a warning that each chief holds his sunnud not only on the tenure of loyalty to Queen Victoria, but of the proper administration of his State; and a ground of confidence, that, so long as that administration is respectable, and that loyalty assured, his State will descend to his heirs for ever; while the mere fact of mal-administration by a minor will be visited not on the House, but on the Regency. This is the first practical illustration of the truth we have never ceased to insist on—that the Government of India desires the reformation, not the annexation, of feudatory States. It is the first example of the principle contained in the thirteenth paragraph of Lord Canning's Adoption Charter, that the "measure will not debar the Government of India from stepping in to set right such serious abuses in a Native Government as may threaten any part of the country with anarchy or disturbance, nor from assuming temporary charge of a Native State when there shall be sufficient reason to do so." And at the same time, since our interference is in the cause of justice, mercy, and the interests of the young Rana, it is an example of the truth that a vigorous despotism is, in the words of a high authority, the best mode of government for training the people of India in what is wanting to render them capable of a higher civilisation.—Friend of India.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

LUCKNOW, Aug. 27.—About a month ago an Ulwae and his wife quarrelled, and she left, professing her intention to return to her family. She took with her extra clothes, Rs. 50 in cash, and gold and silver ornaments on her person valued at upwards of Rs. 300, and has not been seen since. In the neighbourhood of Ameerabad, nearly half a mile distant from the Ulwae's (confessioners), one Yacoub Ali, a Moonshe, who teaches Europeans the Oordoo and Persian, has seven or eight houses of sorts with gardens and such matters of his own. He is generally a man of self-possessed manners, speaks English, carries a silver watch with a gold chain attached, wears gold rings, is neat in his dress, and has an easy conscience in religious matters; having been originally a Hindoo, he embraced Mahomedanism in the days of the Nawabee; he annexed himself to Christianity when annexation was the order of the day, and during the mutiny he turned once more to Mahomet, so that in religious matters his views may be considered an amalgamation of the three creeds. The Mahomedans will have it that he is an Eesai; Europeans call him a Mahomedan; and the Hindoos, having no proselytising tendencies, simply consider him an outcast. He is reputed as the possessor of property of the value of Rs. 8,000 to 10,000. About the time that the woman disappeared Yacoub Ali's neighbours remarked that the well in one of his houses was suddenly filled up, and on being questioned as to the reason he replied that he filled it up because the smell from it was offensive. The well was partially filled up by himself unassisted, and then labourers were called in to complete the work in perfect order. Suspicions grew up slowly, and on Sunday night became sufficiently ripe to be laid formally before

Major Chamberlain, our city magistrate. The police went on Monday morning to clear out the well, but on reaching the spot it had all the appearance of being recently disturbed. On the surface of the broken ground, however, they picked up a portion of putrid scalp with hair attached, and a human tooth; they commenced digging, and got a thigh or leg-bone, and proceeding deeper discovered the back-joint of a heel and finally a human skull with the brain only partially decomposed. On Tuesday the search was resumed, but it only resulted in the discovery of a joint of a human foot, proximate, however, to the heel joint discovered on the previous day. Up to this point the search was conducted under orders of the city magistrate and Mr. Blemman, superintendent of the city police, by Mr. Inspector Nesseeerwanjee Moody, but consideration for the health of him and his party here suggested a relief, and Mr. Prince was deputed between three and four o'clock in the evening to continue the work. It was by this time clear that the major portion of the body had been removed, and Mr. Prince's operations were, for that day, confined to an examination of servants and neighbours. On Wednesday morning (yesterday) the search was extended to another well in a garden some sixty paces off, from which direction an offensive smell was perceptible. A police diver descended, and sent up some heavy and distinct clods of mud, but as these contained no human remains, and emitted no offensive smell, the inspector concluded that they had been thrown in merely to mislead. He called for and smelt some of the water, but that also was pure. His attention was then directed to a water-hole near the well, but there was nothing there of a suspicious character. On the margin of this hole, however, there is a bush, and clumps of elephant grass; the syce in searching the hole by approaching this spot disturbed a host of flies, and then became conscious that the offensive smell which pervaded the neighbourhood was stronger in this direction. He approached the bush, and there, tied in a black cumlee or blanket, discovered the object of which he was in search, the large part of a human body. He dragged this bundle out of the bush, but the stench from it was so strong that he had to get assistance to lift it, though it only weighed four to five puseeras. After Sunday evening the stench from that portion of the ground was very offensive. It perplexed even Yacoub Ali's mare, which, though a very quiet animal, became very restless. The remains were made over to Dr. Eteson, officiating assistant civil surgeon, to be put together and reported on, and the cumlee was brought into Court to be identified as Yacoub Ali's property. A policeman walked into Court with it as an ordinary matter of fact proceeding, but he was soon hunted out, and ordered to spread it out in the square below for identification. Even at that distance one could judge what Major Chamberlain and the police officers must have suffered in the progress of their investigations, and only that doctors are believed to be peculiarly qualified to meet difficulties of the kind, Dr. Eteson's work in preparing a medical report on the remains ought to be considered one of extreme danger.

The evidence is to the effect that about the time of the woman's disappearance and the filling up of the well began to be noised about, Yacoub Ali went to bathe at an unusual hour of the night: he was covered with mud, and that mud adhered so tenaciously that he had to get his syce to assist in removing it. They both expressed astonishment at the quality of the mud, and the syce was surprised at the peculiar smell about his master. The latter further adopted the unusual course of washing his own clothes that night, and sending them off to the dhobin next day; the dhobin did not disturb the bundle, and it was produced in court, with a balanced handled knife, all bearing suspicious stains. The prisoner is as yet unaided by counsel, and, under the circumstances, has admitted circumstances directly and indirectly, which will greatly embarrass any one who may take up his defence. I think I have said enough on the case for one day. I doubt whether the subject will be an agreeable one to your readers. I have no doubt about its being rather a disagreeable one to me to have to write about it.—Delhi Gazette, August 29.

FAREWELL ADDRESSES TO SIR M. L. WELLS, KT.

On Saturday morning, Sept. 5, Sir Mordaunt Wells attended in the Grand Jury Room to receive an Address from the Attorneys of the High Court, upon his retirement from the Bench. There was a very numerous attendance.

Mr. Sandes, in presenting the address, said that it had been adopted at the largest meeting of his branch of the profession he had ever known, and that there was not a single dissident.

The address, which was signed by fifty-six of the attorneys, was as follows:—

To the Hon. Sir MORDAUNT LAWSON WELLS, Kt., one of the Judges of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal.

"Sir,—We, the attorneys of the High Court, have heard with great regret that failing health has obliged you to resign your office and to leave India.

"We believe that in you the Court will lose an able, earnest, and painstaking judge; one whose desire has always been to arrive at the truth, and to do justice without regard to technicalities, or to the labour involved; and one whose decisions have commanded the respect and confidence of the community.

"You have also been singularly successful in adapting to the High Court a new procedure not designed for, and in many respects but ill-suited to, its requirements.

"Personally, we have to acknowledge your unvarying courtesy, the patient attention with which we have been heard, and the desire you have always evinced to study the convenience of our clients and ourselves.

"We trust that you will permit us to express the esteem and respect we feel for you in a more lasting form than that of an address, and with the sincere hope that cessation from work and a return to England will speedily restore you to health.—We have the honour to remain, your faithful servants,

"Calcutta, September, 1863."

Sir Mordaunt Wells said:—

"Gentlemen,—I am deeply sensible of your kindness, and receive with the greatest gratification this address.

"The uniform and steady support I received at your hands inspired me with confidence in carrying out important changes which the new charter somewhat suddenly brought upon us. Your admirable conduct in cheerfully and promptly adapting yourselves to the new state of things tended greatly to the successful introduction of the new system of procedure, and I shall ever feel grateful to the members of both branches of the profession for the valuable assistance I received at their hands. It is my sincere desire that whatever changes may be effected in the high court, your interests as attorneys and officers of the Court may not be lost sight of, as it is to the advantage of the community at large that you should be enabled to maintain the same high position which you have hitherto occupied. I shall receive with pride and gratitude the testimonial you have so generously offered for my acceptance. I wish you all prosperity and happiness. Farewell!"

We understand that a sum of Rs. 2,500 had been subscribed, with which it is intended to purchase a piece of plate in England for presentation to Sir Mordaunt.

The leading members of the native community in this city met at the Grand Jury Hall on Saturday evening, at half-past five o'clock, to present a farewell address to Sir Mordaunt Wells. As soon as the learned judge (in company with the Hon. Mr. Justice Norman) entered, Rajah Kalikrishna Bahadoor went forward to receive him, and, after the usual civilities, addressed him as follows:—

"Hon. Sir,—I am entrusted with the duty of reading this farewell address. It is headed by the Maharajah of Burdwan, and is signed by three thousand gentlemen representing all classes of the native community. Copies of the address have been sent to several Rajahs, Zemindars, and other gentlemen in the Mofussil, and will, when signed and returned, be forwarded to you. Other influential gentlemen residing in distant parts of Bengal have intimated their desire to join in this movement, but not in time to enable me to obtain their signatures.

"I regret that the serious and protracted illness of my worthy cousin, Rajah Radhakant Bahadur, has prevented us from communicating with him on the subject of this address, which is as follows:—

To the Hon. Sir MORDAUNT LAWSON WELLS, Kt., &c., &c., &c.

"Hon. Sir,—We, the undersigned rajahs, zemindars, and other native inhabitants of Bengal, beg leave to offer you, on the occasion of your retirement from the Bench of her Majesty's High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, a sincere expression of our gratitude for the valuable services rendered by you in the course of your career as a judge of the High Court, and of our regret at your early resignation of that high post, the just, speedy, and vigorous performance of the duties of which had inspired confidence in all classes of the community. Our regret is the deeper that you leave the Bench at a time when your wider experience of native character, habits of thought, and usages had established happy relationships between yourself and the native community, and from which the greatest benefits were expected to result.

2. "The earnest, yet liberal spirit in which you have laboured to render the administration of justice paramount above every other end; the force and firmness with which you have striven to uphold the supreme majesty of the law; the searching prescience which in no instance failed you in separating fraudulent insolvency from those real cases of disastrous ruin and pauperism, for the special relief of which the Insolvent Court was originally instituted; the sound practical wisdom and considerate regard to extra-legal bearings invariably manifested by you in the adjudication of suits by which the ruin of the poor was successfully prevented,—these and many other traits of your judicial conduct combined to render your honourable career as a judge of the High Court a blessing to the people as it undoubtedly was a source of virtuous satisfaction to you.

3. "And now, hon. sir, we bid you a reluctant farewell from a land which you, as a judge of the said High Court, have so well and so ably served, and the earnest prayer of whose inhabitants is, and shall ever be, that health, happiness, honour, and prosperity may unite in rendering your subsequent life a reward and blessing to yourself, and a source of pride and gratification to your friends.—We have the honour to be, Hon. Sir, your most obedient servants,

Sir Mordaunt Wells replied in a feeling and appropriate speech. He said:—

"Rajahs and Gentlemen,—This public expression of your approbation of my conduct in the performance of my judicial duties is highly gratifying to me. I am deeply impressed with the spontaneous assurance of your esteem and confidence.

"By a firm and unflinching administration of the criminal law, I have assisted in the suppression of crimes detrimental to the best interests of society.

"I may be permitted to point to my judicial decisions in the Insolvent Court, as evidencing on my part a sincere desire to suppress commercial frauds and establish a sound and legitimate system of trading. I trust my exertions in this department of judicature have been productive of substantial advantage to the community at large.

"I have, as was my duty in the administration of justice, recognised and respected the customs and religious feelings of the Queen's native subjects.

"I leave India with unfeigned regret; but the state of my health has necessitated the resignation of my judicial office.

"Believe me that I shall ever take a deep interest in the welfare of the people of India. I thank you for your kind wishes and bid you farewell."

The address was presented in a beautiful silver case, the gift of the dealers in precious stones in Burra Bazar, who have requested Sir Mordaunt to sit for his photograph.—Bengal Hurkaru, Sept. 7.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WRECK.—The barque Alfred the Great, Captain Wilson, bound from Calcutta to Melbourne with a cargo of rice and sundries, has been totally wrecked on the eastern sands, about ten miles outside the floating light, off the entrance to the Rangoon river. It appears that the ship sprung a leak eight days after her departure from Saugor, and after a consultation it was decided to bear up for the nearest port either of Rangoon or Maulmain, and while endeavouring to make for the former port she ran aground on the eastern sands. On striking a great portion of the cargo was thrown overboard, with a view to lighten the ship and float her off, but this attempt failed. She eventually broke her back, owing to the heavy strain, and it was determined to abandon her and take to the boats. The captain, officers, and crew, with several passengers, in all about forty souls, arrived safely at Rangoon. Fears were entertained for the safety of the barque Eagle, which left Rangoon for Penang about three months ago, and has not since been heard of. Very heavy weather had prevailed for some weeks, and the eastern beacon at the entrance of the Rangoon river has been washed away.—Hurkaru, Sept. 4.

ASSAULTS ON OFFICERS.—The following particulars, which are correct in every respect, about the assault on Colonel Nuttall at Lucknow the other day, an account of which was furnished by a correspondent in our issue of Saturday, have been sent us. The ruffian was drugged, not drunk, and was prepared evidently to assault the first European he met, for he did not take up a handful of mud and stones when he saw Colonel Nuttall's buggy approaching, but had them in his hands ready. When he threw up his arms and stopped the buggy, Colonel Nuttall immediately jumped out, and with the assistance of two men, a Eurasian and a native, secured the assailant, who never ventured to offer any resistance, though he was very abusive. Colonel Nuttall then took him along the road, for nearly a quarter of a mile, till he met a policeman, into whose custody he delivered him, when he immediately struck the policeman a tremendous blow in the face, and the policeman retaliated with his truncheon, but Colonel Nuttall caught his arm and broke the force of the blow. The house of Mr. Newton, the barrister, being near, Colonel Nuttall went in there for further help, and on account of the fellow's violence to all natives who came to the Colonel's assistance, the latter had his hands tied behind him and sent for more police. On another policeman coming up his hands were released, when he immediately felled the policeman, and struck him in the face whilst down. The event occurred within the precincts of the town, and the man was a perfect stranger to Colonel Nuttall. It is a most fortunate occurrence that the man had not encountered ladies unprotected, as in such case there is no knowing to what length his violence might not have carried him. A somewhat similar assault upon an English officer in Cashmere was related by the Lahore Chronicle the other day. Captain Reed was the name of the officer who was attacked, and rather severely wounded, by a drugged sepoy in the Maharaja's service. After a struggle the sepoy was captured by some natives of the place, Captain Reed being too weak from loss of blood to pursue. The English political authorities in Cashmere, rather foolishly we think, interfered to prevent the Maharaja punishing the man as he wished to. It is not our custom to cut off men's hands, but it is a very effective punishment there can be no doubt, and one that tells both upon the offender and all who see the consequences of crime in his mutilated person; and if the Maharaja wanted to inflict this ordinary punishment upon the sepoy, we do not see upon what grounds, either of right or policy, the British agent interfered.—Delhi Gazette, Sept. 1.

TRIAL OF AN OFFICER.—LUCKNOW, Aug. 27.—We have become famous here for sensation trials, military scandals, courts-martial, and courts of inquiry. One of the latter courts has been sitting the past week, inquiring into charges of a most disgusting and disgraceful nature, against an officer of the artillery here, which, if proved, will necessitate his removal from the service, and which will anyway always cause a stigma to attach to his character. I believe the same court-martial that tried the rape case will reassemble to try this extraordinary charge.

NEWS FROM THE PUNJAB.—Intelligence has arrived from our Punjab correspondent to the effect that 2,000 armed men belonging to Sittara (subjects of the Ameer of Cabul) have crossed the Indus near Peyhour, and invaded British territory. The 1st Punjab infantry and the mountain train from Attock have gone against them. The news has arrived by telegram from Peshawur. The invaders are chiefly Hindostanees, many of them sepoys formerly in our service; and it is suggested that they are merely the vanguard of a larger force. A very uneasy feeling prevails on the frontiers. The wealthy traders of Umritsur and Lahore declare that mischief is brewing, and I expect to find shortly a stoppage put to mercantile operations. The large force, to which the 42nd Highlanders is to be added, ordered to assemble at Lahore, gives some warrant for their alarm.

A SUTTEE.—A correspondent from Monghyr informs us that a very lamentable case of suttee lately occurred in the village of Seerneea, Thanah Bellea, in Behar. There lived in the above village a kyaat and his wife, a woman of about thirty years of age, unblest with any offspring, and by no means in easy circumstances. The man died in the second week of August, and his wife expressed a strong desire to become a suttee. She was at first restrained from the act of self-immolation, and confined in a room, the door of which was secured by a lathee; but she broke open the door, and insisted on accompanying the corpse to the river, which the carriers of the corpse, three men and a boy, allowed her to do. On reaching the river side she persuaded the carriers of the dead body to burn her with her departed lord. The men, whether from fear or religious feeling we cannot say, prepared the funeral pile, made the woman sit on one end of it, and placed the corpse on the pile, putting the head on the lap of the woman. They then set fire to that part of the pile towards which the leg of the corpse was hanging. The fire gradually reached the body of the woman, but she remained firm; neither did she scream nor groan nor express any symptoms of agony. She only murmured in a low tone, "Ram ho!" In this manner the poor victim to superstition lingered for a few hours, and then expired.—Hindu Patriot.

CAPTAIN DANBUZ, of the Royal Artillery, whose case is referred to in the Oude Gazette, is, I believe, accused of thrashing commissariat baboos and other natives in authority, while he was in command of a detachment proceeding from Allahabad to Saugor. Captain Danbuz is a new arrival in the country. Knowing little or nothing of the language, manners, or lazy customs of the natives, he committed himself, as many others have done before him. I think you will remember a small mistake during the mutiny, when the officer in command of a small Bombay column, finding his movements impeded by the dilatory action of a native chief, a Rajpoot, upon whom they were dependent for supplies, horrified the political authorities throughout India by tying up and flogging the "descendant of the sun." Our Government, I think, could only afford in those days to administer a wiggling to the soldier; they may, perhaps, be able to show more indignation in these days on behalf of a few lazy baboos.

Whatever may be the consequences to Captain Danbuz, it is to be hoped that the members appointed to investigate the matter, if they find that the commissariat officers (black, white, or brown) were inefficient or negligent, will be true to the army and show them up. Are these commissariat baboos or gomashtas subject to military law? If not, the sooner they are the better for the army. If in the Peninsula war Picton found it necessary to make his Provost Marshal hold a "hempen halter in terrorem" over a European Commissary-general how much more necessary must it be to empower commanding officers on the march in India to hang Bengalee baboos who are not attracted to the commissariat department by the paltry twenty or thirty rupees allotted to them as monthly salary, but by the opportunities afforded them of robbing the soldier right and left. It is absurd to have these small paid and irresponsible men in a department like the commissariat, and more absurd still to attach the inert baboo to so important a branch of the army; but if they are indispensable, then let them be brought as completely under military laws as all other camp followers, so that officers may not be provoked into taking the law into their own hands by the impertinence or laziness of such men.—Correspondent of Delhi Gazette.

INDIAN IDEAS OF JUSTICE.

HYDERABAD, Aug. 9.—I told you in a former letter that the courts of justice at Hyderabad had risen in popular estimation, and, wonderful to tell, they continue to be in good repute. Most people, at their formation, augured that the dispensation of justice would be a complete failure, and, indeed, the obstructions to it were so numerous, that it required some hardihood to predict that the minister, a slow, but persistent workman, would bring his measure to bear. The obstructions existed in acknowledged prescriptive rules, the correctness of which was engrafted ab initio upon the minds of the people, and had acquired all the force of a religious prejudice. It was opposed to the interests of those persons who alone have a voice in a despotic State or any consideration in it. The relations of the Nizam were exempted from the jurisdiction of the courts, from the authority of the minister, and were only amenable to the supreme head, who, as you may suppose, could not make it convenient to undertake judicial labour. His Highness' household were all equally exempt from subordination to any authority but his own. Of this, however, it can now be said that it exists more in theory than in practice, as his Highness readily gives up criminals possessing exemption from belonging to his household to be dealt with by the minister, and we have a recent instance of his so consigning a brother-in-law for adjudication in a criminal case in which he somehow (not directly) is involved. The difficulty of dispensing justice in a case where the criminal stands in the higher grades of society is considerable, and where he possesses military power still greater. In regard to the first the high man is sheltered equally by common opinion and by his position. "Would you degrade a nobleman by summoning him to appear in court?" The objection extends equally to his appearing there as witness as in the character of a criminal. "What, sir, would you carry a high man into a court like a common thief for killing his slave?" (I am quoting an address made to Chundoololl by a body of Pathans.) And then there is the irrefutable argument—he and his grandfather were never so treated, nor would have submitted to such treatment—but you are sahib log. A native gentleman, of some consideration and no small power here, visited Bombay about a year ago, and meeting a countryman there, declared that "no gentleman could live there without the constant apprehension of being subjected to indignity, for you cannot beat your slave without being cited to appear in court and coerced to appear." Every man who can resist an appearance thinks his honour is concerned to resist a summons citing him to appear, whether as criminal or witness. Dilawurkhan, a jemadar, of a hundred horse, makes his appearance in court in obedience to the laws; his neighbour, commanding fifty horse, Himmut Khan, taunts him with having sacrificed his honour, and says he would have defended his house to the last and perished rather than taint his family name by submitting to such degradation. Dilawurkhan cannot rise above this taunt and spurn it, for he has been educated in the same principles, and the judge who may try a man for contumacy in such cases cannot but have a leaning towards him, as whatsoever his official duty may require he is imbued with the same principles. Here was no small difficulty, but though this has undergone repression to a great extent, it cannot be entirely overcome in a day, nor by the single effort of any man. Non omnia possumus omnes is no small laudation to the minister and to his coadjutors who have taken part with him to carry his measures into effect.

The Assistant-Resident, Captain Malcolm's name having been submitted to the court as an evidence in some case, a native gentleman said to me that he asked Captain Malcolm whether he would have gone, and was to his surprise answered in the affirmative. "Would you go," said he to me; I replied affirmatively and said, "did I suffer illusage from any person which I could redress of my own power, I still would prefer seeking protection where such could be afforded me from the law;" and I told him that Lord William Bentinck, having been threatened with personal violence by a conductor serving under his orders, had sought protection from the law by a resort to a magistrate, and had not crushed the fellow vindictively as he might have done, had he not had respect for the laws. I am happy in having occasion to state this fact publicly, for my visa voce relation of it to natives here, I feel perceptibly is not believed—much less that William IV. and her present gracious Majesty both suffered personal injury from assailants, and in neither case were the malefactors put to death, though the act of neither was extenuated by any apologetic matter.

THE INQUEST ON THE LATE MRS. GREEN.

The proceedings in this case terminated on Saturday evening, having been adjourned seven or eight times from the 7th inst. The evidence was most voluminous; but it will be sufficient for every purpose if we give a portion of the summary with which the coroner, Dr. Mair, wound up:—

"You have now heard from the evidence of Dr. Mayer, the chemical examiner, that after the most minute and careful examination he was unable to detect the slightest trace of morphia, or any other poison, either in the contents of the stomach or in those tissues which were removed from the body of the deceased. He also told you that morphia is one of the most difficult of all poisons to detect in the tissues, and that one of our highest authorities had stated that no English chemist has ever been able to detect morphia in any of the tissues after death, even in cases where there was no doubt as to morphia having been taken during life and shortly before death.

He also told you that he believed it perfectly possible that the deceased Mrs. Green may have died from a large dose of morphia and yet no traces of the poison be discovered in the stomach or tissues of the body after death.

"After hearing the statements and opinions of the several medical men,—all of them concurring—who were in immediate attendance upon the deceased during her last illness, I do not think you will have any difficulty in coming to the conclusion that the symptoms from which the deceased was suffering when they all saw her, and which caused her death were due to some narcotic poison.

"If you are perfectly satisfied in your minds, then, that these symptoms and the death of the deceased were caused by narcotic poison the next questions for you to consider are—What was that narcotic poison, and 2nd, By whom was it administered? These questions can only be answered by taking into your careful consideration all that occurred from the time the deceased went into the room adjoining the dining-room up till the time she was first found to be insensible; and it is only by a combination of all the circumstances as elicited during our inquiry that you will be able to come to any conclusion regarding these questions. We have no evidence whatever to show either that anyone saw the deceased herself take any narcotic poison that night, or that it was administered to her by another;—all that we do know is, that the deceased came unexpected to this place on that Thursday night from her own house direct, that she was apparently in her usual health then, but so much depressed in spirits that she stated to Dr. and Mrs. Flynn she wished she were dead; that she remained outside for half-an-hour or more talking to Dr. and Mrs. Flynn; that she was seen taking nothing but a glass of iced water, which she called for and got from the servant, Anthony; that she went alone of her own accord from the dining-table into the adjoining room, and that she lay down upon a cot there, but that she might have got up from this cot without being noticed by those seated at the dining table, or by those servants who were in attendance there. We have it also in evidence that in this room into which the deceased entered, there was lying on a teapoy very close to the cot a bottle containing a solution of morphia, of which Mrs. Flynn had been in the habit of taking one teaspoonful every night, and of which she had taken her usual dose a few minutes before the deceased came to the house that night; that Mrs. Flynn had in the hurry to go out and receive the deceased unfortunately left this bottle of solution of morphia on the teapoy in her room, instead of placing it in her almirah as formerly; that a considerable quantity, supposed to be a wineglassful, had been taken out of that bottle from the time Mrs. Flynn had taken her dose, up till the time she (Mrs. Flynn) went into the room and noticed the bottle still lying on the teapoy while the deceased was very ill. It is also proved that the deceased entered that room alone and that no one was seen or known to have entered that room from the time the deceased went into it up till the time she was discovered to be insensible."

The jury retired for a few minutes and returned the following verdict:—Death was caused by an overdose of morphia taken by Mrs. Green, but whether by accident, or of her own free will, or in what state of mind she was at the time, there is no evidence to show.—Madras Times, Aug. 31.

CAPTAIN H. E. CHURCH.—Colonel Drury and the officers of the Volunteer Guards invited Captain Church to a farewell dinner on Friday evening last, when several others of his friends were also present. The mess room was very tastefully decorated, and the volunteer band was in attendance. After a very sumptuous banquet, and the usual loyal toasts, Colonel Drury, in fitting terms, gave the honoured guest of the evening, with an account of his career in the Volunteer Guards from its first formation, and of the uniform zeal which characterised all his proceedings for the welfare of the men of his own company and of the regiment in general.

Captain Church made a suitable reply; he thanked his brother officers heartily for all their kindness, declared that no great credit was due to him for any thing he might have done, as he joined the volunteers to gratify his own anxious desire to become a soldier. If during his stay in England he should pick up any new notions from the British volunteers, he promised on his return to impart the same to his comrades. Several good speeches followed, and the evening was one of the most pleasant that could be well conceived.—Madras Times, Sept. 14.

OOTACAMUND.—We are informed that it is now decided to have a Sessions Court here, and that Mr. J. W. Cherry will be the judge. We congratulate the local community on the change which is coming fast. The trade especially will be delighted to hear that there is to be a higher tribunal, avoiding the necessity of appeal; and altogether, the Sessions Court and Mr. Cherry as the judge will be an improvement, much desired. The present sub-judge stands high in public estimation for moderation and prudence, but Ootacamund is growing out of a want of these qualities. We require a judicial functionary who will be more of the bench—a man who would sacrifice his own son, as some notable of old did, in the discharge of his duties. This man Mr. Cherry is likely to prove, and we consequently hope for his speedy advent.—Neilgherry Excelsior, Aug. 27.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DAVID SASSOON, Esq., in addition to founding a General Hospital at Poona, has, with characteristic liberality, placed a sum of 25,000 rupees at the disposal of the committee for the establishment there of an asylum for such persons as are, owing to bodily defects and infirmities, unable to earn their livelihood. Mr. Sasson, though not a native of India, has expended in the Bombay presidency during his residence there upwards of one hundred thousand pounds in various acts of benevolence, and his excellent example has of late been followed by a few others.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

COLONEL CRAWLEY.

THE public press here has already had a great deal to say about Colonel Crawley. They will very soon have much more to say about him. The Colonel reached England by the last mail. The Army and Navy Gazette states that there were about 140 of all ranks on board the steamer Ceylon, belonging to the Inniskilling Dragoons, and three officers of the 72nd Highlanders; one the president and the other two members of the court-martial that cashiered Captain Smales. There were also two natives. The expenses of the new court-martial will be heavy, indeed, but as so many considerations connected with military justice are involved, the cost will be very cheerfully met by the nation. It will be a great warning to men in high authority, who will henceforth have the wholesome dread that their judgments may be reversed, and they themselves be placed, as it were, upon their trial. It is supposed that Lieutenant-general Sir George Wetherall, commanding at Manchester, will be the President of the Crawley Court-martial, which, we hear, is to be held at Aldershot.

THE GREAT BURNEY TRIAL.

THE day after our last number was published we received a copy of the Bengal Hurkaru of the 2nd of September, which contains the first portion of the report of Sir Mordaunt Wells's judgment on the famous Burney case. The judge, feeling that he had the whole onus of the decision upon himself, having no jury to share the responsibility—and being called upon to determine both the fact and the law—seems to have studied the evidence with a most painful anxiety. His summing up bears the appearance rather of an oration from the bar than of a judgment from the bench; for he is himself almost as much on his defence as the defendant. He enters into a most elaborate explanation of his reasons for the decision he has come to, as if he were appealing to the public for his justification. We think Sir Mordaunt Wells a thoroughly conscientious and clear-sighted judge, but he is rather wanting in judicial dignity of demeanour, and is infinitely too verbose. Either he loves the sound of his own voice more than he ought to do, or he is too anxious about the criticisms or opinions of others, or is deficient in the power of selecting the salient points of a case, or in the literary dexterity of condensing much thought into a small compass. The portion of the judgment given in the Bengal paper of September 2nd extends to seven long columns of small type. As it was impossible for us to give the whole, and yet keep open more space for the conclusion, we have confined ourselves to the selection of the principal passages.

THE LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.

WE have borrowed or stolen—"conveyed, the wise it call"—very freely, indeed, all the dramatic productions of the French brain, that our playwrights thought worth the carriage to the boards of the British stage. Our neighbours have thus been forced to contribute most largely to our amusement, and now we have borrowed an institution that is to contribute as largely to our profit. We, too, it seems, are now to have a system of Land Credit or "Crédit Foncier." No doubt we shall in this instance, as in so many others, make amends for our want of originality by great additions, and modifications, and improvements. Of all the later importations from the Continent, the idea of a Crédit Foncier is the most valuable, and we cannot doubt that the just published prospectus of the Land Mortgage Bank for India, with such a man as Mr. S. Laing, our late Finance Minister of India, at the head of it, and with such gentlemen in the list of directors as Sir John Peter Grant, the late Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, Colonel Balfour, C.B., the late Chief of the Military Finance Department of India, Mons. Pinard, du Comptoir d'Escompte, Paris, et du Crédit Foncier Colonial, and others well acquainted with India or well versed in the practical details of monetary schemes, will help to forward and complete the colonisation of British India by the peculiar advantages which it offers to the British settler with small capital, who may now obtain the means of making himself the proprietor of large estates on very easy terms. The General Credit and Finance Company of London (Limited) is to have a capital of £2,000,000, in 100,000 shares of £20 each, and only £2 per share is to be paid on allotment. So that there are comparatively few people, indeed, who could not afford to take a share in this large and noble scheme, and the eventual risk—if any risk there be—being limited to so small a sum as £20—is scarcely worth a thought to anyone who is in a condition a little above the lowest, when put in opposition to the reasonable hopes of large profits. With £10 paid up, the £20 shares of the French Crédit Foncier are said to stand at a market value of upwards of £50.

But it is not the expected profit to shareholders that is the subject of general care. That is quite a secondary consideration. Far more important interests are involved. It is the profit to the entire British Empire that should be our first thought; for if this Indian Crédit Foncier should succeed to the extent anticipated, large tracts of waste land in India will be brought under cultivation, and we shall see British landholders who were once puzzled how to make both ends meet in their fatherland not only sure of a handsome competency for their own lease of life, but exulting in the thought that they can transmit their own good fortune to their heirs. Few possessions afford so much pride and satisfaction to men as a freehold estate, however small.

It is rightly called real property—it is so solid and substantial, and safe, and gives a man so strong a consciousness of prosperity and independence. The smallest cottage and plot of ground that are entirely our own are far more precious and far more interesting to us than the largest estate that we may hold but temporarily at the will of another owner.

"I can't but think 'twould sound more clever, To me, and to my heirs for ever."

Thousands of our countrymen who could never have hoped to possess a foot of earth in England may now become country gentlemen of landed estates in one of the most fertile countries in the world. India is not what it was—unlimitedly rich in natural resources, but in other respects barbaric, and only to be regarded as a place of temporary exile to needy Englishmen—it is now, to some extent, adapted, and will soon be infinitely more so, to the settled residence of civilised and comfort-loving people. All sorts of sanitary measures on a large scale are applied to the country by the local government; vast tracts of jungle have been already cleared; parched lands have been freely irrigated; trade and industry are liberally protected and encouraged; railways and telegraphs are passing through the country in all directions; the administration is popularized to an extent that was little anticipated in the days of the old East India Company; and, as the prospectus before us justly states, in no country in the world are all the elements of national prosperity, including the value of land, in a state of such rapid development. The interests of India are identical with those of Great Britain, and we respectfully and loyally congratulate the Empress of Hindostan and our fellow-subjects on the vastly increased value of her Majesty's glorious Oriental possessions.

We had written thus far when we heard that such was the rush for shares in this new company that no more were to be disposed of, and that an announcement to that effect had been duly advertised. The business of the bank may therefore be very soon commenced upon at once.

THE CURIOUS CASE OF CAPTAIN GRIFFIN.

So long ago as June, 1859, Captain John George Benjamin Griffin, of H.M.'s 3rd Regiment of Madras European Infantry, was involved in serious trouble, and was subsequently tried by court-martial and dismissed the service. The Bengal Hurkaru, in an editorial occupying nearly four and a-half long and broad columns, revives the whole affair, and it now appears that Captain Griffin, encouraged perhaps by the effect of the re-agitation of the Crawley case, has appealed from the decision of the military authorities in India to the British-Indian public, and hopes eventually to have his grievance discussed in the British Senate. The case is a most extraordinary and complicated one, and though it is elaborately stated by a very able writer, favourable to Captain Griffin, we confess that we do not very clearly understand it, nor can we at all make up our minds as to the real nature and extent of the injustice said to have been done to him. One thing is quite clear, that if Captain Griffin was unjustly dismissed the service, and was yet utterly guiltless of any serious crime throughout, he was at least singularly indiscreet and singularly unlucky. We can only afford space for a comparatively brief outline of the case as it is stated at great length in the Bengal Hurkaru.

Captain Griffin was on sick leave at Allahabad. Having a quantity of property to dispose of, he circulated a list of the articles amongst the residents. A person of gentlemanly appearance called upon him and bought a watch of him for Rs. 160. The purchaser styled himself Lieutenant Turner, of the Royal Artillery. The soi-disant Lieut. Turner, a few hours after, sent Captain Griffin an order for 160 rupees on the Delhi Bank's agent at Allahabad. The Lieutenant had previously sent to the Delhi Bank a hoondee for Rs. 167. On the back of this hoondee were two endorsements. The first ran as follows:—"Contents payable to Lieut. Turner, Royal Artillery." Signed C. R. Griffin, Calcutta, 10th June. The second bore the signature of Lieut. Turner, and was dated Allahabad, 18th June. The first of the two endorsements was a forgery.

The account of this hoondee is a strange one. A Lieut. and not Capt. Griffin (C. H. Griffin* and not J. G. B. Griffin) was an officer of H.M.'s 96th regiment, and no connection, we believe, of the Capt. Griffin of H.M.'s 3rd regiment of Madras European Infantry, who is the hero of our narrative. A Mr. Bowen owed Lieut. Griffin Rs. 167, and remitted him the amount in the form of the hoondee, addressed to Allahabad. This hoondee is supposed by some post-office accident—Lieut. Griffin having left Allahabad—to have fallen into the hands of the swindler, who obtained the watch. The order for Rs. 167 was presented by Capt. Griffin to the agent of the Delhi Bank, and was duly honoured. It was at last discovered that there was no such officer in the artillery as Lieut. Turner, and that the money paid to Capt. Griffin was originally intended for his namesake the Lieutenant. A court of inquiry was instituted respecting Capt. Griffin's connection with the hoondee. He was fully acquitted of all blame.

Some little time after this a sick officer with a wounded right arm, passing Capt. Griffin's quarters in an exhausted state, on his way to the sick officers' quarters, and calling himself Capt. C. J. Erskine, of the 7th Light Cavalry, was invited by Capt. Griffin to take a chair in his verandah and a glass of wine. The stranger requested Capt. Griffin to write an order for some beer and wine for him at the nearest European shop. Capt. Griffin wrote the order in his own usual handwriting and signed it C. J. Erskine, Capt. 7th Light Cavalry.

The goods, after the stranger had left for the sick officers' quarters, were received at Captain Griffin's bungalow, and thence forwarded to the party for whom they were intended, and Captain Griffin thought no more of the matter. But after he had left Allahabad, and the stranger too had gone, without settling his bill, Capt. Griffin received an imperative demand for the money, accompanied by a pretty strong implication that he was a forger and a swindler. He simply replied that he had ordered the goods at Captain Erskine's request, but as Captain Erskine had not paid for them he held himself responsible that the amount owing should be paid, and it was paid. He then supposed this unpleasant business was closed. He was mistaken. Another unhappy and mysterious circumstance occurred. On the 4th of July—the year is not given—Captain Griffin left with Mr. Palmer, an East Indian trader at Allahabad, 2,000 rupees' worth of jewellery for sale. On the 3rd of August he wrote to say, "Should you have succeeded in getting any purchasers for the jewellery I should feel thankful by your letting me know." To this he received no answer. On the 5th of September he again wrote, and requested the return of the jewels if unsold. He now obtained a most insulting reply. Mr. Palmer insisted that the jewellery had been already returned to him, in the presence of Mr. O'Callaghan, a member of the firm. Captain Griffin on this wrote to Messrs. Middleton and Co., of Allahabad, to communicate with Mr. Palmer on the subject.

The reply to Mr. Middleton was, that in compliance with directions in a letter from Captain Griffin, the jewel case was handed to that officer's servant, who was standing outside. These are very inconsistent statements. Mr. Palmer told Mr. Middleton that if Captain Griffin should proceed by law against him, he would bring against him a counter charge of shoplifting! It was rumoured that a trader of the name of Eade had said that he once or twice missed articles from his shop, after a visit from Captain Griffin, but Mr. Eade himself positively denied that he had ever said anything of the kind. The jewellery affair was brought before the principal Sudder Ameen at Allahabad, who decided that both parties were to blame; Captain Griffin for not making earlier enquiries about his property, and Mr. Palmer for not seeing more carefully to the safe delivery of it. The defendant was ordered to pay half the value of the jewellery, and each party had to pay his own costs. We should not omit to mention that Mr. O'Callaghan, a partner or employee of Mr. Palmer, threatened Captain Griffin that if he proceeded against Mr. Palmer, he would send "the Erskine papers" (about the beer and brandy order) up to the Commander-in-Chief, but that if he dropped the jewellery affair, he would place those papers in Captain Griffin's own hands. The Captain spurned this offer with contempt, and proceeded, as we have seen, with his case against Mr. Palmer. Captain Griffin thought he recognised in Mr. O'Callaghan the soi-disant Lieutenant Turner, who obtained the watch from him. He brought him before the magistrate; but this was proved to be a case of mistaken identity. The mistake is accounted for by the fact that Mr. O'Callaghan, as was stated by a respectable and disinterested witness, was as like a Mr. Collier as one pea is to another. A watch in a morocco case was seen in this Mr. Collier's possession, which exactly tallied with the one sold by Captain Griffin. No attempt, however, as far as we know, was made to identify either Collier or the watch.

Captain Griffin was dismissed the service on the charge of "an attempt to defraud Messrs. Carr and Co. by a letter written in a forged hand, and bearing the fictitious signature of C. J. Erskine, Captain, 7th Light Cavalry." But the handwriting does not seem to have been forged, for it was at once recognised as Captain Griffin's by Mr. Carr. If he suspected roguery why did Mr. Carr supply the goods? The late famous Dr. Buist, a man of great talent, but somewhat eccentric, undertook the defence of Captain Griffin, but by his impetuosity and obstinacy seems to have done him more harm than good, for he positively refused to comply with the urgent entreaties of a well-wisher of Captain Griffin to produce more than two respectable witnesses in his favour, because, in his opinion, the charge was too frivolous to require an elaborate refutation. When it was too late to be available stronger testimony was produced. Captain Griffin has repeatedly and most urgently petitioned for a new trial, and has made successive representations of his grievance to governors and commanders-in-chief, and always without success. He has now appealed to the public. His case is certainly a very complicated and a very curious one. Even the Bengal Hurkaru's kindly-meant and able statement of it leaves such doubts and difficulties that we are quite at a loss to decide whether Captain Griffin's present unhappy condition is to be regarded as his fault or his misfortune; and in either case there is something to excite both wonder and curiosity.

We thought we should have been able to state this case in fewer words, but we find that we must plagiarise the apology of the Frenchman who justified the great length of his epistle by pleading want of time to write a shorter one.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE LATE MR. LONGUEVILLE CLARKE.
TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your paper of the 4th of August I observe a paragraph in your leading article concerning a subscription for the orphan daughter of my late father-in-law, Longueville Clarke, the eminent barrister in Calcutta. Your own good sense will show you the necessity of giving the same publicity to this letter, when you know that Mrs. Longueville Clarke is alive, and her son and two daughters are amply provided for.—Yours truly,

R. N. FORSYTH BROWN.

Junior United Service Club, Oct. 8, 1863.

[We gave the authority of the Bengal Hurkaru of July 25, 1863, for our statement that "Sir Mordaunt Wells had led off a public subscription for Longueville Clarke's eldest daughter's benefit with 500 rupees, and that his noble example had been followed by other members of the bench and bar." If this be all a dream, and no movement of the sort has taken place in the City of Palaces, it is at least no fault of ours. We merely told the tale to the British public as our brother editor had told it before us to the British Indian community; and we cannot help thinking that our contemporary is more likely to know what has taken place there than any one located in London, however close his relationship or connection with the party chiefly concerned. We have heard from many quarters that Longueville Clarke died poor, though his professional income was large; for he was of a most liberal disposition, and his purse was ever open at the call of public or private charity, and he kept up to the last the princely hospitality which was so characteristic of Anglo-Indian society in his younger days. We were aware that Mrs. Longueville Clarke was still alive—at least we had never heard a rumour of her death. In conclusion, we have only to say that we are very happy indeed to learn from Mr. Brown that the late Longueville Clarke's eldest daughter has been "amply provided for," and stands in no need whatever of the subscription which is reported by the press of Calcutta to have been raised there for her benefit.—ED.]

CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

On Tuesday last an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders was held at the offices of the company, Gresham-street, "to authorise the borrowing of money on the bonds or debentures of the company."

The chairman stated that the excess of expenditure over receipts from the commencement was £766, the returns covering about six weeks.

A letter of the board to Sir C. Wood was read by the secretary, from which it appeared that the amount already advanced by the Government exceeded the capital by £31,500, and in it power was sought to raise £100,000 on debentures. In the reply, which was also read, authority was given by the Secretary of State to raise £100,000 in inconvertible debentures at 4½ per cent.

The chairman then proposed a resolution authorising the borrowing of £100,000 at a rate not exceeding 5 per cent. for a period of seven years, which, he observed, would increase the capital to £500,000. The line in its present state would yield no revenue at all. There were no stations, and no means of working the line; and hence, without further capital, there would be no return for the £400,000 laid out.

The resolution was carried unanimously, and the meeting terminated in the usual manner.

INDIAN CARRYING COMPANY.

The third ordinary meeting of this company was held on Monday, the 5th inst., at the London Tavern; Sir Macdonald Stephenson in the chair.

Mr. W. Thompson, the secretary, read the notice convening the meeting. The report stated that the operations of the past year had, on the whole, been attended with a satisfactory result. Owing altogether to the injudicious proceedings of the late manager at Bombay, a loss had been sustained on the working in that Presidency, but the directors had more than ever reason to believe that under the change made in the local management a profitable course of business would be opened. Mr. Bates, the Madras manager, whose operations had shown great ability and had been attended with signal success, had been directed to visit Bombay for the purpose of assisting by his advice in the reorganisation of the company's business there. The business in the Madras Presidency had shown a steady improvement from the commencement. The reports received from the manager at Calcutta continued most encouraging as to the prospects of the company. The result of the few months' operations, although the accounts did not show a profit, was satisfactory. As soon as the system was brought into operation the receipts rose from £98 in the month of January to £1,431 in the month of February. The expense which had been incurred in the hire of carts was now being diminished by the substitution of the company's own vehicles. The Bengal Government being about to discontinue their bullock trains, had notified their readiness to enter into contracts for the work hitherto done by them, and a tender on the part of the company had accordingly been sent in. It was well understood that the Government would, on favourable terms, make over to the parties contracting the plant necessary for carrying on the work. The revenue account showed a balance of profit of £2,008, of which the directors recommended that £750 should be appropriated to the payment of a dividend for the half-year ending the 30th of June last at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. The capital account showed that £25,000 had been received, and £13,610 expended, leaving a balance of £11,390. The revenue account for the year ending June 30 showed that £24,405 had been received, and £22,397 expended, leaving a balance of £2,008.

The Chairman said that a dividend earned from revenue of 3 per cent. for the half-year would furnish the best commentary upon the text of the report. The company's operations had been but recently undertaken, and the usual incidence had occurred—partial success and partial failure, the former of a nature to afford grounds to hope for its continuance and increase, the latter being sufficiently explained by the want of judgment in a particular agency which had since been remodelled. The principles on which the company had proceeded, of endeavouring to act with rather than against existing associations, had been appreciated, and enabled the directors to secure the goodwill and co-operation of others engaged in the same pursuit. They had proceeded cautiously, and were enabled, notwithstanding losses from causes they had no reason to anticipate, to recommend a dividend upon the result of the half-year's working. The company had advantages over other parties in India of capital and systematic organisation, with officers specially trained in the great carrying establishment of this country and selected for their high qualifications. Those gentlemen had, as a body, fully justified the expectations of the board, and the shareholders might rely upon their interest being safe in their hands. He concluded by moving that the report and accounts be approved and adopted, and that a dividend be declared at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, free of Income-tax, for the half-year ending the 30th of June, payable on and after the 19th inst.

Mr. W. Hartridge seconded the motion, and it was carried unanimously.

On the motion of Captain J. A. Angus, seconded by the Rev. H. Waldron, Mr. J. E. Coleman, and Mr. G. Engstrom, the retiring auditors were re-elected, with an allowance of ten guineas each.

The proceedings concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman and directors.

CAREER OF AN EAST INDIAN.

Thomas La Blanc, a gentleman of colour, about twenty-five years of age, by profession a surgeon, and who is connected with highly respectable families in India, was brought up on remand before Mr. Partridge, at Thames-street Police-court, on the 30th ult., charged with stealing a coat valued at £1.16s., the property of Mr. T. Hodgson, a master mariner, of No. 9, Montague-place, Poplar.

The prisoner, who is a native of Calcutta and an accomplished scholar, arrived in England about ten months ago, furnished with £600, and with the highest testimonials of character and ability. His original intention was to matriculate at Edinburgh, but he never reached that city. In nine months he squandered the whole of the £600 he brought to England, and, in addition, all the money he could raise on his personal effects, including his gold watch and chain, which he pawned for £5. For the last few months he has been living at various places, and obtaining goods and money by false pretences. He gave an order for a pair of side-spring boots to Mr. Hort, a shoemaker, who sent them to his lodgings; and, in the absence of Mr. Hort, he called at the shop, said the boots that were sent to his home were not large enough, and obtained another pair. He has not paid for either. Mr. Partridge decided that in Mr. Hort's case no felony had been committed, and he must sue the prisoner in the county court, if he thought it worth while to do so. About three weeks since the prisoner had an apartment in the house of Mr. Hodgson, to whom he represented that he was about to return to Calcutta, and expected a remittance from his relatives daily. Mr. Hodgson lent the prisoner a monkey-jacket and a shirt while he was staying with him. On Monday the 7th ult., the prisoner quitted Mr. Hodgson's house without notice. The shirt he had borrowed was left behind, but he took with him the jacket which his landlord was kind enough to lend him, and also took away a coat. On the 13th of September, the prisoner called at the Strangers' Home for Asiatics, in the West India-road, Limehouse, and begged a night's lodging. He remained in the Home until Thursday last; and Lieut.-Col. R. Marsh Hughes, the secretary of the Institution, took some interest in his welfare, and intended to raise the necessary funds, if possible, to enable him to pay for his passage in a ship bound to Calcutta. The prisoner wrote to Sir Frederick Halliday, of Welchpool, while he was in the Home, and that gentleman, hearing that he was destitute, forwarded him £2. On Thursday Mr. Hodgson gave the prisoner into custody for stealing his coat. On the way to the station-house the prisoner admitted to Abbott, 322 K., that he stole the coat and pawned it at a shop near London-bridge, but he did not know the name of the street. Abbott, while making inquiries about the prisoner, ascertained that he had lodged for two or three days in the dwelling of a respectable woman in New Rutland-street, near the London Hospital. He left there suddenly and without notice, and directly after he was gone a suit of clothes, valued at £5, was missing. Abbott obtained twelve pawnbrokers' duplicates, all relating to wearing apparel, from Mr. George Dancock, a coffee-house keeper of No. 29, King David-lane, Shadwell. On the night of Saturday Sept. 12, the prisoner had a bed in Mr. Dancock's house, and said he was a doctor of medicine, and was going out to India as a surgeon-superintendent of a passenger ship. The prisoner slept in the house that night, remained there the whole of the following day, and went to bed. Mr. Dancock, not feeling satisfied with his guest, asked him for a settlement. The prisoner jumped out of bed, and handed to Mr. Dancock a breast-pin, which he said was a gold one, and worth £1. Mr. Dancock took the pin to a jeweller, who said it was a brass one and not worth 3d. Mr. Dancock, on his return to his house, took the prisoner's coat and waistcoat, and said he should keep them until his bill was paid. The pockets of the waistcoat contained the round lid of a tin box wrapped up in paper to represent a watch, and twelve duplicates. Mr. Dancock restored the prisoner his coat and detained the waistcoat and the duplicates. The prisoner left the coffee-house on the night of the 13th, and then proceeded to the Strangers' Home.

The prisoner in defence said the twelve pawnbrokers' duplicates referred to property of his own, and that he did not steal Mr. Hodgson's coat. He asked Mr. Hodgson if he had not treated him surgically, to which the prosecutor replied in the negative. In answer to another question, he admitted that Mr. La Blanc accompanied him to a druggist's shop and prescribed for him.

Mr. Partridge committed the prisoner for trial. He was tried before Mr. Payne last week at the Middlesex Sessions on the above charge.

The prosecutor said: I live at No. 9, Montague-place, Poplar, and am a carman. I know the prisoner; he is a surgeon, and lived with me a week. I have lost a coat and a white shirt. The prisoner used the same bed-room as myself. The shirt and coat were hanging behind the door on Sunday, the 13th of September, and on the 15th I missed them; the prisoner having left on the 14th, but he never returned. I spoke to a policeman with reference to the thief; and it was not until the 23rd of last month that I saw anything of the prisoner. I spoke to him, and he said he had pawned it at a shop near London-bridge. I told him that I had no objection to lend him a coat, and a monkey-jacket was lent. The prisoner was told he would not be allowed to wear the coat in question. The coat I promised him I afterwards lent. Having got it he decamped.

The prisoner, when called upon for his defence, read a long statement, complaining of the conduct of the prosecutor.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty, but they were divided as to the recommendation to mercy.

Mr. Payne said he would take that into consideration.

Police-constable Abbott said he had been to a coffee-house, where the prisoner lodged, and he there found several pawn-tickets relating to some property.

James Sands said he was a tailor, residing at 17, Holborn-bars. The prisoner was recommended to him as a medical student from Radley's Hotel. The accused gave an order for two coats, a waistcoat, and a pair of trousers. Immediately the goods were in the possession of the prisoner he decamped. Witness had not recovered the money or goods.

James Rawkins, hosiery and glover, said that on the 10th of July of the present year, the prisoner was introduced to him by a Dr. Sanger. The prisoner ordered goods to the amount of £12, and said that he had a £200 bill due, and that he would pay for the clothes when he received the money. The clothes were delivered to him, he went away, and was not seen afterwards.

Ellen Foreman said the prisoner engaged lodgings at her house on the 18th of August last. The engagement was for three months. He agreed to pay 35s. per week. He went away, and left witness £2. 9s. 3d. in debt.

Mr. Payne, in passing sentence, said that these persons had been brought forward merely to prove the character of the prisoner, and it would not interfere with the particulars of the present case.

A police constable proved a conviction.

Mr. Payne sentenced the prisoner to be kept in penal servitude for three years, and said that it was one of the worst cases of larceny.

MISCELLANEOUS.

APPOINTMENTS.—(Foreign-office, Oct. 10.)—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. Edward van Cutsem as Consul at Calcutta for his Majesty the King of the Netherlands. The Queen has also been pleased to approve of Mr. A. Havenith as Consul at Bombay for his Majesty the King of the Belgians.

MUNIFICENT GIFT.—An eminent Parsee merchant firm in the City of London has presented a sum of £2,000 to the Royal National Lifeboat Association, through its chairman, Thomas Baring, Esq., M.P., to enable it to form a lifeboat establishment on the English coast, and permanently to uphold it.

THE CRAWLEY COURT-MARTIAL.—Lieut.-Colonel Crawley has arrived in London, and has reported himself at the Horse Guards. The whole of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men ordered home have arrived in England. The trial, we believe, we may now confidently state, will take place at Chelsea Hospital, and in all probability in November next. As little delay as possible is contemplated on the part of the authorities, as the expense is likely to make rather a formidable item in this year's accounts—£50,000 has already been mentioned as the probable cost of this trial.—United Service Gazette.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for Rs. 40,00,000 (£400,000) in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 7th inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were:—To Calcutta, Rs. 23,00,000; to Bombay, Rs. 16,00,000; and to Madras, Rs. 2,00,000. The minimum price declared was, as before, 1s. 11½d. per rupee on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 11¼d. on Bombay. The applications within the limits amounted to 121 lacs. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 14 per cent.; on Bombay at 2s., about 68 per cent.; on Madras at 1s. 11½d., about 63 per cent.; and all above these prices in full.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, CHINA, AND AUSTRALIA.—At a meeting of the shareholders in the Chartered Bank of India, China, and Australia, held on Wednesday, the 7th inst., in the London Tavern, Mr. Mitchell, M.P., in the chair, an interim dividend was declared at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, or 5 per cent. for the half-year ended 30th June last, free of income-tax, and payable on and after the 14th instant. The chairman congratulated the proprietors on the general prosperity of the bank. They had carried forward from the previous half-year £4,308 of undivided profits, and the earnings of the half-year ended 30th June last amounted to £51,559, being at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum. These two sums made, in round numbers, £56,000. The dividend would absorb a sum of £32,200, leaving £23,800 to be carried forward, and ultimately to be absorbed in a reserve fund.

WRECK OF THE GIPSY BRIDE.—A letter has been received at Lloyd's addressed to Earl Russell, from Mr. Farren, Consul at Manila, stating that the ship, Gipsy Bride, Mr. Murphy master, on her voyage from Hong Kong to Singapore, struck upon the N.E. point of the Scarborough reef of rocks during obscure weather, which had lasted for several days. The vessel settled down upon the rocks, and the crew were under the necessity of leaving her. One boat arrived at Manila on the 25th ult. with the mate and carpenter and four Lascars, and on the 28th another boat reached Manila with eight Lascars; two more boats have since arrived at Manila with Lascars, but the master's boat and a sixth boat had not since been heard of.

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY.—A meeting of the proprietors of the Oriental Inland Steam Company was held at the London Tavern on Thursday, the 9th inst., for the purpose of considering the general and financial condition of their affairs. The chairman (Colonel Grimes) said that the paid-up capital amounted to £345,000, which was increased by a loan of £50,000 from the bankers to about £400,000. The general assets amounted to £290,000 or £300,000. The loss recently sustained was attributable partly to the unsuccessful attempt to navigate the Sutlej and partly to the great reduction of freights arising from the American war. In order to enable the company to meet its difficulties and work successfully, the following steps were proposed by the directors:—First, to transfer two, at least, of the company's steamers, the Soane and the Gogra, together with four or five barges, from the Ganges to the Indus, which might be done without risk in February. Secondly, to sell on the most favourable terms that could be obtained, the remaining vessels of the company, and to close as soon as possible the Calcutta agency. For these purposes, however, it was necessary to pay off the loan of £50,000 from the bankers. The shareholders were asked to assent to a proposal to issue preference shares. It was proposed to issue at once 6,500 £10 preference shares, which would raise £65,000, reserving 3,500 to be hereafter apportioned. Mr. Besemere, a director, moved, and Colonel Bush seconded, a resolution to the effect that it is expedient to issue the unallotted and forfeited shares to the company as preference shares, and that the preferential dividend to be attached to these shares shall not exceed 8 per cent. After some discussion respecting the rate of dividend, Mr. Taylor proposed a committee to inquire into the condition and prospects of the company. The amendment was negatived, and the original motion carried.

INDIGO SALES.—The periodical public sales of indigo were commenced on the 13th inst., and the quantity to be offered consists of 12,353 chests. The competition for the better descriptions was rather spirited, and the rates realised were fully equal to those of last sales, while in some qualities there was an advance of 3d. to 4d. per pound. 1,051 chests posted, of which 839 were sold, 98 bought in, and 114 withdrawn.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The steamer Delta, which left on the 12th inst., took out £276,800 in specie, of which £184,250 is in silver, for Bombay, and £52,550 gold. The remainder, £40,000 in gold, is consigned to Alexandria.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The circular from the Horse Guards, received by the last mail, permitting those officers of the old Bengal Army now in the new Line regiments who might feel so disposed to return to local corps, has created very considerable sensation. No fewer than eleven subalterns of the 107th Regiment have already elected to revert to their former status; and one captain at least, if not more, may follow suit.—We hear it confidently stated, by parties supposed to have the best information on the subject, that the new scale of staff pay of officers attached to native regiments, the brigade, and general staff, &c., has been some time in Calcutta. Its non-publication as yet, we think, augurs well that "reduction" has not been exercised by the home authorities, for, had it been, it is most probable the measure would have been communicated to the army with the least possible delay.—We regret to learn that Ensign Brooke, of H.M.'s 48th Regiment, while out shooting near the camp at Murria, met with a severe accident. Having wounded a deer, he was mounting his horse to give chase, when the animal took fright, and bolted off before he was well in the saddle, throwing him heavily to the ground. He sustained dislocation of an ankle, and simple fracture of the leg, and was immediately brought into cantonments, where he is doing well.—Oudh Gazette.

BHOOTAN.—It has often been intended, but at last, we believe, it has been determined, that the Hon. A. Eden shall visit Bhootan on a political mission in the cold weather. This mission has been too long postponed, and the insolence of the Bhootas, with the present state of Cooch, Behar and Assam, demands that it be imposing.—Friend of India, Sept. 3.

CAPTAIN J. H. M. SHAW STEWARD, now on sick leave in Europe, will, we understand, be the new Deputy Secretary to Government in the Public Works Department. Until he returns Lieut. Wood will be appointed to act.—Madras Times.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVED METHOD in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all accretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

TEMPORARY OFFICES—69, LOMBARD-STREET.

The system of Land Credit, or "Crédit Foncier," has now been established in many of the chief countries of Europe, with the uniform result of large profit to the Companies engaged in it, and great benefit to the holders of land. The principle of all these associations is the same—viz., the intervention of a Company whose large subscribed Capital, and consequent credit, enable it to borrow money to the best advantage, as an intermediary between individual lenders who seek investments on mortgage, and borrowers who seek for loans.

Thus, the French Crédit Foncier has a large Share Capital, of which only half is paid up, and is authorised by its statutes to issue its own Bonds against an equal amount lent on mortgage, with a Sinking Fund for redemption, on first-class landed security. The security to the Bondholder under these circumstances is ample, represented as it is by the whole unpaid-up Capital of the Company, and all its investments and assets, while the profit to the Shareholders, being the profit on the employment of a large Capital distributed in dividend over a small paid-up Capital, is so great, that with £10 paid up, the £20 Shares of the French Crédit Foncier stand at a market value of upwards of £50.

The present Company is formed in the belief that, on the one hand, it will be very profitable to the Shareholders, and, on the other, most beneficial to India. It is obvious that our Indian territories present an unrivalled field for a Company of this description. Land there is rising in value with a rapidity quite unexampled, and the fixing of tenures, the improvement of laws, and the opening of communications, are fast creating an ease and certainty in dealing with it equal to those enjoyed in any country of Europe. At the same time Capital is scarce, and the rate of Interest extravagantly high, as compared with any European standard.

In Bengal, where, in the first instance, the operations of the Company will be principally directed, land is held upon a Zemindary tenure, which may be described as conferring the fee-simple of the land in perpetuity, held direct from the Crown, on the condition of paying a fixed annual quit rent, which is always moderate, in comparison with the value of the Estates. An accurate and simple system of registration precludes doubt and dispute concerning the title to Estates, and the first mortgage on the register takes precedence of all other claims. The principle of a permanent settlement has been adopted by the Government, and will doubtless be shortly extended to the other Provinces of India.

The land included in the Lower Bengal system is estimated at a value of more than One Hundred Millions Sterling, and by the establishment of railways, the operation of irrigation works, and the general extension of Indian trade and industry, it will be doubled and trebled within a moderate number of years. Of these Estates a very large proportion are at present under advances from local money-lenders, at a rate of 12 per cent. interest, besides incidental bonuses, and upon other conditions, that are alike unfavourable to their owners and to the community at large.

With prudent management the results of an Indian Crédit Foncier can hardly fail to be even more successful than in France, considering the wide margin between the rates of interest at which money can be borrowed in England and lent in India.

The field for operations in India is practically unlimited, and in no country of the world are all the elements of national prosperity, including the value of land, in a state of such rapid development. The Revenue of the State has risen in ten years from £28,500,000 to £43,125,000 a-year; and the aggregate Import and Export Trade during the same period has more than doubled, and last year reached the enormous total of £100,000,000, including bullion. During the same period £60,000,000 of English Capital has been invested in Railways in India, which are now approaching completion, and will greatly accelerate the march of prosperity.

The benefit to India of obtaining Capital on landed security on reasonable terms, and emancipating the native land-proprietors from an exclusive dependence on native money-lenders, will be incalculable; and this benefit will be specially felt at a time when the prosperity of the country, the completion of roads and railways, the sale of waste lands, the extension of the permanent settlement, the introduction of an improved currency, and, generally, the adoption of a wise and liberal system of Government, are giving everywhere a rapid impulse to improvement.

OBJECTS.—The Company will be prepared to grant Loans on land, either for fixed periods, or upon terms that will extinguish the debt during the currency of the mortgage, by the payment of an annual instalment on account of the principal, in addition to the annual interest, thus conferring on the borrowers the benefit of an eventual liquidation of their debts.

CAPITAL.—The present Capital is fixed at £2,000,000 sterling, of which £2 per Share is payable upon allotment. It is not the intention of the Directors to call up more than a small proportion of the Share Capital in all, as the successful conduct of a business of this description is chiefly through borrowed Capital.

BORROWING POWERS.—As a means to make the advances on the extended scale contemplated, the Company will issue Debentures for fixed periods, and bearing a fixed rate of interest, payable half-yearly in this country; and in order to give the holders of such Debentures undoubted security, they will have a lien on the entire property of the Company, consisting first of the whole of the Estates held on mortgage, and next exceeding in value the total of its liabilities; and, secondly, of the assets of the Company, in which its paid-up Capital is invested, together with its large reserve of unclaimed Capital. The transactions of the Company will be conducted free from all speculation or purchase on their own account, and may be regarded as partaking of the nature of a Commission Agency between the European lender and the Indian borrower, opening to the latter a command of Capital limited only to the value and security his Estates afford.

PROFITS.—The profits of a well-conducted business of this description, in such a field for operations as India, may be tested by a comparison with the results realised by the French Crédit Foncier and other similar undertakings both abroad and at home. The institution named is limited by its statutes to lend at 5 per cent. interest, and it has to pay more than 1 per cent. interest on money raised on its debentures. The margin of profit is, therefore, very small. Nevertheless, the French Company pays a dividend of 16 per cent. per annum, carrying a further sum equal to 7 per cent. to reserve. In India the margin of profit between the rate at which the money is borrowed and the rate at which it is lent, will certainly not be less than 3 per cent., so that each £1,000,000 borrowed in England, and loaned in India, will give £30,000 a-year towards dividend on the Share Capital, of which it is not probable that more than £500,000 out of the £2,000,000 will be called up.

MANAGEMENT IN INDIA.—Arrangements have been made with the above three leading firms to act as Agents in India, so as to enable the Company to commence business without unnecessary delay.

75,000 Shares have been subscribed for privately, and the remaining 25,000 Shares are reserved for public subscription. Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association, lie for inspection at the Office of the Solicitors, Messrs. FRESHFIELDS and NEWMAN, 5, Bank-building, Lothbury, and at the Temporary Offices of the Company.

Applications to be made in the subjoined form, to the Temporary Offices of the Company, 69, Lombard-street; or to the Offices of the GENERAL CREDIT AND FINANCE COMPANY OF LONDON (Limited), 90, Cannon-street.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulence, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

ORALUM SILEX, an entirely new substance for ARTIFICIAL TEETH, which will neither discolour nor decay, remaining firm in the mouth, from one to a complete act, without springs, wires, or any visible attachment. It gives the greatest support to all loose or tender teeth, and answers most perfectly the purposes of mastication and articulation. No painful operation required. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, &c. At home from eleven till four. No connection with any person in the same profession.—No. 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—The greatest and most useful invention of the day, AQUA AMARELLA.—Messrs JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King-court, Lombard-street, Perfumers to her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age. The Aqua Amarella has none of the properties of dye; it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea per bottle.

BLAIR'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC PILLS.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the Gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated, by unobscured testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part. Sold at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box, by all Medicine Vendors.

C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times, C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Milner, Price, Mordan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-

SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. When combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial. It is prepared (in a state of perfect purity and of uniform strength) by DINNEFORD and Co., 173, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—HALE CONSTITU-

TION.—When the human frame has become debilitated from the effect of exposure, excesses, or neglect, these Pills will repair the mischief, if they be taken according to the lucid directions wrapped round each box. Holloway's Pills exert the most exemplary tonic qualities in all cases of nervous depression, whereby the vital powers are weakened, and the circulation is rendered languid and unsteady. They improve the appetite, strengthen the digestion, regulate the liver, and act as gentle aperients. These Pills are suited to all ages and all habits. A patient writes:—"Your Pills, to be valued, require only to be known. During many years, I sought a remedy in vain, was daily becoming weaker, when your Pills soon restored me."

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 19th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China, the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Viceroy leaves Simla on or about the 25th instant; Lady Elgin and Lady Louisa Bruce, with his physician and private secretary, accompany him. His lordship proceeds to Narcunda, Rampoor, Kuloo, and up the Kangra valley to Sealkote, where he will be joined by his camp. The camp is now being formed at Kalka, from which point it will start on the 1st of October. At Sealkote his lordship will hold a durban, and then march on to Peshawur, where he will be joined by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

The army head-quarters camp is to be formed at Kalka in the beginning of November, and to proceed thence, on the 15th, via Buddee and Loodianah, to Lahore.

His Excellency, attended by Captain Moore, Persian interpreter, and Captain Burne, will start for Cashmere on the 1st of October, and meet Lord Elgin at Peshawur in December. From thence he will go to Meean Meer, where the head-quarter camp will remain about three months, which, it is supposed, will be long enough to produce a wholesome effect upon the temper of the Affghans.

Affghanistan continues in a state of anarchy and confusion. The latest advices from Cabool are up to the 4th September. It is stated that Ameer Shere Allee Khan, on reaching the neighbourhood of Ghuznee, sent a message by certain of the chiefs to his brother, Auzim Khan, to persuade him to come to terms. He was disappointed, however, at the result; for Auzim Khan replied that if the Ameer was really desirous of making terms he should come attended with a very small retinue and discuss the business personally. This would seem to be the old Affghanian trick. Notwithstanding, the Ameer did trust himself with Auzim Khan. It is further stated that he remained with Auzim Khan one night, and that terms of peace were settled and a good understanding established. This, however, wants confirmation.

Orders have been issued to stop all leave of absence to officers of corps stationed in the Punjab for the present, owing to the disaffected state of the frontier.

Central Asia continues in a very disturbed state. It is stated that the Ameer Shere Allee

Khan has gone to the fort of his inimical brother, Auzim Khan, at the request of the latter, to discuss with him the terms of peace. If this latest intelligence of him be true it will probably be the end of his reign and of himself.

The Governor of Bombay is still at Poona, where his Legislative Council is still holding its meetings.

Captain George Hare, at Ellichpoor, was shot dead at the mess-house at that station. At the same place the wife of Captain Macquoid, of the 5th Infantry, Hyderabad Contingent, was severely wounded with a sword by a discharged khasamah, or table attendant, who, while endeavouring to escape, was killed by Captain Woodcock. Mrs. Macquoid was reported to be doing well.

The Rev. S. Hyslop or Hislop (for his name is differently spelt in different papers) rode or fell into a stream in the Nagpore district, and was drowned, on the 4th ultimo. Mr. Hyslop was a Free Church missionary, and seems to have been distinguished by great zeal and activity, and for large scholarly acquirements.

The Metropolitan of India has yet pronounced no judgment on the Colenso controversy, but a Calcutta religious journal of old standing and some authority—the Christian Intelligencer—has an article on the subject at once candid and severe. The writer of the article admits that Dr. Colenso is an able man, and that the third part of his book is an improvement on its predecessors, and is remarkable for "comparative moderation, calmness, and freedom from railing," and that these qualities "are likely to make a considerable impression on the laity who detest theological rancour, and always sympathize with a person who seems to act with fairness and dignity after he has been vehemently, even though justly attacked." The writer also objects to the conduct of the Bishop of Manchester, who "enunciated the utterly untenable proposition" that all our hopes and the very foundation of our faith are taken from us if one line of the Bible be declared to be unfaithful or untrustworthy." The sceptical Colenso is then very fairly dealt with, and many of his arguments very cleverly demolished.

We find the following in the Delhi Gazette of Sept. 15:—"We regret to learn, by a letter from Lahore, of the untimely death of Mr.

Talbot, the postmaster of that station. He was travelling along the Grand Trunk Road, near Rawul Pindie, he outside and Mrs. Talbot inside the carriage, when by some cause as yet unknown, as the news is telegraphic, he was thrown off the carriage, and died within a few hours of the occurrence of the accident. Mrs. Talbot escaped unhurt."

The fluctuations in the quotations of Madras bank shares are at present very remarkable, and we draw the attention of our readers to the circumstance.

Sir William Denison is at Cossoor, about twenty-five miles from Bangalore.

The reported Nana turns out to be gooroo, or high priest of the Mahrattas. He subsists entirely on milk.

The same paper (Delhi Gazette) gives the following:—"A very distressing accident has occurred at Nynee Tal. A young lady, Miss Young, we believe, was her name, was out riding the other evening, and coming home by one of the roads which overhang the lake, her party somehow reached home in advance of her, and did not at first observe that she was not with them. By-and-bye her horse made its appearance riderless. Search was then made, and after some time the young lady's body was found in the lake among the weeds."

It has been communicated to the several Presidential Governments that the House of Lords has reversed the judgment of the Master of the Rolls in the matter of Lord Clive's fund, and has ruled that the contingency specified in the deed constituting the fund, in the event of which the sum of Sicca Rs. 5,00,000 should be returned to Lord Clive or to his executors, has happened by the passing of the Act 21 and 22 Vict., c. 106. In future, therefore, all persons who would have been entitled to pensions from that fund will be admitted to an equivalent rate of pension without reference to the name of Lord Clive.

In future officers sent on voyages in steam vessels at the public expense will be reimbursed the actual charges of the steam companies, with deduction of table money according to rank for a fixed number of days for each voyage.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Via Suez.)

HOSTILITIES IN JAPAN.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 4.

News has been received here of the arrival of Admiral Kuper with the fleet at Kagosima. Negotiations failing, the admiral besieged and levelled the city, and fired Prince Satsuma's three steamers. The fleet then returned to Yokohama.

Captain Josling and Commander Wiltrot (?) were killed in the engagement.

FOREIGN OFFICE, Oct. 20.

The following telegram, dated Cairo, Oct. 19, 3.40 P.M., has been received from her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt:—

JAPAN NEWS BY THE "MOOLTAN."

SATURDAY, Aug. 15.

All hope of negotiations being at an end, the fleet took up its position opposite Kayosima, and prepared for action.

Two shore batteries opened fire on the fleet, which returned it.

By dusk the town was in flames in several places.

Three forts were silenced.

Our loss consisted of 11 killed and 39 wounded.

Captains Gosling (of the Euryalus) and Wilmot were killed.

9 P.M.—The whole town is in flames.

SUNDAY, Aug. 16.

The fleet stood out, engaging the whole of the batteries. The city is one mass of ruins—palace, factories, arsenal, &c.

Three steamers of Satsuma are destroyed completely.

The shore batteries are reported to have been well served.

BENGAL.

A STRANGE STORY.

We are compelled this morning to relate a "strange story," such as even the fertile imagination of Bulwer himself could hardly have conceived as possible in any modern English community and in connection with a service which boasts itself, and with justice, as one of the best bred and most highly educated in the world.

On a certain day in January last a young gentleman introduced himself to the editor of this journal in his own office, and in a somewhat confused manner gave the editor to understand that the tenor of the Englishman's opinions regarding the Junior Civil Service, generally called competition-wallahs, was offensive to the young gentleman, who was one of the maligned body. He had no specific complaint to make, but on general grounds, he having then been nearly two months landed, felt himself called upon to put himself forward as the champion of the Civil Service; and, in short, he demanded of the editor "the satisfaction of a gentleman." The absurdity of the whole thing was so strong that the editor treated the young fire-eater with such consideration as the circumstances admitted of, and dismissed him with a mild intimation that as he had come on his foolish errand alone no notice would be taken of his folly. The manner of his dismissal, however, was witnessed by a gentleman in the sub-editor's office through which he had to pass, and so the matter was no secret; but no such notice was ever publicly taken of the affair as could have led to any identification of the principal performer in the farce, and the editor forgot the whole business. Lately continued ill health has, however, compelled him to live at Barrackpore, coming in to office each morning, when well enough, by the railway. On Saturday last he recognised among his fellow-passengers in the carriage the same person, but no sort of notice was taken by either whilst in the train. On getting out, however, having been delayed by gathering up a lot of loose papers and books, the editor was addressed by name by this Mr. Arthur Lloyd Clay, who proceeded to deliver himself of a rigmorole strangely mingling the styles of Bombastes and Dundreary—recalling the circumstances of the former interview, alleging that a false account of that interview had been published, repeating that the service he had the honour to represent had been slandered, and declaring that if the editor would not give him the satisfaction of a gentleman he must be dealt with otherwise. The editor—who had somewhat mistaken his man,—supposing he had to do with a foolish and hot-headed, but withal, high-minded youth,—kept his temper, and waited patiently till the youngster should have run his oration off the reel. But suddenly the excited speaker broke short off with the exclamation, "I tell you you are a liar!" and hit out with his left, right at the face of his listener, who with both hands down and filled with papers was taken so utterly by surprise that he could not escape the blow, which cut his mouth rather severely. Dropping his impedimenta, and throwing away the light cane he had in his hand, the Editor closed with his assailant, and stopped any further such favours until, with most unusual promptitude, the railway officials rushed up and put an end to the unseemly affray. Whether as a journalist in the exercise of his public duty, or as one holding the Commission of the Peace, he cannot descend to the level of any fool or blackguard who may choose to attack him at a railway station, and but one course was left to him. He abstained from giving his assailant into custody on the spot, but proceeded to the Sealdah Police Court and caused a summons to be issued, and the case would have had to have been heard before the Native Deputy Magistrate this morning. But yesterday afternoon he received the following letter:—

"CALCUTTA, Sept. 14, 1863.

"SIR,—Having considered the matter, I am willing to acknowledge that my conduct towards you on Saturday last was wrong and unjustifiable. I wish to make the only reparation that lies in my power, and therefore write to express my regret for what has occurred, and to tender an apology for the personal outrage which I permitted myself to commit.

"An answer per bearer will oblige yours,

"W. Brett, Esq., Englishman office."

There are considerations which have induced Mr. Brett to accept this apology, and to stay further proceedings against the writer of it, who could scarcely have suffered greater punishment than in the pain and disgrace of having to pen such a letter. And here we leave this very unsatisfactory affair, and have done with the personal question, though we shall have occasion to say something on subjects arising out of it—Englishman, Sept. 15.

Mr. Arthur Lloyd Clay, the young civilian who assaulted the editor of the Englishman at the Sealdah Station on Saturday morning last, has had the good sense and discretion to apologise for his unmanly and ungentlemanly conduct.

As this apology has been accepted, there is nothing more to be said on the subject, so far as Mr. Clay himself is personally concerned. It is much to be desired, however, that the publicity given to this affair may have the effect of deterring other hot-blooded youths from acting in a manner that belongs to a past generation. No man in England who wishes to be considered a fit associate for the "gentles" of the land, would now-a-days have recourse to physical force save in self-defence against a garrotter or a rowdy. We are not quite certain, however, that the same indication of an improved tone of honour and of the humanising influences of a genuine civilisation is to be found in the City of Palaces. Many young men in this country appear to be under the impression that the Waterford-cum-Waldegrove era is not yet concluded, and seem to forget that an interval, as of an entire century, separates the present generation des gens comme il faut from the days—and nights—of the old Vauxhall Gardens, Lowther Rooms, and Cider Cellars. The sooner they discover their error the better will it be for their own credit and happiness, and the more conducive to the efficient discharge of their respective duties.

There is another point to which we would briefly refer, though of a somewhat personal nature. What will they say in England of an assault upon the editor of a daily paper by an aspirant to the rank of a ruler of the land? In America, where an editor can commence a leading article with the half-jubilant exclamation, "Cow-hided again!" such an outrage may not be regarded as anything very exceptional or monstrous; but in England it will certainly be quoted as another proof of the comparatively low and semi-barbarous tone of Anglo-Indian society. Undoubtedly it is a proof of the weakness of public opinion and of the absence of all real freedom of discussion. At home any one who feels himself aggrieved, either as regards himself or his order, is content to fight his opponent with his own weapons, and handles his pen with whatever grace and force he may master, confiding in the impartiality of public opinion, the dread tribunal before which peasant and peer must alike bow their diminished heads. In India, however, no such tribunal yet exists. All classes are very ready to appeal to the press to support their own views and interests; but let it oppose them on any one point, and no language is copious enough to express the depth and intensity of their contempt. The discontinuance of subscriptions and the withdrawal of advertisements are the favourite mode of encouraging freedom of discussion, occasionally varied, as on Saturday morning, by foul words and fouler blows. It is not in this way, however, that men of education and good social standing will be induced to enter upon the paths of journalism, under any case sufficiently thorny and arduous. No man who has any respect for his character and position will care to adopt a vocation that daily subjects him to uncharitable misconstructions of his acts and motives, and even to personal indignity. Mr. Clay has done all that one person could do to impair the status of the journalist in India, at the same time that he has brought infinite discredit upon himself, which cannot be otherwise than reflected upon the order to which he belongs.

One word more and we have done. Had Mr. Brett declined to accept the apology somewhat tardily tendered by his assailant, the case must have gone before a native magistrate. We have nothing whatever to say in dispraise of the Mahomedan gentleman who administers the law in Sealdah. On the contrary, we believe him to be a man of superior parts and of unspotted character, and as thoroughly impartial as under all circumstances can be reasonably expected. It is therefore not from any feeling of disrespect towards him personally that we demur to his sitting in judgment upon cases of this peculiar description. It is impossible, however, for any Native to enter into the feelings of English gentlemen upon points of honour, or rightly to estimate such an outrage as that which was perpetrated on the Sealdah platform. Besides, it must not be lost sight of that the defendant in this particular instance would have been a member of the Civil Service, and consequently a professed protector of the Natives against the violence and unfavourable judgments of European adventurers, such as newspaper editors and other "low fellows" of that stamp. But beyond all this, with such a rapidly increasing European population as that of the suburbs of Sealdah, it is surely time that an English Police Magistrate were appointed to see prompt and impartial justice done to all ranks and denominations of our misguided countrymen who may have been tempted, under various false pretences, to come out to India.—Hurkaru, Sept. 16.
